UTLOOK DARK FOR COURT PLAN IN COMMITTEE

nator Ashurst Now Says 'Everybody Knew From Start' Group Was Opposed to Bill.

EST MAY COME ON COMPROMISE

Opposition Realizes Best Chance Is in Keeping Bill as It Is—Bailey Replies to Legislature.

y the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Ad- inistration leaders conceded to- ight that there is a strong proba- ility that the Roosevelt court heme will be disapproved by the enate Judiciary Committee.

The trend among uncommitted enators is away from the measure s it stands, although some have ome out for compromise modifica- ons. Leaders of both sides of the ntroversy have expressed opposi- on to any compromise.

The committee begins executive essions on the bill Tuesday.

"Unfavorable committee re- ort will be in no sense a fatal low," said Chairman Ashurst Dem.), Arizona. "Everybody knew om the start that the committee as not for this bill."

Opposition Strategy a Factor.

The bill calls for an increase of ix in the membership of the Supreme Court, unless Justices past 0 retire voluntarily Compromise alk has centered upon an increase f two or three instead.

Legislators expressed certainty hat such an amendment would be ffered by a member of the non- ommittal group, Senator McCar- an (Dem.), Nevada. It is expected o be brought to a vote in the com- ittee, and in this test the strategy f the opposition may prove an mportant factor.

Realizing that their best chance f success lies in holding the bill to s present form, opposition Sena- rs indicated today they would vote gainst all such compromises. The roponents of the Roosevelt bill aid they would do likewise.

The combined votes of proponents nd opposition would be more than ufficient to block any such altera- on in the measure. Thus, the ommittee would come finally to a ote on the bill as it stands.

According to present information, everal of the uncommitted group, hile willing to vote for an in- rease of two, would oppose the in- rease of six. The result would be n unfavorable report on the meas- re.

Possibility of 9-9 Tie.

Another outcome mentioned as possibility is a 9-to-9 tie in the ommittee. This would not be suf- icient, under the Senate's rules, to et the measure out of the com- ittee. Special action to do so ould follow.

The committee, which adjourned even weeks of open hearings yesterday, was in recess until Tuesday when the executive meetings begin.

Meanwhile, Judge William Denman of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, who has been credited with originating part of the bill's provisions for more Judges for the ower courts, called at the White House. He told reporters he was paying a courtesy visit before returning to San Francisco.

Senator Bailey's Letter.

Another development was a letter which Senator Bailey (Dem.), North Carolina, addressed to the Legislature of his State setting forth his reasons for opposing the measure. His communication was in response to a resolution calling upon all members of Congress from North Carolina to support the bill.

"If the powers reserved to the State of North Carolina ought to be impaired," he wrote, "if the rights reserved to the people of North Carolina, as individuals, are to be abridged, if the powers of the President or Congress ought to be increased, there is a way provided, and that way is the submission of an amendment to the Constitution for ratification by State conventions or State Legislatures."

He said he could not "conceive of a worse way" than that proposed by the President.

Justice in Pit of Politics.

"It is not only that it violates the Democratic party's platform as approved and accepted by the people; that it is opposed to the spirit of the constitution and would tend to dilute the virtue of that great instrument; that it would undermine the independence of the

French Workers and Employers Both Hammering at Blum

Labor Demands Works Program Under Threat of General Strike—Capital Talks of Lockouts if 40-Hour Week Is Imposed.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 24.—Labor representatives today threatened a general strike if their demands were not met by the Blum Government, while some employers spoke of the possibility of lockouts if the Government acceded further to labor's requests.

Leon Jouhaux, secretary of the General Confederation of Labor, announced union workers were ready to "impose" demands upon the Government that it devote 10,000,000,000 francs ($444,000,000) to a public works program to relieve unemployment.

Blum has said he would resign rather than make such an outlay.

Jouhaux told a mass meeting of building trades workers at Vincennes that the Premier must take money from banks and insurance companies to finance the program.

Dock workers demanded that wharves remain idle two days each week. Unionized newspaper printing employes were seeking to halt publication of newspapers on two days each week.

The dispute is having its effect on Paris' International Exposition, which is scheduled to open May 1, but probably will not open until May 17. Construction at the exposition site still was lagging. In some quarters this was regarded as labor's club over the Government, which does not want the exposition spoiled by a strike.

Blum has told the Labor Federation the Treasury could not stand additional public works expenditures. Some financial experts, asserting half of the eight billion francs March defense loan has been spent, also believed the nation might face an empty treasury by June.

On the employer side, despite expectations of big exposition business, hotel keepers and cafe associations served notice they would close if the Government applied the 40-hour week to them. They declared they would not be able to compete with other countries for tourist business.

Representatives of big industry were touring the country to pledge employers to a "stop labor" movement.

Industry and conservatives in general pictured the country "in the throes of revolution."

Some informed Frenchmen predicted the bitterest struggle between capital and labor since Aristide Briand broke up the railway and postal strikes in 1910.

The Government is not believed likely to fall in Parliament, which reconvenes Tuesday, but Blum is being heavily attacked in his own ranks. The Premier has let the workers know that continued dissension might force the People's Front Government to resign.

STATUE ACCEPTED AFTER 50-YEAR DISPUTE, UNVEILED

Paul Revere Model by Sculptor Dallin, Now 74, to Be Cast in Bronze.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, April 24.—Simple ceremonies today marked the unveiling of a life-size clay model of Cyrus Dallin's statue of Paul Revere, designed by the sculptor as a youth but accepted only after half a century of controversy.

Gov. Hurley, speaking at the unveiling exercises on the Charles River esplanade, termed the ceremony a vindication of Dallin.

The sculptor, now 74 years old, called the Paul Revere statue his "swan song." "More than half a century ago," he said simply, "I began this work. Today I consider it my last work, my best work."

The statue, soon to be cast in bronze, shows Paul Revere astride the steed on which he "spread the alarm through every Middlesex village and farm" that the "British are coming."

Dallin designed his statue of Paul Revere in 1884 and with it won a competition sponsored by the Boston Art Commission. It won first prize twice but the money to cast it was never raised, because of a jealous competitor, Dallin said.

Present at today's unveiling was 12-year-old Paul Revere Auerhamer of Brookline, great-great-grandson of the patriot.

SON OF SCOTT FIELD COMMANDANT KILLED

Falls From Plane in Texas, Hits Tail—'Chute Carries Down Body.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DALLAS, Tex., April 24.—Lieut. Robert S. Fisher, army pilot and son of Col. Arthur G. Fisher, commandant of Scott Field, near St. Louis, was killed this afternoon when he fell from the cockpit of an airplane and struck the tail of the ship near Pilot Point, Tex. His parachute opened as he fell and his body floated 4000 feet to earth.

Lieut. D. Ross Ellis, a reserve officer flying as observer with Fisher, took out the rear seat controls and, although the rudder was partially jammed, piloted the ship 50 miles to Hensley Field, Dallas. He and Major B. S. Thompson, Hensley Field commandant, returned to Pilot Point and took charge of the body.

Major Thompson said Lieut. Fisher, who was stationed at Randolph Field, San Antonio, apparently leaned too far from the cockpit and fell out.

Lieuts. Fisher and Ellis were on the way from Randolph Field to Oklahoma City on a practice flight and had refueled at Hensley Field about 25 minutes before the accident.

Lieut. Fisher, 27 years old, was born in the Philippine Islands. He was commissioned in the Air Corps Reserve after graduation from the army flying school at San Antonio in 1932 and was appointed a second lieutenant in the regular army in 1935. Besides his father, who took command of Scott Field two months ago, Lieut. Fisher is survived by his wife, his mother, a brother, Lieut. Henry B. Fisher of the Air Corps, stationed at Selfridge Field, Mich., and a sister, Miss Mary Fisher of Scott Field.

ANN HARDING LANDS IN CANADA AFTER WARRANT IS ANNULLED

Movie Actress Arrives 24 Hours Later With Daughter She Was Accused of Kidnaping.

QUEBEC, April 24 (Canadian Press).—Ann Harding, stage and movie actress, arrived here unexpectedly from England today just 24 hours after a Quebec Judge had annulled a warrant for her arrest on a kidnaping charge. Accompanied by her husband, Werner Janssen, and her 9-year-old daughter, Jane, Miss Harding boarded a train almost immediately after landing from the liner Duchess of Atholl. It was understood she was bound for New York.

It was Jane the actress was accused of kidnaping in the warrant her former husband and Jane's father, Harry Bannister, procured here almost a year ago in an effort to prevent Miss Harding from taking her daughter to England. The warrant was annulled yesterday by Judge Laetere Roy, who issued it originally. It was never served, for Miss Harding eluded police last May by switching ships at the last minute.

She and Janssen, composer and orchestra conductor, were married in London last Jan. 17.

COUNTY INCOMES 64 PCT. MORE THAN THE TOTAL IN 1935

Amount Subject to State Tax in 1936, $52,100,000—Increase in Number of Returns Was 38 Pct.

GAIN IN ST. LOUIS LESS IN SAME TIME

Corporation Returns Also Larger and More Numerous in Proportion Than Those in the City.

Continued concentration of the higher income groups in St. Louis County was emphasized by a report issued at Clayton yesterday showing that 14,817 residents of the county subject to State income tax had in 1936 aggregate taxable income of $52,147,647. This compares with 41,127 individual returns in the city of St. Louis reporting aggregate taxable income of $86,808,825. The city's population is nearly four times that of the county.

The average was $3519 in the county and $2110 in the city. The increase in taxable income in the county was 64 per cent compared with the total in 1935, a much greater ratio of increase than the gain of 28 per cent reported for individual taxable income in the city.

A summary of the county returns as filed with Assessor Martin L. Neaf was made public by County Clerk Walter E. Miller at Clayton. City figures were reported earlier by Assessor Ralph W. Coale.

In 1935, individual returns by 10,969 county residents reported taxable income aggregating $31,807,615. The gain in number of individual returns for 1936 was only 38 per cent, showing that the number of taxpayers did not increase as rapidly as the amount of income which increased 64 per cent; or that those already in the income tax paying class were the chief beneficiaries of the additional income. A like situation was evident in the city where the increase in number of taxpayers was only 13 per cent compared with the gain of 28 per cent in taxable income.

The amount of tax due on the 1936 income in the county is $1,202,364 compared with $686,062 assessed on the 1935 income, an increase of 75 per cent.

There were 212 corporation returns in the county for 1936 compared with 166 for 1935. They reported taxable income of $2,653,634, a gain of 64 per cent over the 1935 figure of $1,623,955.

The tax payable on the 1936 corporation income was $52,727 compared with $32,143 in 1935.

Corporations in City.

Returns by 2377 corporations in the city showed 57 per cent increase in aggregate taxable income, a ratio of gain almost equal to that in the county. The 1936 income was $44,138,488 and for 1935 it was $28,052,704.

As there were no changes in provisions of the State income tax law, the increases were attributed by tax officials to increased volume of business and greater employment and earnings of individuals.

Combined figures for city and county are: Individual returns, 55,944; individual taxable income, $138,956,472; individual tax total, $3,093,239; corporation returns, 2589; corporation taxable income, $46,792,122; corporation tax total, $923,086. The total tax due the State from both sources in city and county is $4,016,325.

The tax is payable in a lump sum in May and becomes delinquent if not paid on or before June 2.

NAZIS DISFRANCHISE WIFE OF NOVELIST FEUCHTWANGER

36 in All Deprived of Citizenship; Her Husband on Previous List.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 4.—Martha Loeffler Feuchtwanger, wife of the novelist, Lion Feuchtwanger, was listed today abong 36 persons deprived of their citizenship.

Feuchtwanger, author of "Power" ("Jew Suess"), "The Oppermans," "Ugly Duchess," "Success" and other novels, lost his German citizenship in August, 1933, because his behavior was held officially to have "harmed German interests."

The list of those disfranchised, published in the Official Gazette today, also included the wives of the former Social Democratic leaders, Rudolf Breitscheid and Rudolf Hilferding. Hilferding was Finance Minister in the Stresemann Cabinet. Frau Toni Breitscheid was an advocate of votes for women.

FEDERAL INQUIRY TO BE EXTENDED AT KANSAS CITY

New Grand Jury Not Only to Continue Vote Fraud Work but Go Into Other Law Violations.

'JUST GETTING UNDER WAY,' JUDGE SAYS

Retiring Jurors Praised for 'Great Service'—18 More Indicted, Bringing Total to 126.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 24.—A Federal grand jury with "plenary powers" will be chosen May 4 to continue the investigation into corrupt voting conditions here initiated by a jury discharged at the end of the term today after indicting 126 persons on vote fraud conspiracy charges.

The next jury, which will be impanelled by United States District Judge Merrill E. Otis, will be empowered not only to investigate election practices but to inquire into all types of law violations falling in the scope of Federal stautes.

A great deal of additional vote fraud evidence, it was learned today, has been accumulated by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and will be submitted to the jurors. Other matters which may be considered by the new jury include further inquiry into W P A payrolls and reports that pressure has been brought to bear to retard the Federal investigation of illicit election tactics.

"Just Getting Under Way."

United States District Judge Albert L. Reeves, who initiated the investigation Dec. 14, last, with the command to "move on them" and who discharged the jury today said that the investigation was "just getting under way" and that indications were it would prove citywide. He could have issued a special order enabling the jury to continue its work into the next term but had he done so its activities would have been confined to the election investigation.

"We desired a jury with plenary powers," Judge Reeves said, "for I understand that there is a great deal of varied evidence to be considered. Besides, the jury discharged today has performed outstanding work for four months and manifested citizenship of the highest order."

The fall term jury returned 18 additional vote fraud indictments prior to its discharge today involving precinct officials and party workers, including some representing precincts in downtown sections regarded as machine strongholds. More than half of the 126 persons indicted have yet to be tried. There have been six trials, 32 convictions, and no acquittals. Eight other defendants who pleaded "no contest" were placed on probations. A jury in the first trial could not agree on three persons. They will be tried again. Eighteen persons have been sentenced to prison, eight to jail, and six have received suspended jail sentences.

Comment by Judge Reeves.

In discharging the jury Judge Reeves observed:

"What you have initiated will go on. You have opened the way. You have fired the first guns. As a result of your labors there will be a new sense of importance of ballots and of the value of the election franchise."

Despite disclosure of "shocking situations," the Judge said that the jury has but touched the "high points" of violations of the ballot. Referring to reports attempts had been made to hamper the investigation, he warned that "there is a law which forbids individuals from throwing themselves between the grand jury and those who might testify."

Judge Reeves referred to the work of the jury as "one of the greatest services in the history of the Western District of Missouri" and added:

"In this time of tension among nations, when new dictators are bobbing up it is a happy thought that you men have said, in effect, that the people shall rule—not a dictator."

Names of Those Indicted.

New indictments returned today were: Fourteen, Precinct, Eleventh Ward—John P. Lynch and Lillie Current, Democratic judges; Jack Cole and Edna Green, Republican judges; Esther Halbert, Democratic clerk, and Evelyn Parker, Republican clerk.

Third Precinct, Twelfth Ward—Louis Depasco and Zula Brennar,

Actress-Bride Who Killed Herself

MRS. JAMES MONT,
Known on Stage as Helen Kim.

PARTY GUESTS FIND BRIDE HAS ENDED LIFE

Actress Dead in New York Apartment From Gas, Wed Month Ago.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—A hostess who had made plans for 100 guests at a cocktail party, died of illuminating gas tonight in the kitchen of her apartment as her guests—invited by chain letters—arrived in the lobby below.

The hostess, Mrs. Helen Mont, 25-year-old actress and bride of a month, failed to answer the bell when the first of her guests arrived, and the apartment superintendent unlocked the door. Guided by the odor of gas, he walked past tables, already set for the cocktail party, to the kitchen.

There he found Mrs. Mont, unconscious, a gas tube from the stove in her mouth. She was clad only in a slip, silk stockings, and shoes. While an emergency squad worked to revive her, and finally pronounced her dead, the party guests waited in the apartment lobby.

Police said Mrs. Mont had quarreled with her husband over her party. He is James Mont, an interior decorator. Her death was listed as suicide.

Mont was in his studio, just off Fifth Avenue, when his wife's body was found.

Mrs. Mont had called her cocktail party "a mystery cocktail party," and warned her guests "not to talk about sending or receiving this letter."

In an invitation to one friend she wrote: "It will be the most unusual and amusing one ever held in New York. Make two copies of this letter immediately and mail them to two friends."

The party guests, many more than could have been accommodated in the Monts' three-room apartment, jammed the apartment house lobby until doormen notified latecomers the party "has been called off."

The actress was married previously to Randolph Joseph Thomson, an English playwright. A few minutes after annulment of the first marriage, on March 28 of this year, she married Mont, Turkish-born designer of furniture. They had planned a June honeymoon in Paris.

Known on the stage as Helen Kim, Mrs. Mont appeared in "Roar China,"—a Broadway play of about six years ago — and "The Gilded Princess." She was widely known, also, as a radio entertainer.

DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME GOES INTO EFFECT TODAY

Clocks Moved Forward an Hour at 2 A. M. in Many Communities in 17 States.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 25.—Nearly one-third of the population of the United States moved their clocks forward an hour today as daylight saving time went into effect in many communities.

The advanced time became effective at 2 a. m. and will remain in effect until the last Sunday in September. It is being observed to a greater or lesser extent, in 17 states.

BAKER HEADS NEW CIVIL RULE IN MADRID

Leads Council of Civilians Succeeding Miaja, Who Will Give Full Time to War.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, April 24.—A Socialist baker and 32 other civilian anti-Fascists took over workaday Madrid today from the military hands of Gen. Jose Miaja and restored civil rule to a city still under the guns of insurgent siege.

The new man who will grapple with Madrid's civil problems is 45-year-old Rafael Henche de la Plata, once head of the bakers' union and for 20 years an important Socialist politician in Madrid.

He was elected head of the new municipal council of 33 members following an unexpected order from Premier Francisco Largo Caballero at Valencia, which, in effect, directed Miaja to spend all his time fighting the insurgents.

For nearly six months the general has been directing the fight against insurgent armies in Madrid's suburbs and elsewhere, but also has had to deal with the problem of feeding and keeping in order a shell-battered city of one million persons.

"I am just a soldier," Miaja has said. Hence the order from Largo Caballero, defining Miaja's functions "strictly" as those of "chief of military operations in the Madrid sector," and setting up a civil assembly, or "ayuntamiento" to replace Miaja's defense junta, which was dissolved, meant this:

The Government is assuring Madrid that it is not going to have permanent military dictatorship. At the same time, all of Miaja's energies are needed to whip back the insurgents who still are on the edges of the city and to conduct the war, now in its tenth month.

The new city council is dominated by a Socialist-Communist coalition, but all members belong to Popular Front parties—those parties which joined to elect a Leftist Government in the general elections of February, 1936, five months before the civil war was begun by the defeated, or Rightist, elements.

Anarchist and Syndicalist groups have six representatives in all, while there are 18 Socialists and Communists; the others are from small republican and labor organizations.

Henche was unanimously elected head of the council as it met in the civil governor's palace. The members voted expressions of gratitude to Miaja and his junta.

MISTAKE IN GUFFEY COAL BILL

"Are" Where "or" Should Be but Measure Goes to Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The new Guffey-Vinson coal control bill is likely to go on the statute books with a typographical error in it.

The engrossed bill, as sent to President Roosevelt for signature, contained an "are" where an "or" should have been. But legislators decided that the meaning was plain and so suggested that the President sign it that way, instead of sending it back to Congress. He must sign by Thursday, else the bill becomes dead.

REBELS BREAK BASQUE LINE, PRESS NEARER TO DURANGO

Occupation of Strategic Village Three Miles From 'Gateway City' to Bilbao and Capture of 1000 Prisoners Reported.

MORE FOOD SHIPS TO RISK BLOCKADE

Three on Way to Besieged City, Trailed by British Cruiser, and Others Prepare to Follow—Wheat Ground for Inhabitants.

By the Associated Press.

HENDAYE, France, April 24. — The Basque line has been broken on a 15-mile front, an insurgent communique said tonight, and almost the entire area between two of the main points southeast of Durango—Mondragon and Vergara—has been occupied.

Gen. Emilio Mola's left wing, under Col. Camilo Alonso, drove ahead today to outflank the defending militiamen and brought Durango at one point under the fire of his machine guns, officers report.

The communique stated that two "contraband freighters" were damaged seriously by insurgent flyers who bombed the port of Bilbao. Their nationality was not given.

Thwarted in the effort to starve Bilbao into submission, the insurgents are pressing their land attack to take the Basque capital by force. Pushing their drive through mountain crags that provide a natural barrier to Bilbao, Gen. Mola's forces are reported within three miles of Durango, "gateway" city to the Basque capital, at one point. Durango is 16 miles southeast of Bilbao on a broad plain.

Report on Village Taken.

An insurgent broadcast from Salamanca differed somewhat in details from the communique. The broadcast announced an advance to heights 18 miles southeast of Bilbao. Insurgents occupied the strategic village of El Orrio, it said, and heights three miles from Durango. Basque lines were broken in El Gueta sector and retreating troops were declared to be fleeing, pursued by their enemy. Officers at insurgent headquarters at Vitoria announced 1000 prisoners were taken when El Orrio fell.

The Basques, in their communique, admitted there was "heavy pressure" from the insurgents at El Orrio and El Gueta but said their forces were "defending their ground inch by inch.

Italian troops—who have seen little action since their disastrous rout on the Guadalajara front last month—are reported to have been shifted to the northern front to bolster the insurgents' push.

Insurgent officers yesterday said 1500 Italian troops who arrived at San Sebastian, Spain, 48 miles from the Biscayan battlefront, were regular Italian army artillerymen. (Officials in Rome asserted the troops were merely volunteers who had been in Spain for some time.)

More Food Ships Sail.

Encouraged by the success of three food-laden British freighters in reaching famished Bilbao yesterday, three others sailed today from La Rochelle, France, trailed by the British cruiser Shropshire. They will be given full protection against insurgent war vessels blockading the Biscayan coast until they reach the Spanish three-mile limit.

The three now on their way with food are the Thorpehall, which was reported at St. Jean de Luz, the Stesso and the Thurston. The Marvia and the Sheaf Field, two other British ships now loading, are expected to follow. Still others are preparing at Gibraltar for similar dashes.

A French ship, which some reports identified as the Dairiguerre, reached Santander, Spain, west of Bilbao, with a food cargo.

Penetration of the insurgent ring of blockade ships solved the problem of feeding the city's 400,000 people, part of them refugees.

Bread will be distributed as soon as millers grind 4000 tons of wheat which arrived yesterday. Rations of potatoes, rice, beans, sugar and fish will be supplied Wednesday.

DISPUTE TIES UP NEUTRALITY BILL IN CONFERENCE

Pittman-McReynolds Controversy May Prevent Enactment Before Present Law Expires May 1.

NO DIFFERENCES ON FUNDAMENTAL POLICY

Important Issues Said to Be Settled With Disagreement Based on Form of Report.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—A dispute between House and Senate conferees threatened today to prevent enactment of permanent neutrality legislation before the present law expires May 1.

The permanent measure has passed both chambers but in different form, and legislators have been trying to settle their differences in conference. Informed persons said the conferees have agreed on all of the important issues, but are at odds on the form of their report.

A conflict has developed between Chairman Pittman (Dem.), Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Chairman McReynolds (Dem.), Tennessee, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, colleagues said.

None of the conferees would discuss the matter beyond saying the dispute between the authors of the House and Senate bills does not involve differences on fundamental policy.

President's Southern Trip.

The disagreement became serious, however, when the conferees recessed over the weekend without reaching an agreement. President Roosevelt, whose signature is necessary to enact legislation, leaves for a Southern vacation Tuesday night. Chairman Pittman was discussing the idea of extending the temporary law if an agreement could not be reached on the permanent law in time to obtain the President's signature before he leaves.

Early last week, conferees said, an agreement was reached on the important controversies between the two houses. But they added that the conflict between Pittman and McReynolds became so serious that attempts to work out a final accord were almost abandoned.

The agreement calls for abandonment of the Senate's mandatory "cash and carry" system, in favor of the House provision to give the President discretionary authority to invoke the drastic isolation policy.

Under the "cash and carry" system foreign belligerents could obtain American goods only by taking title to them before they left American shores.

House Yielded on One Step.

The House yielded to the Senate to make the prohibition against American travel on belligerent ships mandatory, and agreed to include the Senate's provision against arming American merchant vessels engaged in trading with belligerents.

Many legislators agreed such a conference agreement would be almost certain to run into trouble in the Senate. The old munitions committee bloc there has consistently fought for a mandatory "cash and carry" plan.

Two more vote fraud trials will be conducted by Judge Reeves the week of May 17 and others are on the docket of Judge Otis in June.

NAZI-CONDEMNED JEW DESPAIRS OF U. S. HELP

Convicted of Treason in Plotting to Assassinate High German Official.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 24.—Helmuth Hirsch, 21-year-old Jew for whom United States consular authorities have interceded, appeared resigned tonight to die for what he considered to be a "cause"—a plot to assassinate a high German official, possibly Chancellor Hitler.

Hirsch, who is a United States citizen because his grandfather was a naturalized American, talked with United States Consul Raymond H. Geist in Ploetzensee prison today. He told the Consul he had no hope of escaping the death penalty.

Dr. Volk, the prosecutor, declined to divulge the exact nature of Hirsch's offense, but informed sources said the death sentence had been pronounced on charges he intended to use explosives in an attempt to assassinate a high Government official, presumably Hitler.

These sources also expressed belief that a recent speech by Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, warning against terroristic activities, pointed to Hirsch. Goering on March 16 warned those who "believe, perhaps, as a last resort, that they can overpower Germany by murder or cowardly assassinations." "Woe to him who there plays with fire," Goering said. "Not only he, not only a number—all those who are of this view and this spirit will burn to cinders!"

Hitler has not yet considered Hirsch's clemency plea.

The United States Consul entered the case after it was learned Hirsch was an American citizen. He did so on instructions from Washington, where Secretary of State Hull said today everything possible would be done to save Hirsch's life.

The prisoner's grandfather, Solomon Hirsch, was naturalized in New York April 4, 1873. This made American citizens of the youth's father, Siegfried, born at Winterburg, Czechoslovakia, June 25, 1878, and so of himself, born at Stuttgart, Germany, Jan. 27, 1916. Hirsch's father, who resided in the United States from 1902 to 1910, went to Alsace and later to Germany, and now is in Praha, Czechoslovakia.

Police arrested young Hirsch Dec. 20, when he arrived at a Berlin hotel from Praha.

Father in Praha Sure Youth Did Not Plot Any Assassination.

By the Associated Press.

PRAHA, Czechoslovakia, April 24.—Siegfried Hirsch, father of the student who faces death on a treason charge in Germany, pinned hopes for his son's life today on United States intervention. He said he was certain his son never had schemed at assassination of Hitler or any other German and added: "All he told me when he went to Berlin last December was that he was going to attend to some personal matter."

The boy had been a student at a technical high school here and never had been politically active, the father said. Hirsch, Senior, a gray-haired merchant, lives in a villa in a fashionable Praha suburb with his daughter, Kaethe.

GENERAL MOTORS AGREEMENT WITH WINDSOR PLANT WORKERS

Employes to Return to Jobs Tomorrow; Minimum Wage Is Fixed.

By the Associated Press.

WINDSOR, Ontario, April 24.—General Motors officers and representatives of the 550 employes of the company's Windsor plant reached an agreement tonight under which the workers will return to their jobs Monday.

The accord followed closely the agreement signed in Toronto yesterday settling the strike of 3700 workers at the General Motors plant at Oshawa. The Windsor employes had not been on strike. The plant here makes motors for the Oshawa assembly line, and they were laid off when the strike began at Oshawa.

It was understood the Windsor pact differed from that for Oshawa in the fixing of a minimum wage of 55 cents an hour instead of definite wage increases. New wage scales, however, are to be considered next week.

Homer Martin, president of the U. A. W. A., told 1000 General Motors employes at Oshawa today the agreement there was "a complete victory for the International Union of Automobile Workers and for the Committee for Industrial Organization."

INSURGENTS BREAK BASQUE LINE, PRESS NEARER TO DURANGO

The vessel carried supplies bought by British trade unions along with a contribution from David Lloyd George, former Prime Minister.

The three Laborite M. P.'s who changed their minds about trying to prove there was no blockade of Bilbao by Spanish insurgents were Wilford Roberts, William Dobbie and Seymour Cocks.

Madrid Free From Fascist Shelling First Time in 13 Days.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, April 24.—The insurgents refrained from shelling Madrid today for the first time in 13 days. Wary residents, however, sped across the streets and kept off the main avenues, never quite sure the artillery attack would not be resumed.

More than 250 persons were killed and vast damage was done in downtown sections by the 12 days of shellfire.

Official reports said there was virtual quiet on all of Spain's war fronts with the exception of the Bilbao district on the north coast. There the autonomous Basque government insisted insurgent drives toward the important port city had been checked.

Students Rescued at College Fire.

By the Associated Press.

QUINCY, Mass., April 24.—Firemen rescued two young Eastern Nazarene College students from a narrow coping, high above the street, on Munro Hall, girl's dormitory, at the college tonight. The students, Vernon Babcock of New York and Howard Andred of Pittsburgh, had hurried with fire extinguishers to the dormitory's fourth floor to fight a fire. Dense smoke drove them out a window. The blaze, of undetermined origin, caused $3000 damage.

TEMPORARY TRUCE AFTER CANNERY RIOT

California Assembly Investigators Make Secret Report to Governor.

By the Associated Press.

STOCKTON, Cal., April 24.—Peace continued tonight in Stockton's cannery strike pending mediation efforts following the fight between pickets and deputies yesterday in which 63 persons were wounded.

An Assembly investigating committee reported to Gov. Merriam after making a survey of the Stockton area, but details were not divulged.

"I will use 5000 deputies instead of 500 if there is further trouble," Sheriff Harvey Oddel said.

Odell was reported to have received offers of assistance from sheriffs of four neighboring counties. Sheriff Grat Hogin of Stanislaus County offered 2000 men. Odell also still had 700 residents of the Stockton area armed with pick handles.

Only a handful of deputies remained on duty at the cannery, and the union maintained a skeleton picket force on the strength of the agreement of cannery operators not to attempt to reopen their plants pending further peace efforts.

Ten of the injured remained in hospitals.

Stockton liquor stores, closed for several days because of the tension, were reopened with the permission of State officials.

Complicating the union situation, C. C. Nunnally, secretary of the Stanislaus County Central Labor Council, announced formation of a new union of cannery workers and said a majority of the Stockton employes had joined it.

SINKING SCHOONER'S CREW OF 7 TAKEN OFF BY STEAMER

British Craft Has Six Feet of Water in Hold When Boat Goes to Rescue.

NORFOLK, Va., April 24.—The crew of seven men of the British schooner Charles and Vernon were taken off their sinking craft, six miles off Winter Quarter Light, this afternoon by the Ford Motor Co.'s steamer Lake Ormoc, a message received here by the Coast Guard said. The Lake Ormoc will land the men here.

The Charles and Vernon was reported en route from Philadelphia to La Havre, Nova Scotia, with coal. When sighted by the Lake Ormoc, it had six feet of water in the hold and was said to be sinking rapidly. The steamer came up with the schooner after sighting distress signals and the crew was taken off in half an hour.

BROWN SHOE CO. ASKED TO OBEY N L R B DECISION

Bajork Confers With Company Officers on Reinstating Certain Workers at Salem (Ill.) Factory.

ANOTHER MEETING WILL BE HELD

Union Representatives at Wagner Plant Discuss Employe Representation With Director.

John A. Bush, president of the Brown Shoe Co., conferred yesterday with Leonard C. Bajork, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, on a request for compliance by the company with a decision of the N L R B at Washington last June holding that the firm was guilty of unfair labor practices in its Salem (Ill.) factory Bajork said a second conference would be held.

Bush was accompanied by Ethan A. Shepley, attorney who defended the company at a hearing here in December, 1935. Albert L. Schweitzer, attorney for the Shoe Workers' Union, who assisted in prosecution of the charges, also attended the meeting. The renewed request for compliance followed the recent Supreme Court decision holding the Wagner Act constitutional.

The N L R B, in its decision, ordered the shoe company to cease interference with union organization, to reinstate workers who struck in October, 1935, and to re-employ three women who said they were discharged for union activity. The decision reversed the finding of the trial examiner, Dean Alphonse Eberle of St. Louis University Law School, who held the workers had not been discriminated against.

Union Won't Vote at Wagner Plant.

Representatives of union employes of the Wagner Electric Corporation conferred with Bajork yesterday on the question of employe representation.

The company announced its consent to an election to determine whether a majority of its 3600 production workers want C I O representation, but has no authority to petition for a vote. William Sentner, organizer for the United Electrical and Radio Workers' Union, informed Bajork that the union, which is pushing organization of Wagner employes, would not ask for an election until charges of unfair labor practices filed against the company by employes have been disposed of.

Bajork returned to St. Louis yesterday from Kansas City after holding the first Labor Board election on employe representation in this regional area.

A. F. of L. Union Wins.

Employes of the Chapman Dairy Co. of Kansas City voted 67 to 41 for representation in collective bargaining by the International Association of Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers, an A. F. of L. union. The election was held in the Kansas City Courthouse with the consent of the company, which furnished its payroll records as a check on voters.

Bajork stated that a previous election by the same employes, held under company auspices on company premises, resulted in a majority vote against union representation.

"The results of the two elections demonstrate that it is impossible for workers, fearful of discharge, to express their true sentiments when handed a ballot by a foreman or other superior," Bajork declared. "Many employers are being misled into believing there is little union sentiment in their plants as a result of company-conducted elections."

St. Louis Car Co. Head to Address Mass Meeting of Strikers.

Edwin B. Meissner, president of the St. Louis Car Co., will address a mass meeting of striking employes tomorrow night to explain details of a second company proposal to end the strike called at his plant on March 30 by a C I O union.

The 730 striking employes rejected an earlier proposal offering union recognition, a 5 per cent increase in hourly wages and a reduction in hours from 49½ a week to 44. The workers, organized under the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, are demanding wage increases ranging from 20 to 40 per cent.

Meissner, after presenting his proposal for settlement to a union committee at his offices, 8000 North Broadway, yesterday, asked permission to addres sthe mass meeting. The union executive committee subsequently granted his request to talk to the strikers at North St. Louis Turner Hall, Twentieth and Salisbury streets, at 8 o'clock tomorrow night.

Meissner and John Doherty, C I O organizer, refused to discuss details of the proposed settlement. Doherty stated, however, that the terms were much more favorable than those offered in the first proposal.

'BRYAN DYNASTY' NEAR END AFTER HALF A CENTURY

'Brother Charley,' Last of Family in Politics, Soon to Retire as Mayor of Lincoln.

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Neb., April 24.—The "Bryan dynasty" will bow its way out of American politics three weeks from tomorrow for the first time in half a century. On that day Mayor Charles W. Bryan will leave office.

His brother, the late William Jennings Bryan, began the "dynasty" in the 1890's. Since then at least one Bryan has held office or has been a candidate in almost every important national or Nebraska State election.

The recent retirement from public life of his niece, Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde, left the Mayor the last member of his family in public office. Best known as "Brother Charley" because of his close association with William Jennings before the latter's death, he has been Governor of his home State three times—a Nebraska record—Democratic nominee for Vice-President of the United States, candidate for U. S. Senator and twice Mayor of Lincoln.

The organization, the police said, had secret agents in every town and village in the frontier region.

AIR AND SEA DRIVE TO 'CAPTURE' OAHU

Fleet Tries to Land Infantry in Face of Island Defenders' Fire in War Game.

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, April 24.—The United States fleet opened a concerted air and sea drive to "capture" the Island of Oahu at 4:15 p. m. today.

Many planes from the aircraft carriers and battleships engaged in the war games flew over Honolulu and theoretically bombed Pearl Harbor and other ports.

Battleships, cruisers and destroyers attempted to land infantry in the face of a strong imaginary fire from army guns.

Planes engaged in a spectacular dogfight as the army took to the air to fight off the attackers.

Defending army planes earlier had found the main body of the fleet as it moved toward Honolulu.

Defense headquarters announced their planes "successfully bombed" some of the warships.

Civilians awaited with interest and a little uncertainty the theoretical destruction of Honolulu, which the defending force of 20,000 admitted it was powerless to halt. The enemy fleet seized Hawaii Island yesterday after theoretically destroying Hilo, second city of the archipelago.

Defense planes went out early in the day on patrol duty in search of the approaching 111 warships carrying more than 400 fighting planes.

By the Associated Press.

FLINT, Mich., April 24.—A group of General Motors employes announced tonight the formation of the Independent Automobile Employes' Association as a union open only to Flint automotive workers.

Leaders said they had been working three weeks and had enrolled more than 6000 workers. They said the body "recognizes the irresponsibility of the C I O because it is not and never has been an incorporated body.

DENHARDT TRIAL JUDGE RULES OUT PEN-PISTOL STORY

Prosecution Unable to Show Defendant Had a Second and Smaller Weapon Than Fatal One

TRUCKMAN ADMITS HE DIDN'T SEE IT

Another Witness Says He Heard but One Shot Instead of Loud One Followed by 'Pop Shot.'

By the Associated Press.
NEW CASTLE, Ky., April 24.—Testimony that there were no powder marks on Mrs. Verna Taylor's clothing and that there were spots, alleged to be blood, on Henry H. Denhardt's heavy overcoat was placed before the jury trying Denhardt for murder here today.

The commonwealth also brought out testimony that the 61-year-old war veteran and former Lieutenant-Governor did not go near the body of his fiancee the night of Nov. 6 when it was found in a roadside ditch, a bullet wound through the body.

Evidence regarding a small pistol, resembling a fountain pen, which the commonwealth wanted to prove Denhardt owned was ruled out, as the witness who described it, Charles Powell, a truckman, could only say Denhardt had told him of the weapon, not that he had seen it.

Witnesses Disagree on Shots.

George Baker, a farmer, had testified he heard a shot such as might come from Denhardt's heavy army pistol which was identifed as the death weapon, and a few minutes later a "pop shot." The commonwealth was overruled today in trying to expunge Baker's statement that "Denhardt could not have killed her because I was with him when the second shot was fired." Another witness today, Preston Carpenter, declared he heard only one shot.

W. Smith Keightley, an undertaker, identified the clothing Mrs. Taylor wore when found dead and declared there were no powder burns or scorches on the articles. On cross-examination, Keightley said he was not familiar with powder burns and could not tell whether certain marks near the wounds on the widow's body were caused by powder.

Coroner D. L. Ricketts testified Denhardt's heavy pistol was found four or five feet from the woman's body. The Coroner's repeated references to spots on Denhardt's coat as blood spots drew a ruling, after defense objections, that he was not competent to say what caused the spots. Circuit Judge Charles G. Marshall reprimanded spectators for laughing when the Coroner next said, "There was blood in the button hole."

Autopsy Physician Testifies.

Dr. H. B. Blaydes, a La Grange physician who helped perform an autopsy on the widow's body, described the holes where the bullet entered the body in front and came out in the back. He also described bruises on the body.

Mrs. Taylor's daughters, Mrs. Mary Taylor Brown, 22, and Frances Taylor, 16, sat tightly clutching hands as their mother's clothing was exhibited to the jury.

During the identification of the clothing, Coroner Ricketts testified Denhardt had told him, "Don't let anybody put any blood on this coat. There isn't any on it now," referring to Denhardt's heavy overcoat. The Coroner added that examination at that time showed spots on it.

Ricketts and Keightley also testified that Denhardt had expressed belief his fiancee committed suicide while walking up the road after the automobile in which she and Denhardt were riding had stalled. The two witnesses also said Denhardt had told them of his love for the woman and said, "I didn't kill her."

Rain Causes Adjournment.

Shortly after 4 o'clock, rain battered so hard on the tin roof of the courthouse that the witnesses could not be heard and court was adjourned until 9 a. m. Monday.

The Commonwealth indicated it would require two or three days more to finish its testimony and defense counsel estimated two or three days for testimony. Arguments were expected to require at least one day, so that the jury, composed of farmers and a filling station attendant, was not expected to get the case until a week from today.

O. E. BERNINGHAUS' DESIGN CHOSEN FOR COURT MURAL

Selected From Among 40 Submitted for New Federal Building at Fort Scott, Kan.

The design for a mural by Oscar E. Berninghaus, St. Louis artist, has been selected from among 40 submitted for the new postoffice and courthouse at Fort Scott, Kan. Berninghaus is one of the pioneers at the Taos (N. M.) artists' colony where he now resides.

The single panel mural, eight feet high and 20 feet long, will be placed in the courtroom opposite the bench. It will illustrate the movement of pioneers across the plains of Kansas in covered wagons and by horseback when Kansas Territory was opened up as a passage to the Northwest.

Berninghaus will be paid $2600 for the work.

MORE DIVORCE, FEWER DAMAGE SUITS, FIRST QUARTER OF YEAR

Record Compares With Like Periods in 1935 and 1936—Jury Costs Lower.

More persons sought divorces and fewer asked for damages during the first three months of this year than in the corresponding periods of the past two years, it was shown yesterday in the quarterly report of Circuit Clerk H. Sam Priest.

Divorce suits for three months this year numbered 877, as compared to 808 in 1936 and 753 in 1935. Only 714 damage suits were filed during the first quarter of 1937, as against 785 in 1936 and 1072 in 1935. The total number of all suits brought in three months this year was 2268, whereas 2303 were filed last year and 2600 the year before in the same period.

During the December and February court terms, 113 damage suits were tried. Damages asked in all the suits amounted to $1,159,268, and total damages awarded were $162,975. Plaintiffs won 45 cases, defendants, 51. Twelve suits were settled after juries had been impaneled and there were five mistrials. The cost of jurors in civil cases for the year ending April 1, during which the central jury system has been in operation, was $56,313, whereas, for the preceding year it was $80,229.

DENIES STORIES OF WOMEN CHARGED WITH EXTORTION

Bondsman Frank Russo Says He Didn't Tell Them They Wouldn't Have to Appear in Court.

Frank Russo, a professional bondsman, 4106 San Francisco avenue, one of the two men who signed bonds for Mrs. Mildred Ford and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Thelma Ford, who were returned here Friday night to face charges of extorting $800 from Henry Heuer, 64-year-old retired carpenter, denied to a Post-Dispatch reporter last night that he or the other bondsman in the case, former Alderman John Neu Jr., had told the women it would be unnecessary for them to appear in court because "everything would be straightened out," as asserted by the two women.

Russo also denied that he and Neu had been paid $300 by the women for their bonds, as they said. Russo declared all he and Neu got was $25 each. The bonds were forfeited when the women failed to appear in the Court of Criminal Correction April 6, but Russo learned that they were in Windsor, Canada, and had them arrested there Monday.

Warrants charging the two women and two men with extorting money from Heuer, who lives at 3120 Providence place, were issued a month ago.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 24.—More than 1000 children participated today in the twentieth biennial convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs.

A chorus of 400 children from the rural schools of Jefferson County, Kentucky, presented Edgar Stillman-Kelley, composer, a musical birthday gift by singing his operetta, "Alice in Wonderland." He was 80 years old April 14.

From Birmingham, Ala., came the Apollo Boys' Choir, which twice has sung before President Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga.

Dr. Nikolai Sokoloff, director of the Federal music project, spoke at a dinner tonight.

FILM TECHNICIANS' NEW UNION

600 at New York Leave International After Disagreement.

NEW YORK, April 24.—About 600 film technicians belonging to the International Alliance of Stage Employes, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, deserted that organization tonight to form an independent union.

John H. Rugge of Jersey City, who was elected president of the independent organization, said its members included employes of Warner Brothers, H. E. R. Film Laboratories, Duo Art, Paramount, Paramount News and numerous small film companies. Refusal of the international union to approve demands of local 669, to which the 600 belonged, was responsible for the new organization, Rugge said.

COLLEGE TRENDS ARE DISCUSSED BY EDUCATORS

One Reduces Professors to Status of "Hired Men," Says Speaker at University Regional Meeting.

PROBLEM OF AGING TEACHER TAKEN UP

Missouri Colleges Cut Pay of Tutors 11 Pct. More Than in Other States, Florence Schaper Says.

Salaries of professors in Missouri colleges have been reduced 11 per cent more than those in other colleges of the United States since 1929, Prof. Florence W. Schaper of Lindenwood College said yesterday at a regional meeting of the American Association of University Professors at Washington University.

The median salary reduction in Missouri colleges was 26 per cent, while that for the whole country was only 15 per cent, she pointed out. Cuts in salary in this state ranged all the way from 10 to 50 per cent, she added.

Only one college made no salary reduction, but hired new faculty members at less than the usual starting wage when there were vacancies. The most drastic cuts were made by junior colleges. Five schools have restored all reductions in pay, but eight have made no restorations at all. About half of the salary reductions on Missouri college faculties have now been restored, Prof. Schaper reported.

The meeting was held in connection with the third annual gathering of the Missouri Academy of Science, which began Thursday and ended yesterday.

On Academic Freedom.

Speaking on current problems of academic freedom in the Mississippi Valley, Prof. Ralph Fuchs of the Washington University School of Law said the dead-letter rule in St. Louis barring public school teachers from joining a union was a "disgrace to the city." He added, however, that it also was a reflection on teachers, since most of them were complacent, seemingly not wishing to be bothered with pleas to join the union.

Prof. Fuchs praised academic freedom at Washington University, questioning, however, whether the faculty should not have a part with the administration in disciplinary matters. He said the recent revocation of scholarships held by three students was done because the disciplinary authorities felt the students had exceeded good taste in their circulars against the Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

The record for academic freedom in Missouri as well, he continued, is one of the best in the United States. There is no movement to adopt repressive legislation and no proposal of a teachers' oath has been made.

Academic freedom carries with it the responsibility not to abuse the privilege by improper utterances in the wrong places, he asserted. He mentioned repressive control over Tulane University by certain elements in New Orleans, recently described in a Post-Dispatch news story, and the failure in Arkansas to pass a bill aimed to repress Commonwealth College, a labor school.

Defining academic freedom, Prof. Joseph D. Elliff of the University of Missouri said it implied principally the necessity of allowing instructors to teach without interference or dictation. "But, a teacher in a religious school has no right to hold his job if he intends to teach that atheism is the best way of life," he added.

Insurance for Faculty.

Dr. Joseph M. Klamon of the Washington University faculty said most colleges were beginning to realize that something must be done for the teacher who has given 20 to 30 of his best years to the institution. Group life insurance, which some are providing, is excellent, but group annuities are not so sure, he declared.

Discussing criteria for the choice of teachers, Edward S. Allen of Iowa State College told about an excellent music teacher who was rejected by one college after another because he was a Catholic. Similarly, he continued, many schools will not hire Jews as teachers. Such intolerance will tend to give students the same views, he asserted.

Women who rise to the status of full professors rarely get the full salary attached to that position, Allen continued. Why many universities are reluctant to hire women was discussed at some length but no conclusions were reached.

Some College Trends.

L. L. Bernard of the sociology faculty of Washington University said one trend today was to reduce professors to the status of "hired men," permitted to say nothing conflicting with the ideas of the board of trustees of the university or its financial backers. Such an institution becomes an instrument of propaganda, he asserted.

Another trend is to bring universities under control of labor unions, which would not result in more academic freedom, Bernard asserted. A third trend is to put guilds of professors in control, which would be no better, he said.

The only true method of determining whether a faculty member is doing his work well is through investigation by a "reporter of fact, not a corporation member," he continued. Men who undertake honestly to do their services properly as teachers should at least have protection if not reward, he added.

The Junior Academy of Science also met yesterday. One of their speakers was David Horner, a student at John Burroughs School, who discussed "The Arc Process." His father, W. W. Horner, consulting engineer, addressed a general session of the Academy Friday on "Co-ordinated Development of Water Control."

YOUTH, 19, ADMITS FATAL STABBING OF MAN, 65

Wounded Victim's Roommate Who Tried to Separate the Combatants.

Harry Weisel, 19-year-old laborer, of 6734 Plateau avenue, admitted yesterday, according to police, that he fatally stabbed Dennis Lawler, 65, with a pocketknife, in a fight Friday night at Lawler's home, 6744 (rear) Nashville avenue. Lawler died yesterday morning, about 12 hours after being taken to City Hospital.

Police quoted Weisel as saying he went to Lawler's home to upbraid him about derogatory remarks he said Lawler made about him, that they got into a fight and he stabbed Lawler when the latter attempted to strike him with a flashlight. Paul Cavanaugh, 21, who lived with Lawler, attempted to separate the combatants and suffered a slight knife wound in the shoulder. He corroborated Weisel's account and was held as a witness for an inquest tomorrow.

HEAVY SNOW BLOCKS ROADS IN VICINITY OF FARGO, N. D.

350 Telephone Poles Down Near Thief River Falls, Minn.; Wind Snaps Trees.

By the Associated Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 24.—Highways were blocked by snow in the vicinity of Fargo, N. D., tonight.

Wind blew down an ice house in St. Bonafacius, Minn., near Lake Minnetonka, destroyed plate-glass windows and snapped off trees in the Pipestone, Minn., area, and combined with snow and sleet to damage wire communications around Fargo and at Miller, S. D.

Roads in Northeastern South Dakota were covered with six inches of snow. It was estimated 350 telephone and telegraph poles near Thief River Falls, Minn., had fallen under the weight of snow, and communications company executives said the situation was growing worse.

ACQUITTED OF MANSLAUGHTER FOR AIDING IN SUICIDE

Farmer Tried at Forsyth, Mo., When Partner in Death Compact Kills Himself.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
FORSYTH, Mo., April 24.—Lelza Herd, 21-year-old Taney County farmer, was acquitted by a jury today of manslaughter. He was tried under a statute which provides a manslaughter charge for assisting in a suicide. Herd said he and Paul Sullenger, 26 years old, agreed to commit suicide together but that he withdrew from the compact and tried to persuade Sullenger not to kill himself. Sullenger, shot himself to death.

Sheriff W. L. Pumphrey, the State's chief witness, said Herd said he and Sullenger were drinking together in Taneyville last August, when they made the suicide pact. They got a rifle at the home of one of Sullenger's brothers and sat down together by the roadside. Suddenly Sullenger said to Herd: "If you haven't enough nerve, I have." He shot himself forthwith.

CHICAGO YOUTH ADMITS KILLING MAN TO GET AUTO

Held Here in Sandwich Shop Robberies, He Confesses Murder — Wanted to Be 'Texas Cowboy.'

FURNACE SHAKER USED ON VICTIM

Companion in Holdups Was 'Present' When Lodging House Keeper Was Beaten to Death.

Andrew Leroy Miller, 19-year-old Chicagoan who longed to be a Texas cowboy, admitted to police here yesterday he had beaten Antone Fallremayer to death in Chicago last month and robbed him of an automobile in which he started to make his way to Texas.

Miller, and Walter Rudy, 18 years old, arrested in a cheap downtown lodging house Friday for holding up attendants in two sandwich shops here, had posed as orphan brothers named Young and said they came from Cincinnati, but admitted their identity yesterday when told that their pictures would be published in Chicago and other cities.

Rudy admitted being present when Miller killed Fallremayer, and told of helping Miller ransack a lodging house which Fallremayer operated in Edison Park, a Chicago suburb. Miller said he clubbed Fallremayer on the head with a furnace shaker when it appeared it would do no good to ask Fallremayer for permission to use his automobile on the trip to Texas.

Miller's Story of Crime.

He had become acquainted with Fallremayer about a year ago, Miller said, when Fallremayer was a customer of a tea and coffee shop where he was employed, and on a previous occasion Fallremayer had permitted him to use his automobile.

"I met Rudy at Harrison and State streets in Chicago Saturday afternoon, March 27," Miller told a Post-Dispatch reporter at Police Headquarters. "We went out to see Fallremayer, intending to borrow his automobile so we could go to Texas.

"There was no one there but the old man and his police dog. He remarked, while we were talking, that he had had a slight accident which dented a fender in his automobile and said he would not let anyone but himself drive it.

Hit Him Twice With Shaker.

"I decided then it was no use to ask to borrow the car. We went down to the basement, where he was killing some pigeons for the next day's meal, and when he stood beside the coal bin, I noticed the furnace shaker. When he stooped down to pick up a pigeon, I grabbed the shaker and hit him on the head.

"He staggered, and I hit him a second time and he fell to the floor. We could hear him groan. I went upstairs and searched for the keys to his automobile. They weren't there, but I took two watches, and two rings. Then we went back to the basement and I found the keys and 75 cents in the old man's pockets."

Rudy stood by, nodding his assent, and occasionally saying "That's right," as Miller told of the robbery and killing. Fallremayer died of the beating the next day.

"If I only knew it was murder I would have given myself up long ago," Miller said. "I didn't know he was dead."

He Abandoned Auto.

He told of driving the automobile until he disabled it by burning out a bearing near Edwardsville, and then walking into St. Louis with Rudy. One of the watches he sold in a saloon at Pontiac for $3, which was spent for gasoline. The other, pawned here, was recovered by police. The two rings, sold for $4 to an old gold dealer here, had been melted.

Miller got a job in a hotel restaurant here soon after his arrival, and Rudy went to work for a grocery in South St. Louis. About a week ago, they said, they started for Texas again, but ran out of money and returned to St. Louis.

They bought two toy pistols at a 10-cent store, and early Thursday held up the waiter in a sandwich shop at 617 South Broadway, robbing him of $29. Early Friday they robbed the manager of a sandwich shop at 2345 Olive street of $12.

They were arrested at 3 a. m. Friday in their room at the Ray Hotel, 117 North Ninth street, by Detectives George Upton, Thomas Ganley and John Shea, canvassing downtown lodging houses on the theory that the sandwich shop robbers might be found in one of them.

$75,000 DAMAGE SUIT OVER FURNITURE POLISH FORMULA

Mrs. Cloma Dodd, Negro, Alleges Mrs. Ruth Haskell and Berthoud Clifford Retained Secret.

Mrs. Ruth Haskell, 4453 West Pine boulevard, and her son-in-law, Berthoud Clifford, 5041 Westminter place, vice-president and treasurer of the Radiant Fuel Corporation, were jointly sued in Circuit Court yesterday by Mrs. Cloma Dodd, Negro, for $75,000. The action is based on damages claimed by the petitioner for alleged retention of a furniture polish formula which she says she originated.

Mrs. Dodd says that in 1933 when she was employed in the Haskell home as a laundress, she entrusted the formula to Mrs. Haskell, who promised to place it in a safe deposit box for safekeeping. Subsequently Mrs. Haskell and Clifford, the petition says, made overtures to the plaintiff, as a result of which Clifford agreed to market the product, known as "I Shine," and pay the plaintiff a royalty, while she agreed to discontinue further sales on her own account. However, Clifford failed to go ahead with the plan, nor has he returned the formula, but informed the plaintiff he destroyed it, the suit sets forth.

Mrs. Dodd charges the defendants have withheld the formula from her. Emanuel Williams, her attorney, said previous to the alleged agreement she realized considerable profit in the sale of the polish.

Clifford denied the allegations and stated there was no basis for the suit. Mrs. Haskell could not be reached.

A second indictment alleges Buxton arranged with Jesse Bledsoe whereby Bledsoe received $21 for eight days' work when he worked only five days and was entitled only to $13.12.

A third indictment names Buxton and Clifford Clayton, alleging that they arranged for Clayton to receive $21 for eight days' work when he worked only five days and was entitled only to $13.12.

FIVE HURT IN FIGHT IN NEWSPAPER STRIKE

LaGuardia Wires Long Island Publisher in New Effort to End Controversy.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia again entered the controversy between the Long Island Daily Press and its striking editorial employes today, after five persons were injured in a clash between police and strike sympathizers in front of the newspaper's office at Jamaica.

In a telegram to William F. Hofmann, publisher of the paper, the Mayor said the controversy "has gone beyond private dispute" and urged the newspaper management to accept the award made earlier this week by a board of arbitration.

In reply, Hofmann sent the following telegram to the Mayor: "Opposition of the arbitration award has been misinterpreted to you. Despite the fact that the wage scale awarded is higher than any other comparable paper in the whole United States and even higher than some metropolitan papers, we have accepted it.

"We also have accepted all terms of the award relative to work week, dismissal bonuses, vacations, overtime, sick leave and other working conditions, including collective bargaining.

"It is our position that the award in part exceeds the power of the arbiters and in part fails to fully consider or pass upon and decide certain issues submitted to them.

"Specifically the award omits to fix the right of the publishers to have control of the policy and the personnel of my newspaper. The strike can be ended immediately if the Guild will clearly recognize my right to manage and will conform to their agreement."

The disorder in front of the newspaper office occurred this morning when police dispersed a crowd which attempted to prevent the mechanical forces from going to work. The printers, it was said, took no part in the fight. Donald Durkin, 19 years old, of Jamaica, suffered a concussion of the brain in the clash. A striking reporter and three policemen were the others treated for injuries. The strike has been in effect for three weeks.

Durkin was arrested later at the hospital on a charge of simple assault filed by Patrolman Dennis J. Dillon. LaGuardia, sitting as chief magistrate in the Jamaica precinct, personally questioned the youth at the hospital, then admitted him to $25 bail.

C I O UNION TO SEEK ELECTION FOR WESTINGHOUSE PLANTS

Wants Labor Board to Determine Who Shall Bargain for East Pittsburgh Workers.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 24.—Alexander Shaw, counsel for the United Electrical and Radio Workers, said today he would recommend to the National Labor Board a Government-supervised election to determine the collective bargaining agency for workers in the East Pittsburgh plants of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.

Westinghouse has been negotiating for several weeks with both the United, an affiliate of the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization, and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor. Both unions claim a majority of the workers.

Westinghouse employes from plants in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts met today to consider asking the concern for conferences to work out an agreement covering all its 47,000 workers.

Attorney Shaw said Westinghouse agreed to recognize his union as the workers' bargaining agency but had declined to sign a contract.

LEWIS AND A. F. OF L. UNIONS LOCK HORNS IN EAST ST. LOUIS

C I O Organization Asks for Vote on Bargaining Agency at Hunter Packing Plant.

Members of the Industrial Butchers' and Laborers' Local 305, a C I O organization among employes of the Hunter Packing Co., National Stockyards, East St. Louis, have requested the National Labor Relations Board here to hold an election at the Hunter plant to determine whether the organization shall be the bargaining agency with the company management, as provided by the Wagner Labor Act.

The request for the election was made, Angelo Verdu, field representative of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, a C I O group, said last night, because the Amalgamated Meat Cutters' and Butchers' Local 534, an A. F. of L. organization, has been conducting a membership campaign in the Hunter plant. Frank Hunter Sr., president of the company, has declined to recognize either union as the bargaining agency until it is determined which of the two groups contains the majority of company employes.

About 520 men are employed at the Hunter plant. The C I O group claims 400 members, and the A. F. of L. organization 200.

POSTAL TELEGRAPH OFFICIALS AND UNION AGENTS DISAGREE

Collective Bargaining Conference at New York Adjourns; No Date Set for Renewal.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—A collective bargaining conference between union representatives and officials of the Postal Telegraph Co. adjourned in disagreement today over what constitutes a bargaining unit under the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

The conference was one of a series which began March 24 when the Commercial Telegraphers' Union presented demands for wage increases and improved working conditions which company officials said would add $3,155,168 annually to its employe expense.

Robert McLaughlin, general manager of the company, announced at the close of today's session that the conferees had been unable to get together on the unit question.

"Our company contains operating, plant, commercial and accounting and credit units," he said. "The question at issue today was whether these should be considered separately, or the entire personnel of the company as one unit. The matter was left in abeyance."

No date was set for a future conference.

KRESGE PICKETING QUESTION BEFORE COURT OF APPEALS

Petition Taken Under Advisement; Union Seeks to Hearing by Judge Moore.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, April 24.—The petition of clerks', waitresses' and cooks' unions for a writ of prohibition to keep the St. Louis Federal Court from hearing the injunction suit of the Kresge Stores against picketing, was taken under advisement today by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. The unions, units of the American Federation of Labor, ask that the Court of Appeals deny jurisdiction to Judge George H. Moore, before whom the Kresge company's suit for an injunction is pending.

Hearing of the Kresge injunction suit against the three unions, to restrain them from picketing the company's store at 522 Washington avenue, was deferred by Judge Moore last Tuesday, after he had ruled that he had jurisdiction in the case. At the same time, the unions withdrew the pickets who had been on duty in front of the store and at the McCrory Corporation store, 425 North Sixth street. The store employes are not striking, but the unions seek to obtain recognition as bargaining agents for the employes.

FORD STRIKERS LEAVE PLANT, PEACEMAKERS ON WAY WEST

Executive and Union Officer to Try to Settle Dispute at Richmond, Cal.

RICHMOND, Cal., April 24.—An officer of the Ford Motor Co. and a union leader were on their way here tonight to iron out a situation involving sitdown strikers, 600 of whom evacuated the big west coast assembly plant today.

The strikers marched out, shouting and smiling as their leaders announced Ford officers would settle a complaint of discrimination against 12 workers.

Frank Slaby, strike leader and local president of the United Automobile Workers, said Ed Hall, international vice-president of the union, and a Ford company executive were en route from Detroit. Slaby said the plant's 1800 workers would return to their jobs Monday pending adjustment of the dispute.

The strikers tied up the Ford plant yesterday afternoon.

LEWISTON, Me., April 24.—A strike in 19 Lewiston-Auburn shoe factories entered its second month tonight with manufacturers still determined they never will deal with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Dr. A. Howard Myers, Labor Relations Board director for New England, said yesterday that unless operators agreed to a joint conference he would call hearing on union charges owners had violated the Wagner Act by refusing to bargain collectively.

In a prepared statement today Dr. Myers said he was "not an enforcement officer, nor do I act as a judge," but pointed out that if in his investigatory capacity he could "assist in establishment of a situation in which the causes for the allegation is eliminated, that concluded the functioning of the board."

Thomas J. Williams, Federal Labor Department Conciliator, conferred with C I O officers.

National Guardsmen are patrolling the streets with fixed bayonets for the fourth day, and C I O leaders face court actions.

Judge Harry Manser of the Maine Supreme court who, last week, issued an injunction against further strike activities, today held seven C I O leaders, including Powers Hapgood, New England secretary, and William J. Mackesy, strike director, for jury trial Tuesday on charges they violated the injunction.

Meanwhile, Gov. Barrows, who sent troops Wednesday after a riot, was requested by the Episcopal Bishop of Maine and the Maine Methodist Conference to mediate the industrial strife resulting from the union demands for higher wages, shorter hours and union recognition.

John J. Mahon, counsel for the shoe manufacturers, declared the attitude of his clients not to deal with C I O was unchanged.

Answering a request of manufacturers that the strikers' commissary be restricted under the terms of the injunction, Judge Manser said the continuance of mass meetings by the strikers over the week-end would have much to with any decision he might regarding the commissary. Stri ers have been meeting daily in t of them have received relief fro Lewiston City Hall and hundre a food depot established by th C I O.

N FOR REBUILDING SHAWNEETOWN, ILL.

State and Federal Of- als Approve New Housing Authority Set-up.

Associated Press.

AWNEETOWN, Ill., April 24. ation of a housing authority build Shawneetown on a site from Ohio River floods had the oval of city officials and Federal and State public works representatives today.

Mayor Harry F. Howell, F. Lyndon Smith, State Public Works Director, Gerald Wesellius, Illinois Director of the American Red Cross and Fred Morin, W P A representative, outlined the plan last night.

The authority, they said, would act as an intermediary between residents and co-ordinating relief agencies. The housing board would have full authority to contract for the purchase and sale of property. This, he said, was the only way Federal and State aid could be obtained. He said the board would appraise land values and relief agencies could deal through it directly.

The plan for building the town on a new site provided for purchase of the old site for use as a park; W P A financing of the removal and reconstruction of public buildings, streets and sewers, and Red Cross construction of private homes in cases where money was not otherwise available.

The W P A has announced it would make available $200,000 for the Shawneetown project, and the Red Cross has indicated it was willing to spend the same amount on a new community as would be necessary to rehabilitate homes on the present site.

The State Legislature has been asked for an appropriation of $100,000 for conservation of Shawneetown as a state park, but Director Smith said he would ask that consideration of it be deferred pending development of the new plan.

Funds lent to the housing board to help finance the removal project would later be repaid by the residents themselves.

Smith planned to confer early next week with officials of the State Housing Board. He said members of the local committee would be appointed soon afterward.

H. A. GARDNER DISBARMENT CASE ADJOURNED TILL MAY 7

Bar Attorneys Dissatisfied With Records Produced; Waiting on Springfield Witness.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., April 24.—Disbarment proceedings against H. A. Gardner of Monett were adjourned here today until May 7, with the declaration of Bar Association attorneys they were not satisfied with the financial records Gardner produced on orders from the Springfield Court of Appeals.

Gardner was ordered to bring before Herman Pufahl of Bolivar, special commissioner, bank books, bank ledger sheets, statement of accounts and book of accounts from Jan. 1, 1935, until April 9 of this year pertaining to his law practice. He has turned over 123 canceled checks dating from March, 1936, to February, 1937, 76 bank deposit slips and a ledger book covering approximately the same period. He explained he never had used a pass book and had never had ledger sheets and that he did not keep check stubs. He said his statement of accounts hadn't been preserved.

Testimony was taken from O. H. Gardner, Marionville banker, in regard to some of Gardner's activities three years ago. Before moving further in the matter of the records, attorneys wanted to question Ray Dougherty, Springfield attorney, who is out of town. Gardner is accused of employing a runner to solicit suits.

Chief Buddhist Abbot Conducts Own Wedding

Marries Himself to 19-Year-Old Princess, Before Gold Lotus Altar, in Brilliant Ceremony, at Kioto.

By the Associated Press.

KIOTO, Japan, April 24.—Bowing before a gold lotus altar and a huge gilt buddha, Count Kocho Otani, of Japan, married himself shortly after dawn today to a 19-year-old princess. He is the hereditary chief Abbot of one of Japan's foremost sects of Buddhism.

The Count, 27 years old and spiritual leader of 13,000,000 Japanese Buddhists, made Princess Yoshiko Tokudaiji his bride, observing ancient ritual. The ruler of the Nishi-Honganji sect performed the service himself because no lesser dignitary was deemed eligible.

Hundrds of Buddhist dignitaries, court officials, members of nobility and 20,000 followers in the faith crowded into a temple courtyard to catch a glimpse of the wedding procession.

High on the still morning air rose the song of two choruses of 700 priests, chanting an antiphonal liturgy older than Christianity. The priests led the man whom they believe to be Buddha's earthly representative from his simple monastic dwelling.

The procession passed into the courtyard, joined there by more than 100 acolytes who swung their bronze censers in a rhythm to match the beat of the big drums in the temple.

In the inner temple, before the great lotus altar, high dignitaries of the church knelt in prayer.

In a cloud of incense, and with a clash of cymbals, the princess was led from a nearby gold-screened anteroom, garbed in the brocade robes of a court lady of nine centuries ago.

She wore 11 vari-colored kimonos, laid one over the other. So voluminous were the ancient skirts that she had difficulty walking to the altar where her fiance awaited her.

The ceremony over, the bridegroom distributed 1,500,000 yen ($420,000) as gifts among the poor. His bride gave away 1,500,000 classical fans to the wedding guests and other friends.

A newly-built palace, with a garden landscaped in the old Japanese style, was presented to the abbot and his bride by his followers. The palace contains 40 rooms.

TENNESSEE TRAPPER REFUSES AID ON 46TH DAY OF FAST

37 Pounds Under Weight, He Disregards Doctor's Warning of Death "in Day or So."

By the Associated Press.

STOOPING OAK, Tenn., April 24.—Jackson Whitlow, 45-year-old trapper, lay in his humble mountain cabin today, the forty-sixth day of what he said was a self-imposed fast made "at the call of the Lord."

Nearly 37 pounds underweight, Whitlow steadfastly refused to take nourishment, despite a physician's prediction he would die "in a day or so" unless he accepted food. He scorned pleading of neighbors to go to a hospital. Mrs. Whitlow said she would not "let him go" unless he consented.

In bed throughout the day after fainting yesterday and suffering from an intestinal hemorrhage, Whitlow was described by visitors as "terribly weak."

The fast, he has said, began March 10 and was preceded by a number of preliminary fasts of from five to 10 days' duration. He says he is awaiting "a call from the Lord to begin eating again."

AUGUSTA, Me., April 24.—Gov. Barrows signed a bill today creating a State "liquor monopoly" by which importation of liquor by individuals through express companies and other carrier services would be prohibited. FUNERAL SERVICES TOMORROW FOR VETERAN OF INDIAN WARS

Charles Wesley Ames, 78, Fought the Sioux at Battle of Wounded Knee.

Funeral services for Charles Wesley Ames, survivor of the Indian-fighting days of Hickok, Cody and Custer, who died Friday of infirmities at his home, 4619 Sacramento avenue, will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Leasburg, Mo. He was 78 years old and had lived in St. Louis since leaving the army in 1892 after 10 years as soldier and two as a civilian scout.

Records preserved by his family show that he left Whitewater, Wis., his birthplace, in 1880, to enlist in the Ninth Infantry. After service on the frontier where trouble with Indians on and off the reservation was thick, he retired with the rank of first lieutenant. He remained in Indian territory with the army as a scout until 1887 when he re-enlisted and was in uniform for another five-year period.

Of his accounts of the warfare, most vivid in his recollection was the battle of Wounded Knee, in Sioux territory in South Dakota. The battle began, he told members of his family, when the leader of an Indian band drew a rifle from beneath his jacket and shot down an officer who was advancing for a parley. The battle was fought in below zero temperature, and before it was over the bodies of Indians, frozen in the positions they had fallen, were lying in heaps, he said.

Surviving are his wife, seven sons, four daughters and 22 grandchildren.

1937 Ford V·8

● If you think that "all low-price cars cost about the same"—forget it! They don't.

Ford makes a car—a 60-horsepower economy Ford V-8—that sells from 30 to 60 dollars under the prices of any other car of comparable size. The lowest Ford price in years!

Check delivered prices with the different dealers in your town and see for yourself.

● Of course, first cost doesn't prove "low cost"—you must consider operating cost also.

The "60" has definitely established itself as the most economical car in Ford history. Ford cars have been famous for economy for 34 years, so that means something!

Owners who have driven it thousands of miles report that the Ford "60" averages between 22 and 27 miles on a single gallon of gas.

You can prove those figures—on the road—in a car provided by your Ford dealer.

● When you've finished your personal check-up, ask yourself a few questions.

"Do I want to save money the day I buy my car and every mile I drive it?"

"Do I want a safe, roomy, comfortable car of advanced design—a car created from the finest materials to the highest precision standards—a car with the extra value born of building 25 million?"

There's only one answer—the 1937 Ford V-8—THE QUALITY CAR IN THE LOW-PRICE FIELD.

Ford V-8 Prices Begin at $529 at Dearborn Factory. Transportation charges, State & Federal taxes extra

This price is for the 60-hp. Coupe equipped with front and rear bumpers, spare tire, horn, windshield wiper, sun visor, glove compartment, and ash tray.

$25 A MONTH, after usual down-payment, buys any 1937 Ford V-8 Car from any Ford dealer in the United States. Ask your Ford dealer about the easy payment plans of the Universal Credit Company.

BUSINESS MEN TO TAKE UP LABOR PROBLEMS

Proposals on Relations of Industry and Unions Before C. of C. Convention.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Six proposals dealing with the relations of industry to labor unions are ready for presentation to the United States Chamber of Commerce, which will begin its annual meeting here Monday.

On the heels of the decision of the United States Supreme Court upholding the validity of the Wagner Labor Relations Act in interstate commerce, and the spread of strikes, one chamber unit recommended Federal legislation to make unions responsible parties to agreements and require them to incorporate.

The Portland (Ore.) chamber proposed a study of what it termed "coercive methods used by radical labor leaders to obtain membership." The Whittier (Cal.) unit urged that the Gederal Government "withhold financial assistance to striking employes."

The Chicago unit wants the National Chamber to call on Federal and local governments "to protect vigorously owners of property from unlawful seizure by any and all groups."

In addition to the labor question, the delegates are expected to enunciate policy on taxes, Government activity in the business field and credit expansion.

One day has been set aside to consider demands for repeal or modification of the Federal tax on undistributed corporate surpluses.

Talk on "What's Wrong With Us."

"What's Wrong With Us" will be the subject of an address by Dean Frank M. Debatin of the University College, Washington University, at the scholarship dinner of the Women's Advertising Club at 7 o'clock Tuesday evening at the College Club, 5428 Delmar boulevard.

NEW YORK RAIL CLERKS RESET TIME OF STRIKE

Union and Officers of Eight Roads Will Meet Today in Effort to Avert Walkout.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—A conference between officers of eight railroads and representatives of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers and Station Employes, called to avert a threatened strike of 25,000 employes in the metropolitan area, adjourned late tonight without an agreement having been reached.

The union had asked for 20 cents an hour wage increase. None of the conferees would comment on the conference, which started this afternoon. A week-end truce postponed a strike until at least Monday noon.

The conferees said they would meet separately tomorrow morning and resume the conference tomorrow afternoon.

In announcing the strike postponement, George Price, spokesman for the Brotherhood, said union leaders had "received assurances that a satisfactory settlement of the controversy may be reached if we can hold the men on the job another 48 hours." He did not say from whom the assurances came.

Later it was announced that Otto S. Beyers of the United States Mediation Board had arranged a conference between union representatives and company officers.

200 SEEK TRAPPED MINERS

Rescue Party Reports Signals in Pit Near New Philadelphia, Pa.

By the Associated Press.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., April 24.—A rescue squad of 200 worked tonight to release two miners trapped in their independently-operated mine working near New Philadelphia.

Anthony Gristitus and Stanley Pushka, were entombed in a tunnel 70 feet from the surface by a cave-in today. Members of the squad said they heard shouts and signals. They said a new shaft would have to be sunk and did not think they would reach the men before Monday.

BOTH LEGS CUT OFF BY TRAIN

Laborer Falls Under Wheels Trying to Board Freight.

Hugh B. Waldorf, 52-year-old laborer, suffered the loss of both legs last night when he attempted to board a south-bound Frisco freight train near the Fyler avenue viaduct, lost his footing and was thrown beneath the wheels. The train did not stop. He was taken to City Hospital.

Relatives informed police that Waldorf had been employed recently in Memphis, Tenn., and was apparently trying to return there.

FREDERIC C. HOWE BECOMES FARM ADVISER TO QUEZON

Former A A A Consumers' Counsel to Aid in Handling Land Problems in Philippines.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Commonwealth President Manuel Quezon, planning to adapt American and European ideas on farm tenancy and co-operatives to the Philippine Islands, said today he had engaged Frederic C. Howe, as an adviser.

Howe, former A A A Consumers' Counsel, said he expected to obtain an indefinite leave of absence as special adviser to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, and go to Manila in September.

Quezon told of plans for a "new attack" on the Philippines' ancient problem of tenancy as he left on a month's trip to Denmark and Ireland. He halted temporarily negotiations to revise Philippine-American relations and advance the date for final freedom of the Filipinos from 1946 to either next year or 1939.

Quezon said he studied Mexico's land difficulties on a trip there this month, and expected to find methods in Denmark and Ireland that might be followed in the islands.

EXPLAINS BILL TO AID CRIPPLED CHILDREN

Doctor Points Out New Missouri Measure Will Be of Great Benefit.

Benefits of the Federal Social Security Act to crippled children in Missouri, already apparent, will be even greater under the bill, recently passed by the Legislature and awaiting the signature of Gov. Stark, which would make funds available for care of needy crippled children in any hospital in the State, Dr. J. Archer O'Reilly, president of the Missouri Society for Crippled Children, said in his annual report, made public last night.

Heretofore, Dr. O'Reilly pointed out, Missouri law enabled use of public funds for treatment only in hospitals connected with the University of Missouri. The bill awaiting the Governor's signature, introduced in the Legislature at the request of the society, amends the State law to conform with provisions of the Federal act.

However, Government aid had served to increase the work of the society, he continued, explaining that the Missouri Crippled Children's Service could care only for children up to 15 years of age and that expansion of activities had increased the need for educational and vocational rehabilitation work.

Acceptable by the State and Federal governments of broader responsibilities in the care of crippled children, he said, meant the beginning of responsibility by the society—of seeking to assure proper administration of the law and of educating the public to its responsibility in aiding in rehabilitation.

The society, organized 10 years ago, has headquarters at 3534 Washington boulevard.

SAYS LEFT-HANDED SHOULD BE LET ALONE

Speech Expert Declares Change May Cause Stuttering, Other Difficulties.

Left-handed children should be let alone and not changed to be right-handed, if speech, writing, reading and spelling disorders are to be avoided, Dorothy Mellen Woldstad, corrective speech worker in the St. Louis high schools, declared in a paper read yesterday before the Missouri Academy of Science and the Speech Association of Missouri.

It is indicated, the speaker said, that left-handedness, when interferred with, may given rise to a conflict between the two cerebral hemispheres and act as a factor in inducing stuttering.

The brain center, being located on the opposite side of the brain from the preferential hand and no known structural reason existing for the use of the right hand more than the left, some individuals grow up to be left-handed with the speech center on the right instead of the left side of the brain as is the case with most individuals, she explained.

"Sutttering is frequently brought about by the confusion set up in the cerebral hemispheres caused by forcing left-handed children to use their right hand, thus interfering with the development of the speech area on the side of the brain opposite the preferred hand," she said.

"In order that the speech pattern grow and stabilize, it needs continuous stimulation from the use of the corresponding hand. The child if let to himself will indicate by the hand which is the dominant side of the brain. Confusion, brought about by training the left-handed child to be right-handed, may interfere with the processes responsible for reading, writing, spelling, and speaking. Nervous instability may result."

In a study of cases which the speaker made in St. Louis schools, where stuttering seemed traceable to the attempts to make left-handed persons right-handed, marked improvement has shown itself in 22 cases in which they were changed back to left-handed practices, and eventual complete correction is indicated in 19 others.

The left-handed child can be taught to write in regular fashion as a right-handed child does. The back-handed, twisted manner of left-hand writers is the result of being left to themselves and not taught at all, it was stated.

To change the hand alone is not enough, she said. The speech must be studied and a new speech pattern imposed. In the cases studied, the speaker said, improvement also was noted in spelling and reading, when the left-handed subject was permitted to follow the natural inclination, after the attempt to make him a right-handed was given up.

9 PLEAD NOT GUILTY OF KILLING IN FIGHT OF RIVAL UNIONS

Arraigned at Columbus, Kan., After Death of One of Those Shot in Clash at Galena.

COLUMBUS, Kan., April 24.—Nine members of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers pleaded not guilty today when arraigned on charges resulting from the death Thursday of one of nine members of a rival union shot at Galena, Kan., April 11. The men waived reading of warrants charging them with first degree murder and assault with intent to kill. Bond of each was set by Justice of the Peace Victor Winter at $5000.

The nine and two others are charged with the death of Lavoice Miller, who died at Joplin Thursday of pneumonia, contracted after he was wounded in a clash between the international union, affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and the Tri-State Mine and Smelter Workers' Union, since affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Reid Robinson, Denver, Colo., president of the International Union, told the accused: "Men, the International will do everything possible to help you."

Those arraigned today are Ed Berry, Ira Tacket, George Bankhead, Darrell Largent, Ernest Honeywell, Jess Slitch, Bill Webb, Earl Flowers and Dan Griggsby. Others accused are James Hollingshead and Richard Holmes.

SWEET CORN, GROWN FOR FIRST TIME IN TROPICS, IN DEMAND

Puerto Rico Improves Food Supply and May Export Winter-Maturing Vegetables.

By the Associated Press.

SAN JUAN, P. R., April 24.—Sweet corn, growing successfully for the first time in the tropics, is in great demand. Experimental gardens of the farm labor camps cannot grow it fast enough to satisfy the demand of camp laborers, who never tasted it before. The corn matures in the winter, so next year it will probably find a market in the States.

Peas, green onions, string beans and carrots all are being grown. With the addition of other standard garden produce they are displacing $1000 worth of imported dry foods a week.

Operated by the Puerto Rico reconstruction administration as a step in island rehabilitation, the camps are proving that a wide variety of vegetables can be grown on the island.

NOTED JAPANESE DANCER, 100, LAYS HEALTH TO FRIED EELS

Haruko Katayama Again Supervising Kyoto's Spring Spectacle, "The Cherry Dance."

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, April 24.—Haruko Katayama, the 100-year-old dancer who has charmed Japanese audiences for nearly three-quarters of a century, is again this year supervising Kyoto's spring spectacle, "The Cherry Dance," which is enacted by hundreds of Geisha girls.

Having performed her classical dances for most of the distinguished American and Europeans who have visited Japan's shores in the last seven decades, Mrs. Katayama still has a marvelous physique, and thinks nothing of rising from her floor mattress in the middle of the night and trying out the steps of some new theme which has just come into her mind.

Her youthfulness, the dancer says, is due to her diet of fried eels which she has eaten steadily, sometimes at three meals in one day, for more than 50 years. She usually drinks one quart of sake (rice wine) a day, although at times beer is substituted.

She first began instructing Geisha in the art of dance entertainment in 1873, when she was called upon to work out the glittering spring pageant "The Cherry Dance," which yearly attracts to Kyoto hundreds of American visitors as well as Japanese from all over the Empire.

ITOR FINED; PRINTED NAMES GRAND JURORS, WITNESSES alter Morrow, Akron, Who Also Published List of Cases, Takes Appeal.

y the Associated Press.

AKRON, O., April 24.—An early ecision by the Court of Appeals was promised tonight in the case of Walter Morrow, editor of the Times Press, who was fined $50 today by Judge Walter B. Wanamaker for publishing names of witnesses and cases under consideration by the county grand jury.

Morrow was cited after the court had admonished newspaper editors not to make public any of the proceedings of the jury. Morrow said the case was to test the length which courts could go in barring news reports.

Judge Wannamaker said there had been too much trying of law suits in newspapers instead of courts, particularly in criminal cases, where the rights of society and the individual should be established by the orderly procedure of justice."

The court assessed Morrow a fine of $10 for publishing the names of the grand jurors; $15 for revealing the names of witnesses and $25 for making known the titles of the grand jury cases.

Good Will Tour of Illinois.

Representatives of 60 St. Louis business concerns will make a good will tour of Illinois cities, leaving here at 7:15 o'clock Tuesday morning, on an Illinois Terminal System train and returning at midnight Wednesday. Cities to be visited are Springfield, Lincoln, Peoria, Bloomington, Clinton, Decatur, Urbana and Champaign. The trip is sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce.

FUNERAL TOMORROW FOR FATHER ENGELEN

Services at College Church at 9 A. M. for St. Louis U. Professor of Philosophy.

The funeral of the Rev. William J. Engelen, S. J., professor of philosophy at St. Louis University, will be held at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning at St. Francis Xavier Church, Grand and Lindell boulevards, with burial in the cemetery at St. Stanislaus Seminary at Florissant. He died of paralysis Friday at Firmin Desloge Hospital.

Father Engelen, who was 64 years old, was a co-founder of the Catholic University of Tokio, Japan. At the request of the head of the Jesuit Order he and another Jesuit, the Rev. Joseph Hoffman, a German, organized the university in 1909. It is now a flourishing institution.

Father Engelen served as chancellor of the Tokio University until 1915 when poor health forced him to return to the United States. He joined the faculty of St. John's University in Toledo, O., as dean of the colleges of arts and laws and later organized a school of education for the university.

In 1930 he went to Rockhurst College, Kansas City, Mo., and two years later came to St. Louis University to teach philosophy. He continued in active teaching until several months ago, when he became ill. His field of special interest was sociology and he wrote extensively on the social sciences.

A native of Germany, Father Engelen studied in German and Dutch schools before coming to St. Louis University for his theological training. Following his ordination here, he did graduate study at the Gregorian University in Rome, where he received the degree of doctor of philosophy.

SUIT TO FIX OWNERSHIP OF BUSCH ESTATE STOCK

Friendly Action Filed to Settle Handling of 1330 Shares as Asset for the Family.

Suit to determine ownership of 1330 shares of stock in the Manufacturers' Railway, as between the estate of Adolphus Busch, brewer, who died in 1913, and the estate of his son, August A. Busch Sr., who died in 1934, was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by the St. Louis Union Trust Co. and Charles Nagel, trustee of the general trust of the elder Busch.

Defendants named were Adolphus Busch III and August A. Busch Jr., sons and executors of August Busch, and the various heirs of Adolphus Busch. Isaac C. Orr, attorney for the plaintiffs, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that the suit was friendly, to settle the handling of the asset for the family.

Facts set forth in the petition are as follows: Adolphus Busch accepted 8330 shares of the railway stock Sept. 24, 1912, with par value of $833,000, on account of a larger debt to him by the road, and directed that 7000 of the shares be issued to him and 1330 to his son. August Busch indorsed the 1330 shares in blank and they were included in the inventory of his father's estate and held by the latter's trustees. The trustees, including August Busch in his lifetime, annually receipted for this stock in Probate Court as an asset of the general trust. However, the stock was found among August Busch's assets and inventoried as his by his executors, who claimed it for his estate, as a gift from his father.

The inventory of the August Busch estate valued the railway stock at $70 a share, or $93,100 for this block. The road has been regarded as a Busch family enterprise.

ILLINOIS PENSIONS FOR NEEDY IN PRIVATE INSTITUTIONS

Gov. Horner's Order Reverses Previous Stand of State Old Age Assistance Division.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 25.—Gov. Horner has instructed the State Old Age Assistance Division to pay $10 monthly to needy residents of St. Joseph's Home here, a private institution. It was understood the Governor's action, a reversal of the division's previous stand, would apply to all private charitable institutions in the State. Private homes for aged residents who are under contract for their care are not entitled to payments.

Public Welfare Director A. L. Bowen said each ward would be required to make an individual application which would be investigated as in other cases and that payments might be more or less than $10 monthly.

The Governor's instructions followed a conference yesterday with James H. Andrews, Superintendent of Old Age Assistance, and officers of St. Joseph's Home regarding a mandamus suit filed in Sangamon County Circuit Court by six residents of the institution to compel the State to aid them. Judge L. E. Stone dismissed the case after the agreement was reached.

A few months ago, the Knights of Pythias Home at Decatur filed a similar suit, but Circuit Judge C. Y. Miller held that residents of private institutions did not come under the old age assistance act.

'IDEAL BUSINESS EXECUTIVE'

To Be Chosen During Cost Accountants' Conferences.

Conferences sponsored by the St. Louis Association of Cost Accountants on problems of business management will be held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings at 8 o'clock in the Kinloch Building, Tenth and Locust streets.

Contests to select "the ideal younger business executive" and "the most efficient and personable business girl of St. Louis" will be held in connection with the conferences.

CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION PROTESTS TO DICKMANN

Declares Order Against Anti-Nazi Movie Is Infringement on Right.

The St. Louis Civil Liberties Committee, in a letter to Mayor Dickmann yesterday, protested against his order refusing to permit use of the Municipal Auditorium for a showing of the anti-Nazi motion picture, "Der Kampf," characterizing it as an infringement on the right of free expression. The motion picture will be shown elsewhere today.

Signed by Dr. Jerome E. Cook, president of the committee, the letter said in part:

"Without entering into the merit or lack of merit of this film, we desire to protest most vigorously against the exercise of such a censorship and against the infringement upon the right of freedom of expression.

"As Americans we deplore the fact that any government anywhere denies to its people free speech, free press, and free assemblage, and we fail to understand how our own officials can at the behest of such a government, or its representative, seek to impose similar abrogation of civil rights upon the citizens of St. Louis."

The Mayor's order was made after a protest by the German Consul, Reinhold Freytag, and after City Counselor Edgar H. Wayman reported the sponsor of the picture, the German-American Club, had refused to permit city officials to view it in advance.

Fritz Rust, secretary of the German-American Club, said a preview had been refused because "that would have been giving consent to Nazi Consul Freytag becoming the Hitler-appointed censor of movies to be shown in St. Louis."

The picture will be exhibited today at 4, 6, 8 and 10 p. m., at Hiberian Hall, 3619 Finney avenue.

A remark by Consul Freytag that the German-American Club had headquarters at 3520 Franklin avenue, "the address of a Communist organization," evoked counter-statements from Vanguard Bookshop and Vanguard Gallery, both of that address, and the Communist party.

Donald MacKenzie, director of the Vanguard Gallery, said it was a non-political organization devoted to the showing of contemporary art. Mack W. Schwab, who conducts the bookshop, said it merely carried "progressive literature." The Communist party protested against the Mayor's action. Rust said the German-American Club was not connected with the Communist party.

Suhay and his companion, Alfred Power, are being held pending action by a Federal grand jury on charges of murder growing out of the death of the agent, W. W. Baker.

ESCAPED PRISONER TO GO BACK

Lee Timmons, a former convict, will be returned from East St. Louis to Washington Court House, O., where he escaped from the county jail Oct. 2, 1936. He was arrested by East St. Louis police last week and was about to be released yesterday when a routine check of his fingerprints disclosed he was wanted in the Ohio town.

Timmons was arrested on a charge of forging a small check, but the charge was dropped when he paid the amount of the check. He admitted he had escaped from the Washington Court House jail, waiving extradition. The Ohio charge also was forgery.

MOTION TO DISMISS 83 SILICOSIS SUITS

National Lead Co. Acts on Opinion of Judges as to Jurisdiction.

Motions to dismiss 83 silicosis damage suits, seeking a total of $249,000 from the National Lead Co., on the ground that jurisdiction was within the Missouri Workmen's Compensation Commission, were filed in Circuit Court at Farmington yesterday.

Counsel for the company took the action following approval by St. Louis Circuit Judges recently of a report by a committee consisting of Judges J. Wesley McAfee, Frank C. O'Malley and James M. Douglas, now a Judge of the State Supreme Court, that personal injury damage suits alleging contraction of occupational diseases in which the cause of action accrued after 1925 when the Workmen's Compensation Act was adopted, should be heard by the Compensation Commission.

The 83 suits were filed by lead miners, formerly employed by the National Lead Company, in its mines in St. Francois County, who alleged they had contracted silicosis, a disease of the lungs caused by inhalation of mineral dusts while working for the company.

The St. Louis law firm of Boyle & Priest and Harry O. Smith of Farmington contended in the motions that the suits presented substantially the same facts as those in the case on which the St. Louis Judges reported. In that case it was contended on behalf of the lead miner that the suit was filed under the common law and that hence the Circuit Court had jurisdiction.

However, the Judges held that the compensation act did not operate as an ordinary statute, but was essentially a voluntary contract between employer and employe. The National Lead Co. accepted the terms of the act about five years ago.

A representative of the company said some of the 83 suits had been filed at Farmington after dismissals in St. Louis for failure to post security for costs.

CORONER SAYS GIRL COULDN'T HAVE SHOT BOY KILLED IN GAME

Kentucky Youth Lost Life Playing "Postoffice" in Dark; Another Held as Witness.

By the Associated Press.

GRAYSON, Ky., April 24.—Stating that it would have been impossible for Stella Stevens, 14 years old, to have discharged the revolver in the case of the death of 16-year-old Jimmy Scott, Coroner C. W. Henderson renewed his investigation today into the shooting, which occurred in a game of "postoffice" played in a darkened room at the girl's home in Olive Hill.

No powder burns were found on the girl's hands, the coroner said. Nor were there powder burns on the youth's hands. The girl's story is that the boy was gripping the pistol when it was discharged accidentally. Coroner Henderson quoted the girl as saying she was holding the barrel of the weapon when it was discharged.

Eddie Romines, 20, remains in jail as a material witness. He has refused to make any statement. The Coroner said officials were investigating the theory that the shot was fired from the doorway between the darkened room and an adjoining room in which Romines remained. The pistol was on the mantle in the room occupied by Romines, Henderson said.

REMNANT OF SAMARITANS CELEBRATE THE PASSOVER

Robed Priests Perform Sacrificial Rites on Mount Gerizim; Hymns in Archaic Dialect.

By the Associated Press.

NABLUS, Palestine, April 24.—A tiny remnant of the once proud race of Samaritans gathered on Mount Gerizim at sundown today to celebrate the Samaritan passover, one of the oldest of religious ceremonies.

Robed priests performed the sacrificial rites in strict accordance with Old Testament injunctions before the entire community of Samaritans—numbering just 160.

The traditional sacrifice of lambs was preceded by a long service. When the high priest reached the words "and the whole congregation shall kill it," three young laymen began swift slaughter of the lambs.

Hymns were sung in an archaic dialect.

The Samaritans, tracing their existence back to days of Babylonian captivity, refused until recent days to marry strangers although faced with extinction. A few of the men have married Jews despite an old enmity between the races.

CONTEMPT CITATION UNDER CENTURY STRIKE INJUNCTION

Frank Mier, Accused of Assaulting Employe, Is Ordered to Appear Thursday.

A citation was issued yesterday by Circuit Judge Robert J. Kirkwood against Frank Mier, ordering him to show cause next Thursday why he should not be declared in contempt of an injunction granted by Judge Kirkwood last week to the Century Electric Co. and some of its employes who are not in sympathy with the strike called April 12 by the United Electrical & Radio Workers' Union.

An application for the citation charged that Mier assaulted Ray Rowden, an employe of the company, last Thursday after the two Century factories, at 1806 and 1817 Pine street, were reopened under the injunction. Mier's connection with the strike was not explained in the application. The strikers are permitted to picket peacefully.

$50,000 Strike Eviction Suit.

DETROIT, April 24.—Mrs. Anna Rzienkowski filed suit against Mayor Frank Couzens of Detroit, Police Commissioner Heinrich Pickert and the Detroit Police Department today, asking for $50,000 damages for injuries she says she suffered during eviction of sit-down strikers from a cigar factory here March 20. She charged that a policeman struck her on the head as she watched the eviction from the porch of her home across the street from the plant.

DOCTOR ANNOUNCES NEW THROMBOSIS TREATMENT

Dr. C. H. Best, Co-Discoverer of Insulin Tells of Preparation to Prevent Blood Clots.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 24.—Dr. C. H. Best, co-discoverer of insulin, announced today a new preparation which he said showed promise of being a preventive of thrombosis, the formation of blood clots, which is one of the highly fatal diseases against which science has made little progress.

One hundred human beings already have been treated. But this number is considered too small to advance the discovery out of the "experimental medicine" stage, Dr. Best told the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

The new preparation is a purified form of heparin, a substance manufactured by the liver in men and animals. It tends to prevent clotting of blood. Dr. Best has purified the ordinary form of heparin with the result its potency is increased 600 to 700 times.

STRANGLES 8 PERSONS TO DEATH IN 5 YEARS

Strasbourg Killer, Who Writes of Attending Victims' Funerals, Still Sought by Police.

By the Associated Press.

STRASBOURG, April 24. — The "Strasbourg Strangler," one of Europe's most dreaded criminals, is hunted day and night by police, spurred on by citizens of this old Alsatian City.

A five-year manhunt for the murderer, who wrote that he even attended the funerals of his victims, has brought police time and again to blank walls. Eight deaths by strangulation are attributed to his hands.

The first murder, in February, 1932, took place in Soap street. The eighth, at the end of March, 1937, in Lace street. In the intervening period, the city's streets became deserted at night. Mothers kept their children indoors after dusk and women were afraid to venture out. Citizens blamed the police department, the courts and the Mayor, and threatened to oust the city government by force if the strangler were not arrested.

At the old Schiltigheim fortifications, a ragpicker, trudging along the walls, peopled with the ghosts of centuries of war dead, cast the flickering shadow of his lantern on the nude body of a young girl. She had been strangled with a sock. This was the first of the murders. The day after the funeral, police received a letter written in a scrawling hand, boasting that the writer had committed the crime and had attended the burial service. Details he gave left no doubt in the minds of police he had been there.

Another Girl Murdered.

A month later another girl was murdered in similar circumstances. Although police kept a close watch on the funeral mourners and even questioned several strangers, they received a letter next day saying the criminal had been at the cemetery.

With his third crime, the "Strasbourg Strangler" became more brazen. He telephoned police to tell them where to find the body of his victim. This time, it was an 11-year-old boy, an orphan, who sold chestnuts on the street and was known to nearly everyone in the city. Again, despite heavy precautions which included keeping secret the hour of the funeral, the murderer was at the cemetery.

Four more murders by strangulation followed over a period of four years.

Screams in the Night.

Then screams piercing the night in a poor quarter of the city led to the discovery of the body of Marie Karcher, 23, strangled to death in her boarding house room.

Her next-door neighbor told police: "I was awakened about 1 o'clock in the morning by screams from Marie Karcher's room. They lasted about a minute. Then all was quiet. I was afraid to move.

"Then I heard the sound of a door softly opening and shutting. A few minutes later the doorbell rang. I opened my window, looked out, but there was nobody there. Nearly half-an-hour later, the doorbell rang again. For the second time I opened my window and looked out. Again there was no one.

"Very frightened, I awakened the landlady. We went into Marie Karcher's room and found her strangled to death."

Police arrested Marie Karcher's friend, Andre Muller, 19, after neighbors said they had heard him quarreling with the girl. But he was released when he proved an alibi.

The day after Marie Karcher's funeral, police received their eighth letter from "Strasbourg Strangler," saying he had attended the funeral.

EAST SIDE LEVEE TAX BILL BECOMES LAW UNSIGNED

Gov. Horner Opposed to Increase in Public Debt Without Referendum, He Explains.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 24.—Gov. Horner allowed to become law without his signature today the Menges-Monroe bill authorizing certain sanitary districts to increase their bonded indebtedness for levee work.

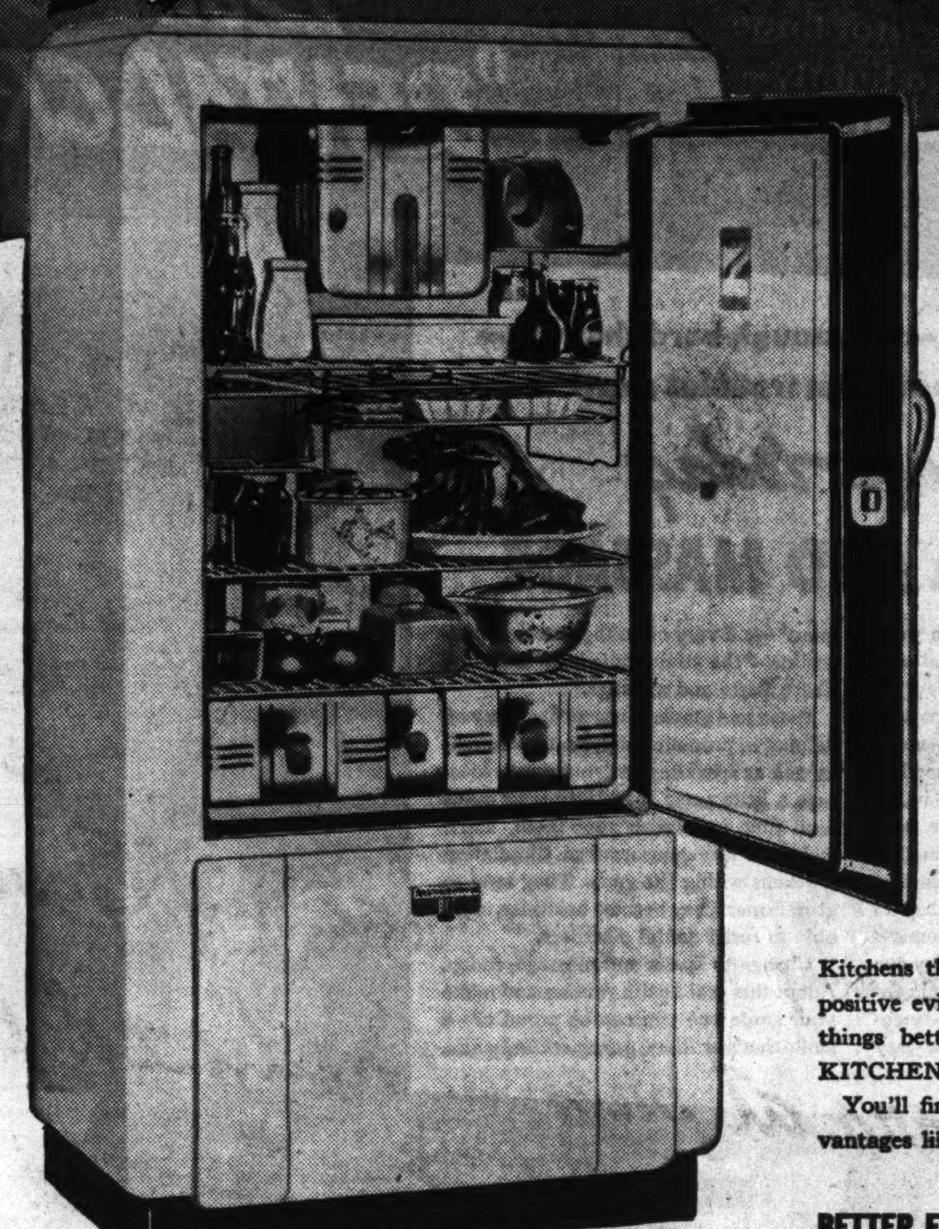
Immediately affected was the East Side Sanitary District in Madison and St. Clair counties, where the War Department has proposed to raise the height of levees about five feet but asked the district to acquire the right of way.

The law provides that the district may become indebted one-half of 1 per cent above the 2½ per cent limitation of assessed valuation of property. The measure does not provide for a referendum vote.

The Governor said he was still opposed to the principle of increasing a public debt without a referendum but that circumstances in the East Side District case were such that he would permit the law to go into effect without his signature. He pointed out that War Department engineers had determined that the levees should be raised for the prevention of possible serious flood damage.

Sponsors of the bill, Senators Louis J. Menges of East St. Louis and James O. Monroe of Collinsville, Democrats, said a bond issue of about $500,000 would be necessary by the district to cover its share of the work.

Kitchen-proved SAVINGS!



WORLD-WIDE KITCHEN PROOF! 623 CERTIFIED SCIENTIFIC TESTS... IN 89 HOME PROVING KITCHENS ... CONFIRM SPECTACULAR LABORATORY RECORDS OF OPERATING ECONOMY!

● With the new 1937 Westinghouse Refrigerator, you aren't asked to judge its performance and economy in your kitchen by what it does in the laboratory or showroom. Certified tests in 89 Home Proving Kitchens throughout the United States and foreign countries give you positive evidence that this new Westinghouse Refrigerator will do more things better . . . and at less cost . . . UNDER ACTUAL NORMAL KITCHEN CONDITIONS.

You'll find conclusive evidence of MORE DOLLAR VALUE in advantages like these:

BETTER FOOD PROTECTION... Kitchen-proved

Special tests on milk, meat and leftovers, in 89 proving kitchens, convinced the most skeptical that a Westinghouse protects food for days beyond the average requirements. The exclusive "Built-in Watchman" gives added protection against accidental powerline disturbances.

GREATER CONVENIENCES... Kitchen-proved

Every Westinghouse convenience feature has been proved to save time, trouble and money. The Eject-o-Cube Ice Tray, Triple Food Saver Set, Triple Storage Compartment, and Adjusto-shelf are just a few of the features that have thus earned a place in the 1937 Westinghouse Refrigerator.

FULL POWER... Kitchen-proved

Hour-meter tests in proving kitchens showed that the Westinghouse mechanism operates less than 15 minutes out of every hour . . . a real money-saving feature. Even in the tropics, with refrigerator doors opened as frequently as 113 times a day, reserve power quickly cooled heavy loads of warm foods and bottles to Safety Zone temperatures.

FASTER FREEZING... Kitchen-proved

Ice cubes frozen in 70 minutes or less under kitchen conditions! Certified tests prove you get more ice faster from the oversize Westinghouse froster — made of Sanalloy, an exclusive Westinghouse metal. Will freeze up to 50% more ice in 24 hours.

GREATER ECONOMY... Kitchen-proved

Rock-bottom costs for perfect refrigeration . . . based on actual home conditions with heavy food loads. Scientific meter readings prove that electricity for the 1937 Westinghouse costs only slightly more than a postage stamp, even on the hottest day.

FRIEDMAN DRESS CO. RECEIVER APPOINTED

Court Names J. B. Kramer in Involuntary Action by Three Creditors.

John B. Kramer, a lawyer, was appointed receiver for the Friedman Dress Manufacturing Co., 1123 Washington avenue, by Federal Judge George H. Moore yesterday, in an order in an involuntary bankruptcy suit filed by three creditors. Kramer's surety bond was fixed at $2500.

Liabilities of the company, maker of silk dresses, exceeded $20,000, Morris Levin, attorney for some creditors, told a Post-Dispatch reporter. He added that Irl R. Rosenbloom, a lawyer, to whom the company assigned assets Thursday, had told Judge Moore he appraised the assets at about $1500.

Plaintiffs in the suit and amount of their claims are: Atlas Textile Co., $67; Ideal Embroidery Co., $92, and H. Aronof Embroidery Co., $633. The suit alleges the assignment of assets for the benefit of creditors constituted an act of bankruptcy and asserts that the manner of the assignment, without preliminary notice to many St. Louis creditors, leaves creditors with little confidence in the assignment.

The petition, charging the company is insolvent, says a financial statement issued a few months ago showed solvency, and declares an immediate receivership is necessary to determine the change of condition. Meyer Aronof is attorney for the plaintiffs.

Jacob Friedman, 7275 Northmoor drive, University City, president of the company, saying he was its sole owner, told a reporter that labor costs and poor sales were responsible for its trouble. He was unable to estimate the assets and liabilities.

"I made the assignment to conserve the assets," he declared. "I wanted to do the right thing and the creditors would have got at least 50 cents on the dollar under the assignment, but they won't get so much with the costs of bankruptcy. Our difficulty was the high price of labor and the backward season; business has been slow for the last seven or eight months. We had a strike when operating as the Friedman Manufacturing Co., but since then have had a 100 per cent union shop. Things got tough after that. The present corporation was formed in 1935 for $10,000. I have been in the business 15 years on Washington avenue and it has got me now. We shut down Tuesday. Rosenbloom was picked for the assignment by my lawyer, Karol Korngold."

LAMBERT FIELD REPORT ON PLANES' COLLISION

Combination of Causes Sent Two Ships Together on Ground Friday Night.

An informal hearing held yesterday developed that a combination of circumstances caused the collision of two sight-seeing airplanes at Lambert-St. Louis Field Friday night.

Both pilots, Harry Homeyer and Ray Harris, and four passengers escaped injury. A woman in one ship became hysterical and was cared for at the administration building.

Harris' Kinner-Bird biplane crashed into Homeyer's new Stinson monoplane as both planes were preparing to take off on short flights.

Homeyer testified he failed to receive fully, because of static, a radio message from the control tower directing him to depart in advance of Harris. The latter, who had no radio, said he received a green light signal from the tower to start, and did not see that the dispatcher changed the signal to red in an effort to halt him.

Harris said he failed to see the lights on Homeyer's plane and hit the other ship as he sped down the runway. Harris' ship was wrecked and the right wing of Homeyer's plane was broken.

The hearing was conducted by Field Manager Ralph Page, Chief Dispatcher Archie League and Inspector Guy Faulkner of the Department of Commerce.

HUSBAND HELD FOR MURDER

Accused of Killing Wife in Seeking "Another Man" in Her Room.

By the Associated Press.

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., April 24.—Allan D. Boggs, 54 years old, formerly of Detroit, was ordered held without bail today for trial on a murder charge, after two eye-witnesses described the shooting of Mrs. Sally Boggs, 37, when her husband sought "another man" in her bedroom.

Two witnesses testified Mrs. Boggs pleaded for the life of her 12-year-old son, by a former marriage, apparently mistaken by Boggs for another man. Orrie Dunlap, a deputy sheriff, testified Boggs showed signs of having been drinking when he was arrested at a hotel the morning after the shooting.

DENIES 'CROOKED' PACT WITH THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC

Officer of Conductors Tells Mediation Board Charges of Junior Unions Are False.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24.—F. H. Memitz, vice-president of the Order of Railway Conductors, denied today there was "something crooked" in his organization's agreements with the Southern Pacific, Co., or that they were secret.

Memitz testified at today's hearing of President Roosevelt's Emergency Mediation Board, appointed after the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen had called a strike of 8500 Southern Pacific employes.

Officers of the two brotherhoods and Attorney Donald Richberg charged the carrier negotiated secret agreements with the conductors and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, granting special privileges which in effect made them company unions.

The annual spring campaign for funds for the Goodwill Industries will be continued this week in an extended effort to raise $25,000 to expand the activities of the organization's 40 departments. A final report of voluntary workers in the campaign is expected Friday.

Pledges of contributions totaling nearly $20,000 had been received up to yesterday and groups headed by Mrs. T. Edward Rassieur, Clarence Webster and Charles Kammerer will attempt to raise the rest before the campaign closes. The industrial department of the organization last year gave wage-paying employment to more than 3000 persons, and an increased number could be cared for this year, it was said, if facilities were made available.

ADVISER TO WALLACE URGES SPENDING TO AVOID INFLATION

Mordecai Ezekiel Would Continue Heavy Taxation to Distribute Big Incomes to Poor.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Mordecai Ezekiel, economist of the Agriculture Department, said today the "soundest program" to prevent inflation would be two-fold:

1. Continued heavy taxation and spending by the Federal Government to take off some of the high incomes at the top and distribute them to low-income persons.

2. A "fairer balance on the part of industry between prices, pay rolls and profits."

Industry, he said in a broadcast address, should increase payrolls faster than it increases profits, paying higher wages out of savings made through technological improvements.

RUG FIRM'S 'UNFAIR' METHOD

Trade Board Orders It to End Reweaving Representation.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The Federal Trade Commission announced today it had ordered the Olson Rug Co. of Chicago, to desist from "unfair methods of competition" in the sale of rugs which it manufactures from old materials.

The commission said its order prohibited the firm from representing rugs will be made from the specific materials sent to it by customers. "It was found," the commission said, "that the Olson company does not make a practice of manufacturing the rugs it delivers to customers from the specific materials they send in but makes them from old materials previously sent in by other customers."

Don't dismiss that tinge of "Pink" too lightly—See your dentist—

Don't be a "DENTAL CRIPPLE"

Too much soft food—not enough hard chewing—that's often how gum troubles start!

Change today TO IPANA AND MASSAGE

ONLY a faint tinge of "pink" on your tooth brush. It does seem trivial—unimportant. But before you dismiss it so easily—see what your dentist has to say!

"Pink tooth brush" is a warning—nothing more. But the first time you see it—see your dentist. You may not be in for bad news—shocking news—but the only sensible move is to play safe. Usually, however, you'll find your dentist reassuring. Your gums are probably only the victims of our modern soft-food menus—gums robbed of work and exercise by our soft, creamy, well-cooked foods. And generally his advice will simply be—"vigorous chewing and more work for lazy gums"—and very often the excellent suggestion—"the stimulating help of Ipana Tooth Paste and massage."

Ipana and massage is a modern way of helping to promote solid, healthy gums—as well as sparkling, lustrous teeth. Massage a little extra Ipana into your gums each time you brush your teeth. You'll feel those lazy gums awaken. Circulation quickens within the gums. They tend to grow firmer. They become healthier, more able to resist dental disorders.

Change to Ipana and massage, today. Adopt this oral health routine and make your smile one you can be proud of—a smile that's brilliant, gay, sparkling white.

MANILA BUSINESS OPPOSING EARLY INDEPENDENCE

First Report of Quezon's Proposal in Washington Caused Stock Market Flurry.

FUTURE DEFENSE CAUSES WORRY

Contended That Islands Plan Can Not Be Made Effective for Freedom in Year or Two.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MANILA, April 3.—Manila and the entire Philippines have not yet recovered from the shock they received when Commonwealth President Manuel L Quezon made his proposal in Washington almost a month ago for complete independence late in 1938 or early in 1939.

The news was received in Manila just before noon. During the morning the stock and securities market had been strong, and stock averages had shown a gain of six points. When the first copies of the afternoon paper appeared on the streets prices dropped so fast that one of Manila's three stock exchanges considered suspending trading. At the close of the short afternoon trading all the morning's gains had been wiped out, and stock averages showed a loss of 12 points compared with the morning opening.

Stock traders were not the only ones unsettled over the Quezon proposal. Conservative business men, bankers, sugar growers and others were seized by the same fear of an impending business collapse. Nor did the radio talk broadcast from Washington by President Quezon have much of a reassuring effect on these business elements.

Quezon's Radio Appeal.

The talk which, according to original plans, was to have been an appeal to Filipino women to vote in the plebiscite on suffrage was almost entirely devoted to an explanation of the latest Quezon independence plan, together with an appeal to the people not to be excited or panicky. Along with a few unveiled thrusts at sugar men—most outspoken opponents of his proposal—Quezon appealed to his people not to "embarrass me" and to avoid "sending protests before you know what you are protesting about."

Quezon sought to allay fears of a major catastrophe with the assurance that along with independence on December 31, 1938, or on July 4, 1939, he was going to ask for a commercial treaty with the United States giving the Philippine preferential treatment for at least 10 years after independence, almost on the same terms as in the Tydings-McDuffie law.

Some Groups Won Over.

The appeal worked among certain elements, mostly those connected with the Government. Politicians, Government officials and others proclaime that there was no ground for fear of a catastrophe. Even a few conservative sugar growers started going around with something like a smill on their faces. Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo and others of his group who had been bitter critics of President Quezon up to a few days previous to his announcement of his new independence proposal hastened to send cables assuring Quezon they were with him.

But not the hard-boiled business man. Business circles continued to doubt the wisdom of an immediate independence plan, and the stock market continued to drop. The reason was that, according to them, Quezon's radio talk had nothing in it that they did not know before, and his reference to a trade treaty to be sought from Congress and the administration failed to reassure them. If President Quezon can get independence in 1938 or 1939 and a trade treaty besides, well and good, but can he get both? This is the questiont hey are asking.

Quezon's Argument.

Business circles point to what appears to them to be a fallacy in Quezon's talk. He said he was asking for early independence because Congress and the administration had refused to respect the Tydings-McDuffie independence act, and had passed laws inimical to the trade interests of the Philippines. According to him, the Tydings-McDuffie law was made binding on the Filipinos but not on Congress. This, according to Quezon, was an injustice which could not be allowed to pass without protest. Up to this point, everyone in the Philippines, American or Filipino, was inclined to agree with him.

However, many differ with him on the remedy he seeks. Opponents of his plan point out that, if Congress and the administration thought so little of the Tydings-McDuffie law as to amend it at will, there can be no basis for the hope that the same Congress and the same administration will be inclined to grant the Filipinos preferential trade treatment along with complete independence.

"How can Mr. Quezon assure us that the same Congress and the same administration that, according to him, have 'double-crossed us' on the Tydings-McDuffie law, will grant us a treaty giving us preferential trade treatment?" one American business man asked. "And waht assurances can he give us that, once a treaty is negotiated, it will be respected more than the present independence law in force?"

Defense Not Included.

On top of this, the absence from Quezon's talk of any reference to arrangements for defense of the Philippines has contributed to the doubts in many minds about the wisdom of the proposal for early independence. The national defense plan put into effect by an enactment of the National Assembly only a year ago is just beginning to work. The plan is based on a 10-year transition as outlined in the Tydings-McDuffie law. It contemplates a slow development of a Philippine army while the Philippines enjoy the full protection of the American Army and Navy. Obviously, with the present resources of the islands. the defense program cannot be speeded up much more than it has been to date. From 1938 or 1939 until 1946, when the defense program is to be completed, the islands will be at the mercy of any power which may want to control it by force of arms.

The one "out" on this point—neutralization of the Philippines through a treaty signed by the big powers—has already been discarded by Quezon himself. In numerous speeches and interviews Quezon has said that, as far as he is concerned, he is not interested in the neutralization plan because he has seen that such treaties do not work.

WALKING AS RECREATION SAID TO BE GAINING FAVOR

Ralph E. Mooney, Head of Missouri Walk-Ways, Reports Increase in Use of Trails.

Walking is returning to popular favor as a means of recreation, Ralph E. Mooney, recently elected president of the Missouri Walk-Ways Association, said yesterday. There has been a marked increase in the number of persons who use trails established in Forest Park and in suburbs.

The organization, formed to foster establishment of adequate paths and trails for hikers, has planned an extended program of activity for next year, he said. A path paralleling Highway 66 from Kirkwood to Gray Summit is contemplated.

Other officers named at a recent meeting were E. J. Hoffmann and Arthur Pfaff, vice-presidents; Karl C. Johanboeke, secretary, and Hermann Schwarz, treasurer. The association was organized two years ago under auspices of the St. Louis Community Council.

Accidentally Shot to Death.

John McClure, 41-year-old Negro, was shot and killed yesterday in his home at 8736 Rose avenue, Brentwood, by his housekeeper, Mrs. Nettie Travis, who told county authorities she fired the shot accidentally while handling a revolver belonging to McClure. Mrs. Travis' account of the shooting was corroborated by witnesses.

Henry Verdelin of Minneapolis, Minn., president of the American Institute of Banking, will address the St. Louis branch of the organization at its annual dinner meeting at 6:30 o'clock this evening in Hotel Jefferson.

Establishment of St. Louis Unit to Be Commemorated With Exercises in City Auditorium.

The fifty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the Salvation Army in St. Louis will be observed with exercises in the opera house of the Municipal Auditorium at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. Gen. Edward J. Higgins, former international commander of the Salvation Army, and Mrs. Higgins will be guests of honor at the ceremonies.

A band concert, starting at 1:50 p. m., by the Salvation Army Midland Divisional Band, will precede the formal exercises. Speakers will include Gen. Higgins, Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann, former Mayor Henry W. Kiel, treasurer of the Advisory Board of the Salvation Army in St. Louis; Dean Sidney E. Sweet of Christ Church Cathedral, Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman of Temple Israel, and Commissioner William McIntyre of the Salvation Army. The annual report of the St. Louis division will be presented by Lieutenant-Colonel Victor Lundgren, divisional commander. The band will play during the exercises and a quartet from the Second Presbyterian Church will sing.

Gen. Higgins, the speaker of the day, served as head of the International Salvation Army from 1929 to 1934, when he retired and was succeeded by Evangeline Booth.

Soviet Girl Volunteers Apply At Rate of 10,000 a Day to Go To Far East to Find New Homes

Promise of a Room to Themselves Lures City Dwellers—2,000,000 Men Previously Sent Into Siberia.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, April 24.—Lured by the promise of a room for themselves, guarantee of a job and virtual certainty of a husband, thousands of girls here daily volunteer for duty in the Far East.

Daily the Trans-Siberian Express leaving Moscow carries from 12 to 100 young women. They are the futures wives and mothers in a territory far greater, perhaps richer and less developed and populated than the United States west of the Mississippi, at the time of the Civil War.

The present movement is in response to a recent letter appearing in the Moscow press in which Valentina Khetagurova, wife of a Far Eastern army officer, made an appeal which said "come East, young woman, and help build an empire."

Military Necessity.

As in nearly every other big task in the Soviet Union, reclaiming of the Far East is motivated by military necessity. The vast territory from Lake Baikal eastward to the Pacific was in the hands of foreign "invaders" during the first two or three years of the Soviet rule, and is the area the Bolshevists now believe may be conquered by Japan unless it is properly opened up, colonized and defended.

In advancement of this three-point program the Government already has sent about 2,000,000 men to the Far East, but virtually no women.

So far there has been no estimate given of the number of girl volunteers for the Far East, but several hundred thousand are expected to make the trip. Within a few weeks of publication of the Khetagurova letter so many applications had been received here by the Far Eastern governmental agencies that 25 additional clerks had to be employed to handle the work.

Beginning with a few personal applications daily, this department now is taking applications at the rate of nearly 10,000 daily.

Room to Themselves.

Girls who are accepted are promised a room and a job, both compelling inducements to Soviet city girls where overcrowded housing conditions render their chances of getting a husband and a place to live remote indeed. There are thousands of cases in every city of young sweethearts who have to postpone their marriage year after year because of inability to find a place to set up housekeeping. Meanwhile they continue to live with their parents.

Khetagurova's letter said: "Far away in the wilderness we are building a wonderful country. In forests teeming with bears and other wild animals new cities are being founded, roads built, and invincible concrete fortresses erected. Millions of courageous people are fighting here to conquer mountains, forests and rivers. There is an appalling shortage of workers. I invite you to come to the Far East. Difficult but extremely interesting tasks await you. We need thousands of courageous girls. I request your help in spreading the call 'to the East for a wonderful future'."

The letter mentioned the need of machinists, teachers, artists, designers, bookkeepers, stenographers, nurses, chauffeurs and engineers—all occupations open to Soviet women.

Girls are being permitted to enlist in small groups with specification of the settlements or towns to which they wish to go. Hundreds are choosing Komsomolsk, the new city on the Amur River which is planned to be the future metropolis of the Far East.

The Far East, long neglected by the Czars, is a treasure house of minerals and natural resources. The greatest gold fields in Russia are there.

Minerals abound everywhere in the Far Eastern areas, agricultural land is good, there are vast forests, roads to be opened, fishery projects to be developed, industries to be built everywhere.

The Government has alloted nearly three billion dollars for capital construction there this year.

SOCIAL SECURITY CARDS FOR THOSE MORE THAN 65

Federal Board to Issue Them to Aid State Administration of Job Insurance Laws.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 24. — The Social Security Board decided today to issue security account numbers to all workers in commerce and industry to aid the state administration of unemployment insurance laws.

The 26,200,000 accounts issued to date have to do with Federal old-age pensions, to which only those who had not reached 65 years of age last Jan. 1, are eligible. Now account numbers will be issued to those more than 65 as well.

The states wanted to use the numbers for insurance purposes, so broader listings were found necessary. Many of the 18,500,000 covered by the insurance systems of 43 states and the District of Columbia have no pension accounts.

The new registration, to begin Tuesday will be voluntary. The same type of account card will be issued to those 65 years of age or more as to younger workers, for whom pension accounts are kept. Applications for account cards may be obtained at postoffices.

Man Killed in Row Over Dog.

HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION SESSIONS OPEN TO PUBLIC

Thirtieth Annual Three-Day Meeting Will Be Held Here Starting Thursday.

Sessions of the thirtieth annual meeting of the Mississippi Valley Historical Association Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Coronado Hotel and Washington University will be open to the public.

The purpose of the society is to advance research in American history and to collect and preserve historical material. Its journal, "The Mississippi Valley Historical Review," is devoted solely to material on American history.

Later he went to Harvard University, where he received his master's and doctor's degrees. In 1925 he was appointed collaborator in historical research in the United States Department of Agriculture and is now professor of history at the University of Oklahoma.

He will speak Thursday night at the annual dinner commemorating the Louisiana Purchase of 1804 at the Coronado hotel. The Missouri Historical Society and Washington University are sponsoring the dinner.

NDERGROUND 'BANKS' OPULAR IN NEW YORK

w the Due Bill System Works and Who Gets the Profits.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—New York has an underground banking system that operates without much cash, has no tellers, no vaults or even any banks, but it does a thriving business with a select clientele at a profit.

The men who run it are mysterious folk known to customers as due bill brokers.

The system begins with John Doe. Maybe John owns a night club. Business is declining. The place might be popular if it were renovated, but John has only $3000 and the improvements would cost $10,000. John would borrow from a bank if he could, but he is already too much in debt. So he goes to the due bill banker.

John won't tell his best friends who the banker is, or where his money comes from. The important thing is that the banker has the cash when John needs it. The banker gives John the $10,000, and in return John gives the banker $20,000 in due bills, which are merely a form of I. O. U. payable in merchandise at the night club.

Banker's Profit 20 Per Cent.

When this transaction is complete, the banker sells the due bills to several brokers at 60 per cent of their face value. Thus the banker collects 20 per cent profit on his investment.

The broker then peddles the due bills to people who want to go to the night club. His profit is nearly 12 per cent.

By the time the night club goer gets the due bill, it is in the form of a check, made out, perhaps, for $10. It can purchase only food, or pay cover charges; it is not good for liquor. But what it does buy, the customer gets at one-third less than the listed price.

Suppose the customer spends $10. Before he leaves the club that amount, the date and the customer's name are marked on the back of the check, along with the balance of the value of the due bill. Next day the customer takes the due bill back to the broker, pays $6.67 for his $10 worth of entertainment, and the broker peddles the rest of the due bill to somebody else.

Method Is Popular.

At first glance it appears that the night club owner foots a heavy bill, but he gets the money he needs to improve his business, and he repays the loan not in cash, but in food he sells at a profit. By the time it's all figured up, he figures he has had an even break.

Many New York night clubs have resorted to the due bill banking system at one time or another. So have some hotels and other establishments.

Not all due bills are handled by brokers. Some are handled directly by decorators or builders who make improvements on the payment in kind basis. In these cases, the decorators or builders act as their own brokers and use the same system.

NDON BUSMEN THREATEN TO WALK OUT ON MAY 1

eantime M. P.'s Threaten Stay-in in Commons Unless Proposed Defense Tax Is Cut.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 24.—London busmen announced today they would quit work May 1, demanding a 7½-hour day, joining several thousand transportation employes in 10 nearby counties who have struck for increased pay and shorter hours.

The newspaper Sunday Referee said disgruntled members of Parliament plan to stay in Parliament buildings through the coronation ceremonies unless Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, modifies his proposal for a national defense tax. The newspaper said there were enough members in the anti-tax movement to keep the House of Commons in session throughout the coronation festivities.

RRIS OPENS POWER SYSTEM

esses Button on 490-Mile Rural Line in Nebraska.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska pressed a telegraph button in the Senate office building today, starting a flow of power through a 490-mile rural electrification system of the Eastern Nebraska power district.

The project, designed to serve approximately 300 families, recently was completed in Pawnee, Otoe, Richardson, Nemaha and Johnson counties.

Gas Line to Oil Well Bursts.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., April 24.—A two-block area in the Northeast Oklahoma City residential section was endangered for a time today, when a high-pressure gas line at the No. 1 Sooner well of the Chief Drilling Co. burst. Workmen succeeded in turning the gas off in the line before any damage resulted.

SILVER JUBILEE OF KING OF DENMARK

Celebration to Begin May 15, Three Days After British Coronation.

By the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, April 24.—Three days after Great Britain crowns a new King, Denmark will begin a two-day celebration of the silver jubilee of its ruler, King Christian.

Festivities will start when the 66-year-old monarch and the Princess he made his Queen 38 years ago drive in state to the Copenhagen Cathedral.

After a service of thanksgiving, they will drive around the capital with an escort of royal hussars. A reception at the castle will be followed by a special performance in the royal theater.

A jubilee medal bearing the King's image will be struck and there will be a new circulation of 200,000 jubilee two-kroner pieces (worth slightly less than 50 cents).

Many Danes in the United States and Canada are contributing to a fund which will be dispersed to charities in the King's name.

The celebration will close with a levee and dinner at the castle.

Christian has tasted both loss and triumph in his 25-year reign—loss when he signed the act of Parliament making Iceland a separate kingdom, triumph when he rode in on a white charger to claim that part of Slesvig given to Denmark after the World War.

His sorrow over Iceland was especially deep, for he had vowed when he became King that he would leave the kingdom as he received it from his father. His joy over Slesvig was especially complete for his family originated in that German land.

$80,000 DAMAGE IN STORMS THAT HIT IN THREE STATES

Loss Is Estimated at $40,000 at Benton, Ark., Where Two Persons Were Killed.

BENTON, Ark., April 24.—Damage estimated at more than $80,000 was caused in Arkansas and Missouri early today by a tornado that hit sections of those states. Mayor L. B. White said damage done here totaled $40,000. Damage at Cape Girardeau, Mo., also was set at $40,000. More than 50 persons in the four states were injured.

Herman Zinn, 50-year-old farmer, and his son, Maxie, 12, were killed near here in the storm.

At Newport, Ark., hail described by residents as larger than hen's eggs dealt major damage, caused head injuries to three children, who required hospital attention.

Near New Madrid, Mo., five persons were injured, three seriously, as several farm homes were wrecked.

At Cape Girardeau the wind struck the industrial section near the Mississippi River, leveled one large building and several smaller units of an ice and fuel company.

By the Associated Press.

DOTHAN, Ala., April 24.—More than 20 persons were hurt when a storm struck the cottonwood community near here damaging 25 homes.

Mrs. J. C. Holsenback, 29, and her 2-year-old son suffered injuries today when wind destroyed their four-room frame home.

NEW 'X' PARTICLE FOUND IN STUDY OF COSMIC RAY

Has Ability to Penetrate Anything Without Losing Energy Two Doctors Say.

By the Associated Press.

PASADENA, Cal., April 24.—Discovery of a new "X" particle, observed in connection with cosmic rays, was disclosed today by Dr. Carl B. Anderson and Dr. Seth H. Neddermeyer of the California Institute of Technology.

Dr. Anderson recently was awarded the Nobel prize in physics for his discovery of the positron, positively charged twin of the electron.

The unnamed "X" particle, which is both positively and negatively charged, he said, is perhaps 1000 times as large as the electron. It was described as possessing an uncanny ability to penetrate anything without losing appreciable energy.

In the role of bullet the "X" does not, like other charged particles, generate photons or "sparks" of light in colliding with atoms. Instead, it appears to knock obstacles out of its path without producing secondary effects.

BILL TO LIMIT HOURS IN RETAIL STORES IS VETOED

Mayor Disapproves It After City Counselor Advises Him It Is Unconstitutional.

CRITICISES ACT AS SPECIAL LAW

Aldermen Expected to Sustain Dickmann, Though Only Two, Not Now on Board, Opposed Passage.

A bill passed by the Board of Aldermen April 9, limiting business time of larger retail stores to 10 hours a day and 60 hours a week, was vetoed by Mayor Dickmann yesterday.

City Counselor Edgar H. Wayman advised the Mayor it was unconstitutional as a special law and would unlawfully delegate legislative power to the Director of Public Welfare.

The bill undertook to give the Director of Public Welfare power to determine whether articles to be sold outside the time limit were properly entitled to exemption as articles of immediate necessity, under the terms of the measure.

Another limitation of the bill, classifying it as a special, rather than general, law, was the entire exemption of stores with annual sales volume of less than $35,000.

Veto Expected to Stand.

Although the bill was passed over dissenting votes of only two Aldermen, who no longer belong to the board, it was anticipated at City Hall that the board would sustain the Mayor's veto because of his domination of the Aldermen and because of the adverse legal opinion.

"I am returning this without my approval," said the Mayor in his veto message, "because the City Counselor has advised me its validity cannot be sustained under the Constitution of Missouri, which prohibits passage of any special law where a general law can be applicable.

"Furthermore, it is an unlawful delegation of legislative power to the Director of Public Welfare, and in addition it imposes conditions to issuing of a merchant's license which laws of the State do not impose.

"Impracticable of Enforcement."

"Other reasons which prompt me to disapprove the measure are that it is impracticable of enforcement. It would create on the part of proprietors of retail mercantile establishments a wide incentive for evasion of its terms by putting in stocks of goods within the category of articles of immediate necessity, in order to justify keeping their establishment open longer than the prescribed number of hours and then, during prohibited hours, to bootleg other articles commonly sold in such establishment, but which could not by any stretch of the imagination be considered articles of immediate necessity."

Wayman said to reporters last Wednesday, in announcing his opinion that the measure was unconstitutional, that it would be difficult to enforce and would require the employment of "snoopers" to watch all stores dealing in articles of immediate necessity.

Mayor Dickmann had been urged to veto the bill by the Chamber of Commerce executive committee and 17 city-wide and neighborhood retail organizations. They asserted it would work a hardship on many merchants. The Retails Clerks' International Protective Association and other labor groups sponsored the bill.

BONDING LIMIT OF EAST SIDE LEVEE BOARD IS EXTENDED

New Law Increases It by $500,000, Permitting Carrying Out of Projected Improvements.

A bill increasing the bonding limit of the East Side Levee Board from $2,250,000 to $2,725,000, or from 2½ to 3 per cent of the assessed valuation of the levee district, went into effect yesterday, on the expiration of the 10-day period after its passage by the Illinois Legislature, Gov. Horner having failed to act on the measure. Under Illinois law, a bill becomes law 10 days after its enactment by the Legislature unless the Governor vetoes it.

The measure was introduced to enable the board to proceed with several proposed improvements which have been delayed because the current bonded indebtedness of the board is $2,229,000, only $21,000 short of the limit.

The proposed improvements include acquisition of a right-of-way and other expenses in connection with strengthening the Mississippi river levees, the actual raising of the levees to be done by the War Department; construction of a sanitary trunk line relief sewer to serve the district, and conversion of Horseshoe Lake, a hunting and fishing resort in Madison County, into a storage basin for storm waters flowing down into Cahokia Creek. No estimate of the total cost of this work has been made.

ALDERMEN FIX TERMS BY LOT

Seven of 14 on New Belleville Board to Serve Four Years.

The 14 Belleville aldermen, elected April 6 under a new state statute, drew lots Friday night to determine the length of their terms. The law provides for half the number of the Board of Aldermen to be elected every two years for a four-year term, and that the terms for the first election under the law be decided by lot.

Those who will serve four-year terms are: William Mertens, Erwin Kraus, Arthur J. Wright, Clifford Thompson, Ernest W. Tieman, Cove Bailey and John L. Wellinghoff. The two-year term aldermen are: Stanley E. Sprague, Edward G. Schaab, Ervin Stein, Alfred C. Schmitz, Clement T. Gass, Adolph O. Rischar and Leslie C. Cole. They will take office next Saturday.

CARDINAL PITCHERS FAIL AGAIN AND CUBS WIN A SLUGFEST, 13 TO 12

Ray Harrell Weakens After a Fine Start; Birds Rally in Ninth

By J. Roy Stockton.

A powerful attack will not suffice in baseball. There must be an infield to stop bounding balls and pitchers who can throw curves and fast balls through the strike zone to confound enemy batters.

The Cardinals displayed a fine attack at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon, but grounders slithered through the third base terrain, a weak spot in the first line defense; too many of the Redbird pitchers were easy marks for the enemy and the Cubs of Charley Grimm won their first victory of 1937 by defeating the Gas House Gang, 13 to 12.

Frankie Frisch used six pitchers in a desperate effort, to stop the Chicago batters. He started with Ray Harrell, relieved with Si Johnson and Si didn't do a bad job at all. But by that time the Cubs were well out in front and Johnson retired for a pinch batter and Paul Dean went to the hill to test his ailing right arm, bolstered by a three-run Cardinal lead.

Paul threw with a fair speed, but Demaree singled on his first pitch and the younger Dean then filled the bases by walking O'Dea and Hack. Paul wanted to stay in there. His arm, he seemed to say, felt better than at any previous time this spring. But this was no time to experiment further, with a game in the balance and so Mike Ryba was called from the bull pen.

Cubs Like Ryba's Pitching.

Mike didn't have much, and his support faltered before Mike had fairly started. Jurges greeted Ryba with a grounder down the third base line and when the ball caromed off Bordagaray's glove and out to left field for a double, two thirds of that three-run lead had disappeared. Ryba then walked Clay Bryant, a pitcher, which is not a good thing to do, and before the inning ended the Cubs had changed an 8 to 5 deficit into a 10 to 8 advantage.

Even that wouldn't have been enough to beat the fighting Gas House Gang, who have displayed a surprisingly devastating punch after a spring of much impotent batting. But the Cubs added two more runs off Jim Winford in the seventh and another in the ninth and that was just enough to stand off the Redbirds and make their four-run ninth-inning splurge fall one run short of a tie.

Manager Frisch will have to do something else about that third-base problem. Bordagaray is doing the best he can, but he is an outfielder and it is only a makeshift infield at best when he is at third. Of course, he will improve, if he stays there. But it is questionable if the Cardinals can afford to make this a season of teaching somebody how to play the position.

Nothing Wrong With Attack.

As in previous games, the Cardinals showed commendable courage as they whacked away at the enemy and handicaps that easily could have been discouraging. A pass to Harrell and singles by Stuart Martin and Bordagaray gave the Redbirds a run in the third, but this seemed as nothing when the Cubs, using a low throw by Bordagaray as an opening wedge, took a 4-1 lead. Cavarretta was safe on the low throw and Collins singled him to third. Demaree doubled, O'Dea singled off Durocher's foot. Hack singled to center and Johnson relieved Harrell.

A wild throw by Ogrodowski, trying to pick Hack off first, advanced O'Dea to third and he scored, after Jurges' fly to Moore, with the fourth run of the inning.

This didn't perturb the Cardinals at all. Pepper Martin hit a home run into the left field seats in the fourth and in the fifth the Redbirds knocked out their old friend, LeRoy Parmelee. Ogrodowski started the rally with a single past Hack and Jimmy Brown, batting for Johnson, singled past Herman. Moore sent a one-bagger to left, Stuart Martin rifled one to right and when Bordagaray bounced one to left, trying to offset with his bat the damage he was doing with his glove, Bryant replaced Parmelee.

Medwick greeted the new pitcher with a line drive to center and when the ball bounced over Cavarretta's head and rolled to the center field wall, Joe turned it into a homer, scoring behind Stu Martin and Bordagaray.

After that blow, however, Bryant, striving to retain a place on the Cub payroll, was highly effective and the Cubs had increased their margin to 13 to 8 by the time the Cardinals went to bat in the ninth.

Grimm Makes a Good Guess.

Siebert opened the ninth by batting for Ogrodowski and walked and Padgett, for Winford, also drew a pass, Moore slashed a double to left, scoring Siebert and sending Padgett to third, and when Stuart Martin walked, filling the bases, Manager Charley Grimm called a halt and summoned Bill

PLAYERS FINED $25 EACH FOR FIGHTING

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 24.—Al Todd and Lee Grissom will each have to pay $25 for the fist fight they put on at opening day baseball game at Forbes Field.

Both Catcher Todd of the Pirates and Pitcher Grissom of the Cincinnati Reds received telegrams today from Ford Frick, president of the National League, telling them of the fine.

The players got into a scrap durin gthe Pittsburgh and Cincinnati game yesterday which the Pirates won, 4-3.

THE PUMMELING OF PARMELEE: Two Scores on One Hit

Six Cardinals crossed the plate in a rally which saw the rout of an old team-mate, Roy Parmelee, in the fifth inning yesterday. Jimmy Brown is shown above sliding over the rubber after Brusie Ogrodowski had scored on Stuart Martin's single. Ogrodowski, No. 9, is signalling Terry Moore to stop at third. The rally put the Cards ahead, but the Cubs won the game, 13-12.

War Admiral's Derby Odds Cut

Before the running of yesterday's race at Havre de Grace, the Kentucky Derby candidate, War Admiral, had forced his way into favor among the "future book" players. At odds of 10 to 1 he was heavily played in James J. Carroll's book and immediately after the race which he won so easily, his odds were chopped to 6 to 1.

There was no change in Carroll's odds against the other Derby candidates who ran yesterday, although two of them, Chicolorado and Mosawtre, won their races.

Tennis Matches Postponed.

The tennis matches scheduled to take place yesterday at Alton between the Principia Academy and Western Military Academy were postponed because of rain.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Next Stop, Tokio.

HAVING cleaned up Europe and America of all sprint tivalry, Helen Stephens, the "fastest woman in all the world," will now have to set her eyes on Tokio, to keep up her pep and her efforts to improve.

That's because Helen's prowess has risen to such a point that there is no longer any woman runner able to make it a race with her after the first 50 yards. Even then, the opposition can not win.

HELEN STEPHENS.

Olympic games, national championships and world records are hers. And she is still improving. So, "What's the use?" her would-be competitors argue.

However, there are still the national championships, still invitation meets, still handicap events and still international women's games other than the Olympics to keep Helen up and doing for the next four years.

By that time she will have developed into something undreamed of in women's sports, a few years ago.

Without a Peer.

EVEN now Helen is something of a marvel. Her best time for the 100 meters is 11.4, which a few years ago would have been considered good, even for men. It is six-tenths of a second better than the time for the Olympic 100 meters race at Athens in 1896. In four years it would not be surprising if she ran the 100 meters in 11 seconds flat.

By continuing her training for the shotput, the discus-throw and the javelin, Miss Stephens might also add a women's all-round championship to her repertoire. She already holds the American record for the shotput.

The real danger in her position ultimately will be that which confronted other standouts in sports, Jim Jeffries and Man O'War for example. Both were forced into retirement by lack of competition.

Pompoon Still Choice.

DESPITE the results of Saturday's tryouts by a score or so of Derby eligibles, today finds the name of Pompoon still in the forefront as favorite for the Kentucky Derby. The price is still short, as low as 4 to 1, because the books have been loaded up with early wagers on this candidate.

Unless you lend ear to the belief held in some quarters that Pompoon will not go the mile and one-quarter route, you are bound to accept Pompoon as a logical

War Admiral, off alertly, was under a slight grip while running with Court Scandal to the backstretch, moved away after being challenged by Court Scandal and Fairy Hill at the far turn, opened a good lead approaching the stretch, drew far out and was being taken in hand during the final 50 yards. Court Scandal, slightly bothered while in close quarters at the first turn, saved ground thereafter but could not threaten in the late stages. Over the Top, rated along to the stretch, closed willingly under pressure. Tedious was carried wide at the first turn, dropped back and rallied only mildly. Fairy Hill needs racing, faltered after being in the thick of contention to the stretch turn. Siam and Sunphantom had no excuses.

By the Associated Press.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 24.—War Admiral, Glen Riddle Farm's swift-striding Kentucky Derby nominee, stretched himself out over a mile and a sixteenth route for the first time today in the Chesapeake Stakes and performed so much like a champion that he was six lengths in front of the field at the finish.

Four other Derby eligibles were in the field of seven, but none showed the ability to run with the trim brown son of Man O' War. Closest to him at the wire was Townsend B. Martin's grey colt, Court Scandal.

A length farther back, in third place, was War Admiral's stablemate, Over The Top, another Man O' War offspring, eligible for the Preakness but not for the Derby. A. G. Vanderbilt's Derby eligible, Tedious, was fourth.

William du Pont Jr.'s chestnut gelding, Fairy Hill, second choice in the betting, did no better than fifth. Bomar Stable's Siam came along sixth and Charles S. Bromley's Sunphantom last.

War Admiral's triumph was no surprise to bettors among the crowd of 22,000, for they had backed him into odds-on favoritism. Coupled with his stablemate in the betting, he paid only $3.30 for $2 to win, $2.40 to place and $2.60 to show. His prize money amounted to $8250 net.

Eager to race, War Admiral got away first after a delayed start and was never headed. Jockey Charlie Kurtsinger had him under slight restraint to the back stretch. When challenged by Court Scandal and Fairy Hill, he drew away, hit the home stretch with plenty of reserve and speedily lengthened his lead.

War Admiral carried 119 pounds, the same as Fairy Hill and Court

INDIANA RELAY TEAM SETS NEW 4-MILE RECORD AT PENN GAMES

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—Indiana University's monopoly of major events in the forty-third Pennsylvania relay carnival was brought to a smashing climax today when Donald Ray Lash, the Hoosier "Iron Man," sprinted to triumph in the featured one-mile invitation race after anchoring a world record victory for his team in the classic four-mile college relay championship.

Lash, looking back over his shoulder with a triumphant grin, outraced and outsmarted Italy's Luigi Beccali, the favorite, as well as the veteran Gene Venzke of the New York Athletic Club in the crowning event of the two-day program. Durable Don, cheered by a crowd of 40,000 spectators at Franklin Field as he broke the tape four yards in front of Beccali, was nearly mobbed by hundreds of track and field enthusiasts after putting the finishing touches to a magnificent footracing job.

Fast Last Quarter.

Lash exploded a last 440 yards in 58.3 seconds to capture the mile but his time for the full route, 4:24.3, was far from sensational and paled by comparison with the beating that he and his teammates administered two hours earlier to pop time, and five rival teams, in the four-mile relay.

The distance classic, strictly a duel between the Hoosiers and the stop-watch from start to finish, ended with Indiana setting up a new world mark of 17 minutes 16.1 seconds and wiping out marks that have stood to the credit of America's greatest milers. It clipped more than five seconds off the officially listed record of 17:21.4, which the famous Joie Ray helped the Illinois A. C. team establish in 1923. It likewise eclipsed the pending world mark of 17:17.2, which the all-star United States quartet of Chuck Hornbostel, Gene Venzke, Archie San Romani and Glenn Cunningham set at London last Aug. 15 in the post-Olympic dual meet with British Empire athletes.

Lash clinched the record with a 4:17.2 mile, for the anchor leg, but the runner who made the new mark possible was his lanky Negro teammate, Jimmy Smith, who electrified the big crowd by reeling off the second mile in 4:14. This was the fastest performance in Smith's career. Mel Truitt, the leadoff man,

BOB FELLER FANS 11 IN SIX FRAMES BUT BROWNS WIN, 4-3

SCHOOLBOY HURLER IS REMOVED FROM BOX AFTER SLIGHT INJURY TO ARM

Jim Walkup Pitches Very Effectively for Hornsby's Club—Four Walks Aid in Browns' Big Opening Inning — Feller Gives 4 Hits, Walks Six Men.

By W. J. McGoogan.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

CLEVELAND, April 24.—Jim Walkup, an unheralded hope on the Browns staff of pitchers, scored a 4-to-3 victory over Bob Feller, highly publicized schoolboy of the Cleveland Indians' hurling corps here today. The victory gave the Browns an even break in the two games with Cleveland and in the four games of the season.

Feller pitched six innings when he retired because, it was reported by Cy Slapnicka, business manager of the Indians, he had pulled a muscle in his right elbow in the first inning.

Dr. Edward B. Castle, club physician, said the injury to the arm was not serious. Iowa Bob himself said he would be ready for action in a couple of days.

Ivy Paul Andrews, former Brownie, replaced Feller in the box but all the runs of the game had been made before. Thus, Feller was charged with the defeat in his first American League start of the 1937 season.

After a wild streak in the first and second innings the youngster settled down and pitched sensationally the rest of the time he was in the box and when he retired he had fanned 11 of the Browns and had given six bases on balls.

Walkup pitched courageously out of many tight situations and his teammates helped him considerably with heads-up play in the field. In all save three innings Cleveland put the first runner on base with Jim always having enough, except in one instance, to get out of the jams.

As the game wore along Walkup seemed to get better and only one Indian got a hit in the last three innings.

Feller was very wild in the first inning and the Browns waited him out to get four runs on four bases on balls and two hits. Knickerbocker started with a walk and Allen flied to Campbell. Vosmik singled to right, Knickerbocker stopping at second. Bell walked to fill the bases and Hornsby walked, forcing Knickerbocker home. Clift was called out on three straight strikes but Davis walked, forcing Vosmik over the plate. Hemsley was there in the pinch with a single to center, scoring Bell and Hornsby with what proved to be the winning run. Walkup fanned.

Knickerbocker walked to start the second inning as Feller continued wild and Allen singled to left. Vosmik bunted for a sacrifice but when Knickerbocker beat Feller's throw to third the bases were filled with none out.

Bell flied to Campbell. Then Hornsby was called out on strikes and Clift flied to Campbell to end the last real threat of the Browns for the afternoon.

Thereafter Feller was complete master. He fanned Davis, Hemsley and Walkup in the third and got Knickerbocker on strikes to start the fourth to give him four successive strikeouts. Allen lined to Averill who made a great running catch of his short drive. Vosmik walked but was out stealing.

Hornsby was safe on Hughes' wild throw in the fifth after Bell struck out and Clift lined to Campbell. Davis singled to left but Hemsley struck out.

In the sixth Walkup grounded to Hale while Knickerbocker and Allen were called out on strikes.

Andrews replaced Feller in the seventh and the Browns, held to two hits in the last three innings, had no real chance to score.

Walkup Had to Be Good.

Meanwhile Walkup's road was rocky. He got the first two men himself then Hornsby booted Averill's grounder and Trosky singled but Solters forced him at second.

Hale led off the second with a double and Campbell walked. Pytlak scored both runners with a double and rode home on Feller's single.

Hornsby waved frantically to the bull pen. Lary walked but Hughes forced him at second and Averill hit into a double play, Hornsby to Knickerbocker to Davis, the first of three which the Browns made.

From then until the end of the game Walkup got by without being scored upon although there were some tense situations for the youngster.

Trotsky opened the third with his second single and after Solters flied to Bell, Hale grounded into a double play, Knickerbocker to Hornsby to Davis.

Campbell walked to start the fourth and Pytlak beat out a nasty slow roller to Clift but Campbell over-ran second and was out, Clift

OTT HITS TWO HOME RUNS AND BARTELL ONE; GIANTS WIN, 3-0

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—The National League Champion New York Giants found the range into the short right-field stands in their own Polo Grounds today and topped the Boston Bees, 3 to 0, on Mel Ott's first two homers of the season and a round-tripper by Dick Bartell.

While Clyde Castleman pitched six-hit ball, the Giants generally were ineffective against Johnny Lanning, except for the circuit smashes. Ott hit his in the third and fifth and Bartell drove out his four-bagger in the fifth.

The victory was the Giants third straight of the campaign and their second in a row over the Bees, who helped them open the Polo Grounds for the year yesterday.

With today's nine straight innings without a run, the Bees have now gone 34 consecutive frames without crossing the plate. They failed to score in 16 innings against Philadelphia and 18 against New York. They had plenty of chances today, but three double plays by the Giants stopped them.

INDIANA SETS NEW 4-MILE RELAY RECORD AT PENN GAMES

HOOSIER TEAM RUNS DISTANCE IN 17 MINUTES, 16.1 SECONDS

Don Lash Defeats Italy's Beccali and Venzke in Mile Invitation Event—Peacock of Temple Is Double Winner.

and Tommy Deckard, third runner, were timed in 4:22.2 and 4:22.7 for their share in the record-smashing proceedings.

The Hoosiers finished fully 300 yards ahead of their nearest rivals, Cornell, and lapped the last of six starting entries, Yale. Penn State, Manhattan and Army finishing in that order behind Cornell, were equally outclassed.

Five First Places.

All told, Indiana carried off five first places in two days of competition and contributed three of the six record performances registered during the carnival.

The pupils of E. C. (Billy) Hayes, the Indiana track coach, dominated the final half of a program marked otherwise by Manhattan's decisive conquests in both the mile and two-mile relay championships, an individual "double" for Temple's Eulace Peacock in the 100-yard dash and broad jump, and the heart-breaking disqualification of North Texas Teachers College's sprinters in the final of the 880-yard relay title event.

The North Texas boys, including the Brown twins, Elmer and Delmer, lost a new carnival record as well as first place when they were ruled out for twice failing to pass the baton within the zone limit. Running a front race from the gun, the Texans beat Indiana by five yards and were clocked in 1:26.3, beating the meet record set last year by the University of Texas.

The same North Texas quartet, comprising Stovall, Chrisman and the Brown brothers, showed their courage by coming back to capture the Class "B" one-mile relay championship with another record-smashin gperformance.

The remaining record achievement of the final day was turned in by Western Michigan Normal, winner of the special mile relay for Teachers' Colleges. The time, 3:23, clipped three-tenths of a second off Western Michigan's own mark for the event, set in the 1935 carnival.

An Eastern Winner.

Cornell, by capturing the 480-yard shuttle hurdles relay title in a brisk final timber-topping duel with North Carolina, helped Manhattan's footracers to avert a threatened rout of the Eastern "old guard" in the main team events. Penn State was third and last in the final.

Manhattan's two-mile relayers, Reilly, Neilly, Borck and Burns, breezed home in front of New York University, which shaded Yale for the runner-up spot. Six other starters, including Duke, were outclassed, but the Jaspers' winning time, 7:53.8, was nowhere near the record.

Doubling up, Borck and Burns combined with Riordan and Lundell to carry Manhattan's colors to another decisive victory in the classic mile relay. Princeton's hopes were soon extinguished when Bob Thum pulled a muscle and was forced to quit, soon after taking the baton in second place, at the heels of Manhattan's Riordan.

Peacock, repeating the "double" he scored in 1935 at the Penn relays, won the broad jump at 24 feet, 1 inch, after outfooting a crack intersectional field in the 100-yard dash. The Temple Negro flyer took his trial heat in 9.7 seconds and stepped the final in 9.8 to beat Columbia's Ben Johnson by two feet, with Marty Glickman of Syracuse third and Bobby Packard of Georgia fourth.

The high-jump favorite, Dave Albritton of Ohio State, who is coholder of the world outdoor record, lost the decision to Al Threadgill, his dusky rival from Temple. Both cleared 6 feet, 5 inches, but Threadgill had fewer misses and was declared the winner.

Other Victors.

Other individual winners were: Sanborn of Army in the javelin, at 213 feet, 11 inches; Bill Harding of Yale, who cleared 13 feet, 5 inches, to beat his Columbia rival, Dick Ganslen, and Bill Lynch of Princeton, with 151 feet, 4¼ inches in the hammer throw.

FRANCIS WINS TWO EVENTS IN DRAKE RELAYS; NO MARKS SET

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., April 24.—Archie San Romani, mighty little flier from Emporia, Kan., gave the famous Rideout twins of Texas a lesson in distance-running today, and five Rice Institute sprinters sped to a pair of championships in the rain-drenched twenty-eighth annual Drake Relay carnival.

The two-day relay and special event classic of the Middle West provided today's 12,000 soaked and half-frozen spectators with much in the way of thrills, but for the first time within the memory of the oldest veteran, not a single record in the college and university divisions was damaged. Starting in a fine mist, the meet closed in a chilling drizzle and finally caused the pole-vaulters to finish in Drake's field house.

San Romani was after a new world record to replace Paavo Nurmi's six minutes, 42.5 seconds for the one and one-half mile run outdoors, set in 1925. He didn't miss it by so much, covering the odd distance in 6:46.9, and with better conditions, might have achieved his goal. He did, however, give the Rideouts, Wayne and Blaine, of the North State Texas Teachers College at Denton, a rousing beating.

200 Yards Lead.

San Romani had a good 200 yards margin over Wayne Rideout, with Brother Blaine at his shoulder.

The boys in the field events worked hard without producing anything like their best performances. The marks made yesterday in the shot put and javelin trials stood up today, with Sam Francis, Nebraska's All-America full back and Olympic weight man, winning the former event at 51 feet, 5½ inches. Alton Terry from Hardin-Simmons College in Texas retained his javelin title with 218.09 feet.

Francis, who won the discus yesterday, completed his second straight "double" by adding the shot title today. Mel Walker, Ohio State's Negro high jumper, won his event at six feet, 3⅝ inches.

The Rice delegation started with a triumph over the University of Texas' four sophomores, in the 440-yard relay, Jack Ellington, Ed Steakly, Paul Sanders and Willard Moser hustling through the mist in 42.5 seconds, a second slower than the meet record hung up by Illinois in 1933. With Bert Carr replacing Sanders, the Owls took the half-mile relay in a battle with Kansas University in 1:28.8.

The rest of the program was pretty much a Big Ten party. Wisconsin, with Bradford Towle, Lloyd Cooke, Charles Fenske and Walter Mehl doing a front-running act from the start, won the four-mile relay in 17 minutes, 50 seconds, almost 10 seconds slower than the meet record established by Indiana's great team last year.

Illinois, represented by Duane Cullinan, Clare Lehmann, Dick Brunton and Jack Robinson, scored its second straight triumph in the 440-yard shuttle hurdles relay. The Illini, timed in 1:01.7, whipped Nebraska by about 14 yards.

Bobby Grieve won the 100-yard dash by a couple of inches over Ed Toribio of Oklahoma, for Illinois' second victory of the day. Grieve, away in front, just lasted to withstand Toribio's finish, with Rice Institute's Carr, and Mack Robinson, Negro speedster from Pasadena Junior College, third and fourth, not more than a foot from the winner. Grieve's time was 9.8 seconds.

Jack Kellner, tall Wisconsin star who won the Big Ten 120-yard high hurdles in 1935 but was held back by illness last year, defeated Jack Patterson of Rice, in 14.9 seconds. Jack Robinson, Illinois, landed third by a scant margin over Jack Donovan of Dartmouth.

BEARS OUT-ERR WESTMINSTER, 8 TO 6, BUT WIN GAME, 5-4

Coach Gale Bullman's Washington University Bears and the Westminster Bluejays of Fulton, Mo., gave an interpretation of "A Comedy of Errors" yesterday afternoon at Liggett Field under the guise of a baseball game, and when the last miscue had been recorded it was found that the Bruins, although out-fumbling the Fulton lads eight to six, had won, 5 to 4.

The fumbling began early. In the first inning two errors gave Westminster a run. Again in the third the Bears presented the Bluejays with two more. Rauscher was safe on an error by Harris, advanced to second on a single by Lane. Both runners moved up on a walk to Catcher Grossman and scored on two wild pitches by Steve Hopkins.

In the fifth Bob Gerst, who replaced Hopkins on the hill for the hill for the Bears, was the victim of more sloppy fielding that enabled Grossman to cross the plate after reaching first on a bobble.

The out-state boys were not to be overdone in generosity, however, and proceeded to donate Bullman's charges a pair of scores in the seventh.

In the eighth, trailing 4 to 2, Dick Douglas got a life when Lane missed his grounder. Harold Tracy was hit by a pitched ball. Al Iezzi, Washington's husky backstop, then cracked out a long triple to right center that tied the game, and continued home to count the winning run when Cederstrom overthrew home.

SPORT SALAD

Strategy.

Clark Griffith, who used to provide a special box for wives of ball players, found that by the end of the third inning nobody would be speaking to anybody else. Now Griff scatters the fond wives all over the stadium and contentment reigns supreme.—Exchange.

CLARK GRIFFITH, sometimes called "Old Fox,"
For players' wives once had a box;
He bunched his wives, as one might say
But found the system did not pay.
Each others' hubbies they would blame
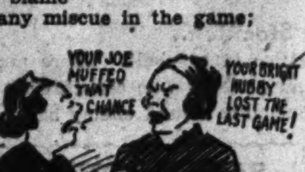
For any miscue in the game;



YOUR JOE MUFFED THAT CHANCE
YOUR BRIGHT HUBBY LOST THE LAST GAME!

So as they failed to harmonize,
Old Griff concluded it were wise
To keep them scattered like the hits,
As widely as the stand permits.
And the moral is, says Griff, the Fox,
"Don't put your wives all in one box."

Carl Hubbell's initial essay of the season was a three-hit-no-runner against the Boston Bees. If the old Maestro has lost any of his cunning the Bees failed to find it.

As this may be the "rabbit's" last year in the old horsehide, the players seem to be taking an extra vicious cut at it.

HAMMER the horsehide while ye may
With eclat and precision;
The dead ball will return, they say,
And get the fans' decision.

It was "Ripper" Collins who started the Cubs' three-run rally in the sixth inning of the game Friday and Johnny Mize, his successor, who pulled the game out of the fire and put it on ice with a single in the ninth inning. Fair enough.

And the band played "The March of the Cardinals," written by George M. Cohan, the author of "Over There" and other inspiring ditties. Maybe it is one of those tunes that will grow on you.

They are putting out a new type of cushion at the ball park this year that looks pretty soft in case the fans want to stage a sitdown strike for a 5-cent bag of peanuts.

OUGHT TO HAVE A FOOTSTOOL TOO!

"Shanty" Hogan does not aspire to the role of Tarzan in the movies but he wouldn't object to taking a shot at "The Thin Man" if he could make weight.

However, as Shanty is tipping the beam at 235 he isn't causing Bill Powell many sleepless nights.

Jack Chesbro of the Yanks started 54 games and finished all of them in 1904. He won 41, lost 1 and tied one. For which he probably received as much as [illegible] bucks.

Later on Babe Ruth probably received more than the whole Yankee team of that year.

United States Playing Card Co. reports a substantial improvement during three months ending March 31, and profits for the full year are expected to be at least 25 per cent better than in 1936.—Trade note.

Indicating that the New Deal is working out all right as far as the card game is concerned.

Too True.

IN them thar cards there may be dough,
Depending on the way they go;
But that old poker term, "How many?"
Can cost a guy a pretty penny.

choice because of his great two-year-old record and his fine victory this year in the Paumonok.

There are, however, some who believe that this first race of the year for the son of Pompey did him more harm than good. It is reported in the East that both owner and trainer were wearing long faces after Pompoon's victory.

It certainly seemed unwise to put him to the severe test of conceding older horses from 9 to 20 pounds weight.

The following figures will show what a severe task was set Pompoon by the handicapper who gave even that splendid sprinter Tintagel, fresh from a winter campaign, 10 pounds or two lengths advantage over his younger rival.

Dempsey Scores Another Knockout.

JACK DEMPSEY has added another knockout to his record. That is to say, his recent suggestion as to the boxing game certainly goes as a kayo. Jack wants an absolute authority appointed—a Moses to lead the boxing tribe out of the wilderness.

At present the Philistines are in complete control. The game has been commercialized out of all semblance to sportsmanship or sporting sentiment even on the part of the athletes themselves. This is due to the manipulations of promoters, who have a finger in the earnings of all fighters of importance.

The present ridiculous impasse in the heavyweight championship division is due entirely to lack of sportsmanship on the part of everybody concerned with Joe Louis and Jimmy Braddock.

The man who most deserves recognition has been railroaded out of the picture. We refer to Max Schmeling. If ever a boxer was cheated out of his dues, Max is one. Schmeling proved his right to a shot at the title in the most unmistakable manner. He trounced the vaunted Joe Louis in convincing fashion by knocking him out. He suffered double financial handicap because he paid not only the heavy American tax on his earnings but a German tax as well. He was put to every inconvenience.

Still he accepted the Louis fight, with no title attached, and proved himself the better man. He knocked out the boxer who knocked out the fighter whom Braddock barely outpointed to gain the crown.

Thumbs Down on Max.

HIS rights were so well recognized that the champion readily agreed to fight Schmeling after Max's victory. Then the undermining began. The Louis influences tried to break his first contract and succeeded. But a new contract was drawn between Max and the champion. And that, too, has been abrogated by the same influences. They are confident that Schmeling will lose in the legal battle to establish his rights.

If Louis is allowed to fight Braddock first, all fairness will have disappeared from the picture and the situation reduced to just a sordid financial matter, which has every appearance of being a campaign to make the Negro champion.

The situation emphasizes the power of the Louis group. It is too great for the good of the game. Only a czar can break up this sinister control. And if one is demanded, our vote will go for the Old Mauler himself—William Harrison Dempsey, one clean guy and a sportsman with it.

TWO RUNS IN LAST INNING GIVE BEAUMONT 6 TO 5 VICTORY

ROOSEVELT IS BEATEN WHEN MORAN BATS IN WINNING SCORES

Blue Jackets' Triumph Is Their Third Straight in City League—Cleveland in Tie for Lead.

Cleveland and Beaumont put on garrison finishes for their third victories of the season yesterday at the Public Schools Stadium to remain undefeated and tied for the City High Baseball League lead.

The South Siders pushed across one run in the sixth inning and three in the seventh to defeat McKinley, 6-3, while Beaumont's Blue Jackets shoved over two runs in the final frame to shade Roosevelt, 6-5. Central took the morning game of the weekly tripleheader by overwhelming Blewett, 15-8.

Rick Moran's lazy single to center field in the seventh inning with two mates on base and two out, enabled Beaumont to keep its slate clean.

Two Previous Rallies.

Twice before their winning rally the Bluejackets had come from behind to tie the Rough Riders. Roosevelt scored two runs in the second inning, but Beaumont evened the count in its half of the inning. The South Siders scored twice more in the third and Beaumont again tied the score with two runs in the fourth.

Roosevelt tallied once in the seventh. Then Beaumont placed runners on second and third and Moran came through with his timely hit.

Cleveland was trailing 3-2 in the sixth inning, when Pitcher John Eckmayer donated the tying run by walking Ed Huether with the bases loaded. There was one out in the seventh inning when Bill McKenna and Ray Dietz of Cleveland hit consecutive home runs into the right field stands to stow away the verdict for the Carondeleteers.

10-Run Inning.

Central was waging a losing battle until the sixth inning when it batted around nearly twice to score 10 runs. Ed Linehan's home run with three on base and one by George Cassor with two bases occupied featured the North Siders' big inning.

Bert E. Fenenga, the Cleveland coach, removed his team from the field in the fourth inning of that game when he objected to a ruling made by the plate umpire. A spectator interfered with Catcher John Marciak of McKinley who was attempting to catch a foul fly and the Cleveland batsman was declared out for interference.

Fenenga contended that interference applied only to members of his team and after a half-hour debate decided to let his team continue under protest. The Carondelet school won the game anyhow.

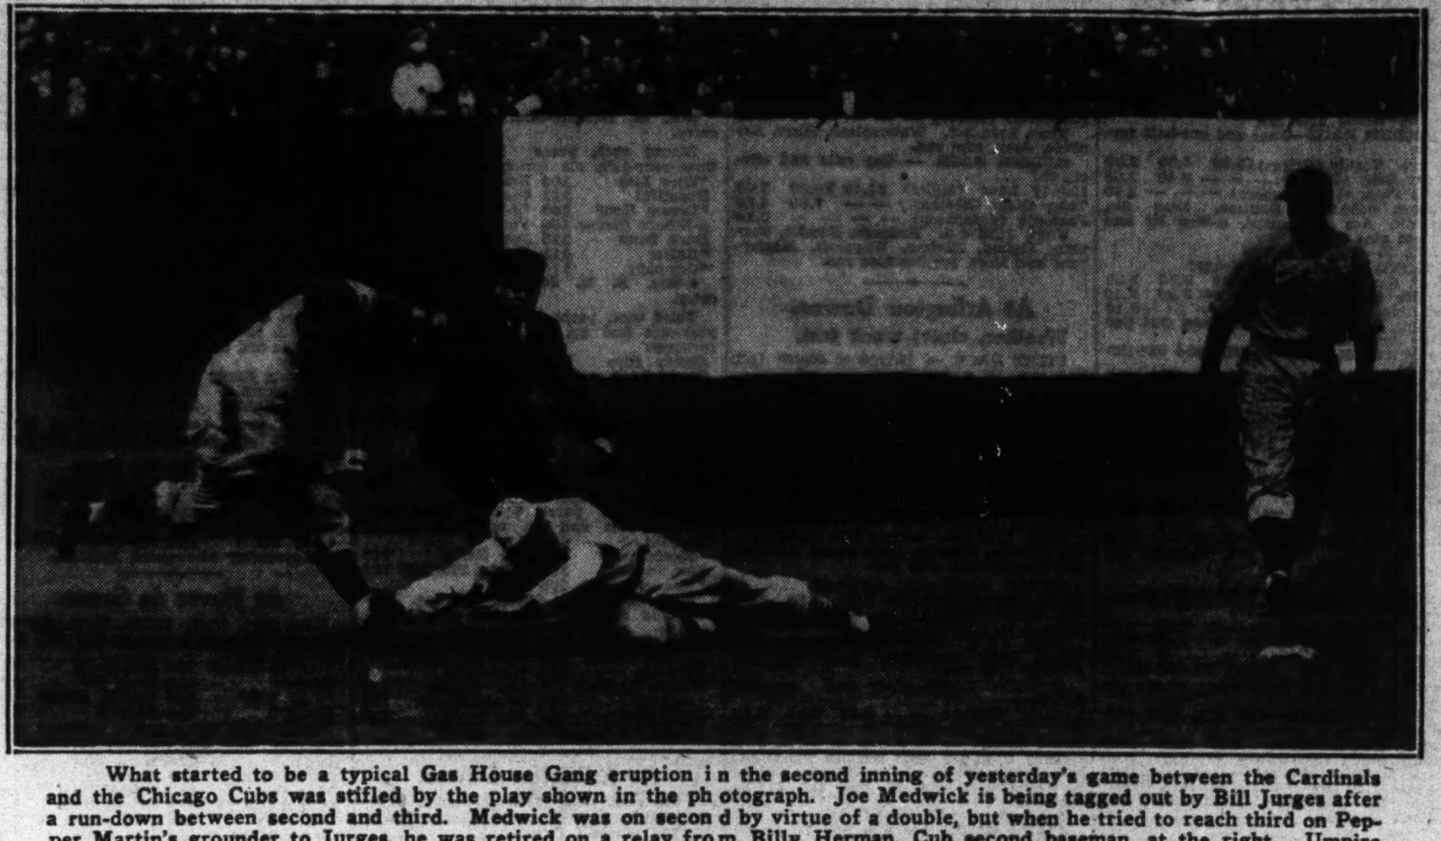
A Gas House Gang Explosion Is Smothered



What started to be a typical Gas House Gang eruption in the second inning of yesterday's game between the Cardinals and the Chicago Cubs was stifled by the play shown in the photograph. Joe Medwick is being tagged out by Bill Jurges after a run-down between second and third. Medwick was on second by virtue of a double, but when he tried to reach third on Pepper Martin's grounder to Jurges, he was retired on a relay from Billy Herman, Cub second baseman, at the right. Umpire Barr is looking on.

BILLIKENS DROP BOTH GAMES OF DOUBLE HEADER

Capitalizing on 16 errors of commission and numerous tactical blunders, the Illinois College baseball team of Jacksonville won both games of a doubleheader with St. Louis University yesterday afternoon at Forest Park. The scores were 10 to 6 and 13 to 9.

The double setback gave the Billikens a record of three straight defeats in contrast to a seven-game winning streak that was ended by Washington U. Thursday. The Billikens, who won their first game with the Bruins, play them again Wednesday.

Joe Topick, a right-handed sophomore, permitted the Billikens five hits and six runs in the five innings he was on the mound for the victors. Clayton Lambert, who assumed the pitching duties, turned the Billikens down in one-two-three fashion for the remainder of the first game. He struck out five.

In the second game, which was called at seven innings by mutual agreement, Cliff Amiedi, junior, gave four walks and a hit to give the Billikens a two-run lead in the first inning. The Illinois team retaliated in the second inning to put the game on ice with a seven-run rally.

Carl Yates, lefthander, who opened on the mound for St. Louis in the final game, gave six hits and 10 runs before being relieved by Reilley after four and a third innings. Sulu Mattson, who replaced Amiedi, had a little difficulty in the third inning when Sid Mudd, Bob Ryan and Yates were hit by his pitches. A wild pitch and two walks assisted the Bills to four runs that inning.

Lee, the big relief man, from the bull pen. Bordagaray's fly to center scored Padgett and after Medwick sent a short fly to left, Mize walked, again filling the bases. Pepper Martin gave the fans their final thrill with a single to center that scored Moore and Stuart Martin and sent Mize to third, but after Pepper stole second, Capt. Leo Durocher, in a bit of an early slump, struck out to end the ball game.

It was the first defeat of the year for the Redbirds, just as it was the first victory for the Cubs. And it would have been such an easy one to win if the pitching or the infielding had been just a tiny bit better.

Redbird Notes

Dizzy Dean will oppose the Cubs in the series final this afternoon, with Bill Lee due for the visitors. The Pittsburgh Pirates open a series at Sportsman's Park tomorrow.

The second game with the Cubs attracted 4583 cash customers, 3197 boys and 2045 girls.

A strong wind was blowing toward the center field fence, making it difficult for the players to judge flies.

Cavarretta, who played first base for the Cubs through 1935 and 1936, made a perfect throw from center field to retire Stuart Martin, trying to go from first to third on Bordagaray's single in the third inning.

Bordagaray had a tough few minutes in the fifth inning. Galan led off with a bunt that started foul and then skidded into fair territory for a single. Herman followed with a single off Frenchy's shin and Cavarretta hit a wind-blown foul that Bordagaray pursued in a circle but failed to reach.

Pepper Martin overslid second on an attempted steal in the fifth inning and when he scrambled to his feet and saw Herman holding the ball, Pepper dashed for third, but was caught in a run-up and retired. He was credited tentatively with a stolen base, although he did not have the bag "under control."

While Durocher was batting in the ninth, about 50 members of the new Cardinal Girls' Club left their seats in the lower right-field wing of the grand stand and stepped through a gate to the field. Umpire Moran spied them and play was suspended while the girls, rather unwillingly, were chased back to the stand. The gallant Umpire Magerkurth helped by boosting half a dozen of the girls over the concrete wall.

MUNGO LOSES SECOND TIME; PHILS WIN, 7-3

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—The Phillies leaped on Van Mungo for six runs in the seven innings pitched by the strikeout king today, and with that went on a 7 to 3 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Lamaster hurled brilliant ball for the Phils, and experienced only two bad innings.

Cookie Lavagetto, the ex-Pirate, had a bad day afield to keep the Dodger pitchers in jams, making three glaring and costly errors.

Mungo was defeated also on the opening day.

Browns Win Over Bob Feller; Young Right-Hander Hurts Arm

to Hornsby. Feller fanned and Lary grounded to Clift.

Walkup passed Hughes to start the fifth but he was picked off first a moment later on Hemsley's snap throw to Davis.

Nice Play by Clift.

Then in the sixth Hale walked after one was out and Campbell doubled to right sending Hale to third but he tried to score when Bell's throw to Knickerbocker got away from the shortstop. Clift retrieved the ball and nailed Hale at the plate.

That was the last real desperate situation for the Indians got only one more hit that by Andrews in the seventh and he was forced on Lary's attempted sacrifice. Hughes lined to Bell and Lary was doubled off first. Averill walked in the eighth but was forced at second and the Indians went out in order in the ninth.

Brownie Notes.

CLEVELAND, April 24.

FOR the series final tomorrow, Julio Bonetti likely will pitch for the Browns, with Dennis Galehouse due for the Indians.

Immediately after the game, the Browns move to Detroit to open a three-game series Monday.

A crowd of 12,000 attended the game.

The Browns forced Feller to make 33 pitches in the first inning.

There were cries of "take him out" during Feller's first bad inning as he walked four batters. The kid will get used to that.

Bob has what appears to be a very hard-working pitching motion, swinging his right arm behind him, throwing his left leg high into the air and coming through with the right arm following the left, the arms describing almost a complete circle.

Hornsby was called out on strikes in the second inning with the bases filled. He pulled away from the third one, which appeared to be high and inside, but Umpire Johnston ruled that he had swung. An appeal to Umpire Summers at third base was futile.

Trosky's single in the second hit near the top of the rightfield screen, but it went so fast he had no chance to make second.

Hughes walked to start the Indians' fifth, but as Averill swung at the first pitch, Hemsley picked Hughes off first with a quick throw to Davis.

The Indians threatened in the sixth when Hale walked with one out. Campbell hit the screen in right for a double, Hale reaching third. Bell threw to Knickerbocker, trying to head off Campbell, and the ball got away from the shortstop. Hale tried to score, but Clift retrieved the ball and threw to Hemsley, getting Hale at the plate. Clift then made a nice catch of Pytlak's foul.

One feature of the game which probably had a great deal to do with the result was that the wind was blowing a gale through the pitcher's box toward the batter. Several really hard-hit balls by both sides which normally would have hit the fence were just easy outs.

While Feller was in the box, the Cleveland infield had only two ground balls to handle. One Hughes booted and the other Hale handled. The last was the only putout for Trosky in that stretch.

CHICOLORADO HEAD VICTOR IN FIELD WITH DERBY HORSES

40-TO-1 SHOT THRILLS 20,000 RUNNING SECOND IN STUYVESANT

Charing Cross Fails to Perform Up to Expectations in 1937 Debut, Winding Up Ninth.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Mrs. Payne Whitney's Chicolorado, a brown son of Chicle and Robins' Egg, saved the Kentucky Derby and Preakness candidates from a shutout in the Stuyvesant Handicap today when he scored a thrilling photo finish victory in the revival of the six-furlong stake at Jamaica.

Clashing with 11 other 3-year-olds, seven of which also are eligible for either the Derby or Preakness, the Whitney colt chalked up his second straight victory of the year by the narrow margin of a head over Vamoose, a 40-to-1 shot maiden representing the Falaise Stable. A scant half-length farther back came the tiring Guy Fawkes in the silks of A. C. Norris. Neither Vamoose nor Guy Fawkes is eligible for the rich stakes.

Marshall Field's Charing Cross, a Derby hopeful making his 1937 debut, was a 9-to-2 favorite in the open betting affair to win the purse of $4425. Although meeting with early interference the Field colt showed little ability to warrant the trip to Churchill Downs, May 8. He finished ninth.

Guy Fawkes, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Airflame and Gold Band from the Bomar Stable ran themselves out in vying for the early lead while Eddie Arcaro did a fine job of rating Chicolorado, held at 5 to 1, to the final quarter.

Taking to the outside at the home turn, Chicolorado closed in steadily. He took the lead within the last furlong but was driving hard at the finish to stave off the unexpected challenge of Vamoose.

Derby horses in the Glenmore Purse, a six-furlong supporting feature, did better by themselves with Julia M. Loft's Mosawtre and Field's Sir Damion finishing one, three in the field of seven 3-year-olds. Royal Reigh, one of Mrs. Dodge Sloane's eligibles, wound up fourth after setting the early pace.

WAR ADMIRAL SHOWS FITNESS FOR DERBY, WINS BY 6 LENGTHS

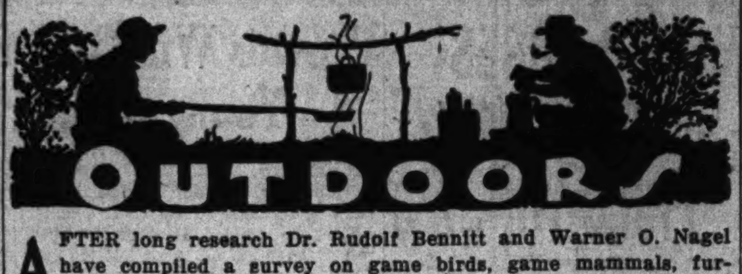
Scandal. The others had 114 each.

The winner's time of 1:45 was short of the stake record, although the track was fast. It might have been much faster if he had been under pressure.

Trainer George Conway was highly pleased with the colt's performance. "He ran like a champion," Conway commented, announcing at the same time he would ship War Admiral early next week for Churchill Downs for the Derby.

Walter M. Jeffords' Matey, a son of Man O' War being pointed for the preakness, was scratched from the stake, but worked out between races, turning in a creditable performance. He clipped off a mile in 1:40 without any urging.



AFTER long research Dr. Rudolf Bennitt and Warner O. Nagel have compiled a survey on game birds, game mammals, furbearers and predators in Missouri. This is the first time a state has had such an intensive survey made and interest shown in the survey at the recent Wildlife Convention indicates that several other states will soon be progressing toward similar surveys.

Three agencies co-operated in making this work possible, the Missouri Game and Fish Department, the National Park Service and the University of Missouri. The "Survey of Resident Game and Furbearers of Missouri," as the book is entitled, is published as one of the "university studies."

The game survey has three main objectives: (1) to determine the present distribution ,abundance and living conditions of the resident game and fur-bearing species of Missouri; (2) to determine the past present disturbance, abundance and these species in the State and the conditions that have been responsible for the decline of most of them; (3) to formulate, on the basis of the information gathered by the first two steps, recommendations for future management of wild-life resources of Missouri, so that these species may be restored to their maximum numbers as far as is consistent with other forms of land use.

Missouri-Illinois Parkway.

From the manner in which the Missouri State Senate passed the Missouri-Illinois Parkway Authority bill Tuesday it would seem that a scenic route through the two states extending from Cook County (Ill.) to the southwest corner of Missouri will soon become a reality. Approximately 500 miles of such routes will be constructed through Missouri and funds for the project are to be supplied by Federal grants as a part of the program to remove submarginal land from agricultural use and to provide employment for non-skilled workers.

The parkway would be constructed primarily for pleasure vehicles and will range from 400 feet to one mile in width which would give ample room for landscaping as well as acting as a defense against billboards and commercial uses.

The Parkway as planned, will cross the Mississippi at Alton and take in four Missouri parks, Lake of the Ozarks, Lake Taneycomo and the White River country before ending near Springfield.

Missouri has two parkways under development at the present. The Henry Shaw Garden-Way, west of St. Louis, was started in October of 1935 with the landscaping of highway 66 from the western limits of the city of St. Louis to the junction of U. S. 50 at the Bourbeuse River. The other parkway is on U. S. highway 54 extending from Bagnell Dam on the Lake of the Ozarks to Camdenton.

Partridge Propagation.

Twenty-five years ago Missouri sportsmen raised several hundred Hungarian partridges and distributed them throughout the State. Apparently the birds lived for a few seasons and then disappeared.

Rod and Gun of the Kansas City Star mentions that a group of sportsmen of Ottawa (Kan.) are turning over eggs to CCC boys who will raise approximately 400 of this rare species. The development of these partridges will be watched with interest by Missourians who might propagate a few for the local shooters in case they are easily raised in the neighbor state.

Another game bird that has apparently diminished beyond replacement in Missouri is the pinnated grouse, commonly called the prairie chicken.

Thirty-five years ago the prairie chicken was a resident of more than 40 Missouri counties in uncertain numbers; today, there is an estimated total number of less than 10,000 in the State.

Iowa has tried to propagate this bird but it seems that as the blue grass is turned under to make way for farming there is nothing on which the grouse can live.

Missouri might well follow in the steps of the Wisconsin Conservation Department which has developed a raccoon breeding department which will turn out 8000 young raccoons per year for distribution among the various coon counties of Wisconsin.

This was deemed necessary because of the increase of coon hunters as well as a decrease of the hunted. Missouri is ranked by many to be the real 'coon State of the nation and yet 'possums outnumber the 'coons so greatly that we sometimes wonder why the "coon hound."

The Four County Bait and Fly Casting Club has been organized at Windsor (Mo.) and plans are being made to hold tournaments every Sunday according to W. G. Davis, president. . . . H. Chicolorado, away well and clear of interference, came around leader in stretch and, closing with a rush, just got up to win. Vamoose, away in a tangle, worked his way up and finished with a rush and might have won in another stride. Guy Fawkes opened a wide gap entering stretch but stopped to a walk in final sixteenth. Jewell Dorsett closed a big gap. Airflame tired setting the pace. Charing Cross suffered interference but failed to show any speed when clear. Gold Band flash of early speed.

University City High School's ack team, despite winning only ree firsts, two in the seniors and e in the juniors, won both divisions of the district track and field eet at Maplewood High School's eld yesterday afternoon. The Indians scored 28½ points in the sen- rs to Kirkwood's 19. Roosevelt was third with 18 and Normandy urth with 15.

The Indians had an even closer ll in the juniors, Webster Groves nishing but a point behind. University City scored 20 points, while Webster had 19. Clayton was third with 17 and Maplewood fourth with 14.

No Records Broken.

No records were broken, partly because of the rain that fell the ight before, but principally because of the strong wind the runners had to fight. The wind also annoyed the 500 spectators considerably.

Ray Alsbury, Roosevelt, and Elmer Aussieker, Normandy, were the only double winners of the meet. Alsbury, after a disappointing race in the 220-yard dash, in which he ran third after tying the record of 22.5 seconds in the preliminaries, came back to win his specialty, the 200-yard low hurdles, 23.5 seconds. He had previously set a record of 22.6 seconds in the trials. Both the tied record and broken record will be credited to Alsbury.

Kirkwood Made Good Showing.

He also won the broad jump, beating out Sol Schumitzky, University City, by six inches with his leap of 21 feet 10 inches.

Aussieker won the discus throw and shotput.

Harold Gold, Cleveland, won the 100-yard dash in 10.6 seconds, but was credited with the 10.1 second record he set in the trials.

A remarkably good showing was made by Kirkwood's four-man squad in the seniors. The four, Sherwood Hughes, Don Ducheck, Jimmy Johnson and Julian Barnett, scored 19 points to take second.

St. Charles won the "B" division of the meet yesterday morning, more than tripling the score of its nearest rival. The St. Charles team counted 66¼ points; Country Day 21; Fairview 18½; Principia and Wellston 9½ each; Hancock 3¼, Ferguson and Brentwood one each.

Stephens No. 1 Tennis Player On Yale Squad

Howard Stephens Jr., former Country Day School player, is blazing the trail for the Yale University tennis team this year. He was recetly selected to play the No. 1 singles position by Bill Hinchliff, veteran Eli tennis coach.

In the last dual match against the team from Seventh Regiment Armory in New York City, Stephens provided a sensation by defeating Frank Bowden to give Yale a 5-to-4 victory. Bowden was runner-up to Frankie Parker in the recent Eastern indoor championship.

Stephens also has won a number of matches from the top-ranking players of other colleges in dual matches against the Yale team. Thus far this spring, the North Carolina Tarheels have been the only players to cause concern to the Eli players.

The Yale Daily News in a recent issue made the following statement about Stephens' brilliant record: "This boy, Stephens, though, really showed the class. Some of the sages are picking him to win the Intercollegiates this year. If not, he's only a junior and has another spring and summer ahead of him."

Stephens won the St. Louis District men's singles title by defeating MacNeil Smith in the final round last September. He is one of the youngest players to ever win the District men's tennis honors.

KEEP FIT FOR Breath-Taking Moments

"WHO'S AFRAID OF LOVE?"—it's the new, popular tune. Smoke the cigar that's easier on your breath . . . then you can join in the singing.

New scientific discoveries have shown that White Owl's Vintage tobacco is exceptionally low in the substances that cause unpleasant tobacco breath. Tests with a delicate osmoscope prove that this tobacco leaves less odor.

White Owl is a better cigar because it always has a Vintage-tobacco filler.

Nature—not factory processing—made this tobacco exceptionally mild, mellow.

We maintain a vast crop-inspection system—the only known organization of its kind—to locate Vintage tobacco. Even in Vintage years, we classify all filler tobacco into seven grades—and buy only tobacco of the quality of the top three for use in White Owls.

Make your next cigar a Vintage White Owl. You'll like its mild taste, and the ladies will like you for choosing it.

Says Willys Car Sales Are Up 400 Per Cent Over Same Time in 1936

N. A. Beardsley, General Sales Manager, Also Explains "Spring Parade" Campaign.

Sixty-five dealers and salesmen from this district attended a luncheon and dealer meeting held at the Coronado Hotel Monday by Ollie Haupt, Inc., the Willys distributer here, and the Willys factory.

Ollie Haupt, president of the firm, introduced Joseph A. Schlecht, secretary-manager of the Greater St. Louis Automotive Association, who discussed dealer problems for which the association is working out solutions. J. J. Mick, regional manager for Willys, also spoke.

N. A. Beardsley, general sales manager for Willys, outlined the spring sales and advertising plans. He explained also the Willys "spring parade," which was inaugurated by 2000 Willys dealers all over the country on April 19. The purpose of the "parade," Beardsley said, is to give a million motorists an aggregate ride of more than 10,000,000 miles in Willys cars in the next seven weeks. Specially painted Willys cars are being used in the campaign to make the "parade" more colorful, he said.

Beardsley stated that more than 28,000 Willys cars had been produced and sold since Nov. 1, and that retail sales were running 400 per cent over Willys sales in the same period a year ago.

"A domestic sales organization of more than 2100 Willys distributors and dealers, and an export sales organization in 61 foreign countries were built within eight and one-half weeks. The Willys factory today has distributor commitments for 116,000 units," Haupt said after the meeting.

Approximately 3,000,000 square feet of the Willys-Overland plants in Toledo are now being utilized for manufacturing.

Production was stepped up in January, February and March over each preceding month, and April daily output is about 450 units, with approximately 5000 workers employed on a 40-hour week schedule.

Studebaker Sales 5,828 Units More Than Total Last Year

Sales of 3770 passenger cars and trucks in the first 10 days of this month are reported by George D. Keller, vice-president in charge of sales of the Studebaker Corporation.

This was an increase of 22 per cent over the same period in April, 1936, when 3088 units were sold. Keller said that total sales for the year to date were 30,118 units, compared with 24,290 to date last year, an increase of 24 per cent.

De Soto Pushing Production Again

The new De Soto plant in Detroit is again rolling cars down the assembly line.

"Our modern factory, with its efficient operating and storage facilities, will allow us to reach normal production capacity within a very short time," L. G. Peed, vice-president of the De Soto Division of the Chrysler Corporation, says. "We are concentrating on keeping shipments moving, on getting cars on their way fast as they come off the line. Our distribution has been thrown into high gear to replenish dealers' stocks and to fill retail orders without delay.

"Activities in the plants have been resumed in all departments."

On Gasoline Economy Run

Car and accompanying cars and drivers in a Chevrolet gasoline economy run Wednesday from Kirkwood to Jefferson City and back in which an average of 23.84 miles to the gallon was checked by newspaper men who acted as observers. Left to right—Wells Shearer, president of the Grand Chevrolet Co.; J. Rush James, president of the Downtown Chevrolet Co.; Robert Wengler, secretary of the Chevrolet Dealers' Association, and Clark C. Schelp, city sales manager for the Chevrolet Motor Co.

The round trip mileage was 225.9 miles, and the observers reported that 9.475 gallons of gasoline were used. On the trip to Jefferson City, head winds estimated at 18 to 24 miles an hour were encountered and the car used 5.125 gallons of "gas," averaging 22.001 miles to the gallon. On the return trip, there were passengers and luggage in the car, but only 4.35 gallons of gasoline were used for an average of 26.003 miles per gallon.

Higher Road Speeds Cause Heavier Strain On Auto Spark Plugs

A recent survey by the State Highway Department of Michigan shows an average driver travels 45 miles an hour.

"This average driver climbs hills at 46.4 miles an hour," said M. C. Dewitt, vice-president of the Champion Spark Plug Co., discussing modern driving demands on automobile motors. "He reaches the crest at 42.7 miles an hour. He rounds curves at 41.

"We have no authoritative statistics to compare these figures with former habits, but everyone recognizes that road speeds have increased appreciably in the last few years.

"Now consider what the added motoring speeds have meant to the duties of the spark plug. A few years ago, let us say, 1000 sparks per minute were required to carry the average Michigan driver on his average trip. Today, due to his greater speed, the number of necessary sparks is up, probably 20 per cent, to 1200 sparks per minute."

Steady increase in average road speeds makes more important replacement of spark plugs every 10,000 miles, as recommended in the fourteenth annual observance of Champion Spark Plug Change Week, Dewitt said.

400 Per Cent Gain in Accessory Sales by Graham Dealers

Graham accessory sales are running more than 400 per cent above the figure for this time last year, reports C. W. Matheson, vice-president, Graham-Paige Motors Corporation.

"There are three outstanding reasons," Matheson said. "First, the depression is over. Second, the appearance of the smart 1937 accessories is almost irresistible to buyers. Third, all of today's accessories are highly practical.

"Since business recovery became stabilized, buyers have increasingly felt the urge to 'dress up' their cars and make them as handsome as possible. This is reflected in the fact that new cars on a sales-room floor fully equipped with accessories sell faster than the same cars without the accessories."

2125 Service Men For Pontiac Dealers Win Craftsman Awards

At the close of its first year, 2125 service employes of Pontiac dealers throughout the United States have qualified for membership in the Pontiac Service Craftsman's Guild, according to L. K. Marshall, general service manager.

Of this number, 1222 have complied with the requirements of membership for six months, while 903 have maintained their standings for an entire year.

"The purpose of the service craftsman's organization is to give national recognition to a select group of dealers' mechanics, shop foremen, service salesmen and service managers for meritorious work," Marshall said.

There are two citations. One, called "provisional service craftsmen," for those who maintain a continuously high standard of efficiency, integrity and courtesy in their work for six months. These men are given provisional craftsmen's cards and their names are recorded on a certificate presented to the dealer.

If they keep up their high standard for the second six months, they become full-fledged service craftsmen and are presented with service craftsmen's pins.

Japanese Imperial Household Orders 15 Packard "8" Cars

Orders have just been received by the Packard Motor Car Co. for 15 Packard super eights for the Imperial Household of Japan. Eight of the cars are sedan-limousines, five are five-passenger sedans, and two are chassis without bodies on which special bodies are to be built.

The Japanese Imperial Household several times in the last few years has bought as many as 10 Packards at a time.

All of the cars just ordered will be painted a special shade of red, the official color for all cars of the Japanese Imperial Household. No other cars in Japan are permitted to have this same color.

Bicyclists Warned Law Requires Both Head and Tail Lights

P. F. Drury, safety director of the Automobile Club of Missouri, this week cautioned parents of children who have bicycles to equip them with tail lights and headlights as a safety measure, and to conform with State laws. Drury also directed his warning on bicycle lighting equipment to employers of delivery boys who ride bicycles and proprietors of all bicycle renting agencies.

"Open weather brings thousands of youngsters riding bicycles to the streets and highways," Drury said. "Casual observation shows that most bicycles have no lights, and the lack of these makes it difficult for motorists to see them at night. Lights, or at least tail reflectors, give a motorist some indication of the presence of children on bicycles.

"Last year throughout the country there were 25,080 accidents involving bicycle riders, in which 770 bicyclists were killed in collisions with automobiles, and 24,200 were seriously injured. A large majority of bicyclists involved in these accidents were children under 14 years of age."

Drury pointed out that the State motor vehicle code specifies that "bicycles shall display one white light mounted at the front and directed forward, and one red light or one red reflex mirror mounted at the back and directed toward the rear."

He also reminded motorists that the State law prohibits the use of any lights on the rear accept a red tail light and a white light arranged to illuminate the license plate. Recently, several sport models have made their appearance with green lights facing to the rear, in direct violation of the State law.

Bliss Advocates Center Safety Strip Highway Construction

Divided highways with center construction entirely separating opposite streams of traffic, is the keynote of a road safety campaign launched by several of the big automobile clubs of the West.

In a joint statement recently by the Northern and Southern California Automobile Associations, it was urged that roads be made safe not only by separating the traffic flow, but by building separated grades at major intersections, by the elimination of curves, flattening of crests, railway crossing elimination, increased use of reflector markings for traffic lanes and the removal of advertising structures from view-blocking locations.

"Good roads are now here and the time has arrived when we should turn to making those roads safe," says C. H. Bliss, vice-president of sales of the Nash Motors Corporation.

"Head-on collisions can be eliminated if center safety strip construction is adopted. Greater cost of such highways may hold down the amount of road building, but the demands of safety must now come first."

Covered Wagon Trailers In St. Louis Parade

Twenty de luxe model Covered Wagon trailers attached to 1937 Ford V-8 cars paraded through the downtown and residential districts of St. Louis Saturday morning. It was the first time that Covered Wagons were displayed in such a pretentious manner.

The trailer parade was sponsored by the Proctor & Gamble Soap Co., which is giving away 20 de luxe model Covered Wagons, 20 1937 Ford V-8s and 20,000 gallons of Sinclair gasoline.

The parade, more than a half mile long, was escorted by a motorcycle squad.

From a small beginning 10 years ago, the Covered Wagon Co., Mount Clemens, Mich., is now producing 250 of these modern Covered Wagons daily.

Buick Retail Sales Up by 34 Per Cent

Domestic retail sales of Buick motor cars in the first 10 days of April totaled 7499 units, compared with 5418 in the first 10 days of March and 5568 in the corresponding period of April a year ago, according to W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager.

This was a gain of 2081 cars, or 38.4 per cent, over the previous month and 1931 cars, or 34.6 per cent, over the corresponding 1936 period.

New Station Wagon Model

Hupp Factory Preparing To Resume Making Cars

An early start on manufacturing operations for the 1938 Hupmobile models is expected, according to an announcement by the company.

Thomas Bradley, president, said the company had been notified by the Securities and Exchange Commission that the registration statement for Hupp's new finance program had become effective on April 19 for the plan approved by stockholders at a meeting in Richmond, April 17. The new stock has been listed on the New York and Chicago Stock Exchanges and rights will shortly be issued to present stockholders.

"The plans provide for more than ample capital to insure Hupp a strong position in the industry," Bradley said. "New 1938 models, sixes and eights, will be announced upon the completion of tooling which is already in progress, as the designs for the new cars are now tentatively approved. These 1938 models will be the thirtieth Hupmobiles since the company started in 1908."

Ford Stake Truck on Long Wheelbase

One of the most widely used Ford V-8 truck units is the 157-inch stake truck with the 85 horsepower V-8 engine. It has a load space 142 inches long and 82 inches wide.

Stake sections, held rigidly together with interlocking plates, may be quickly and easily removed. Name panels are carried on the forward sections.

The all-steel cab with steel top has a safety glass and clear-vision ventilation, cowl ventilator and a windshield that opens. Interleaf spring lubrication, full floating rear axle and deep rugged frame are chassis features.

NEGOTIATE FOR UNRESTRICTED MOORLANDS SITE

Business Building Planned for North Side of Clayton in Wedge Formed With Cromwell Drive.

By Berry Moore.

Negotiations are being pressed aggressively for the purchase of the Clayton-Cromwell wedge, in Blue Ridge terrace, Moorlands Addition. The site is approximately a block east of Hanley road.

The prospective purchasers are Jacob Rubin & Sons, who seek the site with plans for a business building on a pretentious scale. Negotiations for the ground are being handled by Paul M. Stendahl, salesman for Henry R. Weisels Co. No intimation was given as to the price involved.

The wedge has a frontage on the north side of Clayton road of 278 feet, and on the south side of Cromwell drive of 127 feet. Clayton road and Cromwell drive converge at this point.

Wedge Is Not Restricted.

The ground is owned by Vincent Gallo, who purchased it a number of years ago—inspired by the business possibilities of the site. The only unrestricted ground in the Moorlands, it has attracted the attention of both speculators and professional builders.

Details of the building plans are withheld pending acquisition of the ground, which has been under negotiation for several weeks. The project, it is understood, is to be financed by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Real Estate Co.

A 12-unit fireproof apartment building recently completed by Jacob Rubin & Sons, stands on adjoining ground on Cromwell. Three

PLANS MADE FOR FIVE HOUSES IN RIDGETOP

Homes Planned for Tract on Clayton Road to Cost From $20,000 to $25,000.

The Fred Ahlemeier Building Co. has disclosed plans for the erection of five houses in Ridgetop on the south side of Clayton road, about 1000 feet west of the North and South road. The houses will comprise eight and nine rooms, with from three to five bedrooms, and will range in cost from $20,000 to $25,000. Construction is scheduled to start forthwith.

The Ahlemeier company recently acquired 21 lots, or approximately 3000 front feet, in this development, from L. Wade Childress, president of the Columbia Terminals, in part payment for a modernistic 12-family apartment building at 7544-46-48 York drive, Blue Ridge Terrace, Moorlands addition, Clayton. The lots will provide sites for an equal number of houses.

Anton H. Klauber, real estate agent and promoter, will be associated with Ahlemeier in the building operation. The Dimmitt-Rickhoff-Bayer Real Estate Co. has been appointed exclusive agent for the sale of the proposed houses and for the lots acquired in the trade.

Ridgetop, a high-class residential development of about 22 acres, was laid out by Childress 12 or 15 years ago. It comprises 39 lots, with a uniform frontage of 100 feet. An appreciable number of the original lots was purchased in 1928 by the United Investment Corporation, composed of Louis H. Waltke, president; Paul Jones Jr., vice-president; A. W. Ridgley Young, secretary; Robert H. Waltke, treasurer, and Walter H. Kroehnke, assistant treasurer. Approximately 13 houses have been erected in the development, including three recently completed by the Ahlemeier company, and several are in course of construction.

The lots acquired by the Ahlemeier company represented the last of the remaining unsold ground owned by Childress in Ridgetop.

Evidencing the demand for sites for high-class residences in St. Louis County, a total of 10 lots has been sold within the last 60 days in Frontenac, at the southwest corner of Spoede and Conway roads, being marketed through the Dimmitt-Rickhoff-Bayer Real Estate Co.

BUSINESS BUILDING TO BE ERECTED AT 4923 DELMAR

The Henry R. Weisels Co., will ask for bids shortly for the erection of an attractive one-story business building with an extensive frontage at 4923-25-27 Delmar boulevard. The site is situated between Euclid and Aubert avenue and immediately west of the Easton-Taylor Trust Co.

Plans and specifications have been prepared by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect. The new building will contain 4 stores, 15x60 each, modernistic plate glass front with terra cotta trim. The stores will be steam heated and will have asbestos tile floors and steel ceilings.

The building will be erected by a syndicate composed of the Weisels Co., promoter of the project.

CONSTRUCTION ENGINEER BUYS BUILDING ON RUTGER

Walsh & Wells, Inc., construction engineers, has acquired the two-story building at 3524 Rutger street. Occupying a lot 125 by 125, the building will be used for the storage of its trucks, tractors and construction equipment. It was owned by a bank. The Edward Glik Co. handled the negotiations.

Two 8-Apartment Buildings for Blue Ridge Terrace, Moorlands

To Be Erected on the West Side of Westwood Drive, Between Parkdale and Buckingham Drives.

Acquisition of sites for apartment projects and negotiations involving buildings of this type were noteworthy features of the week, with Blue Ridge Terrace, Moorlands Addition, a center of activities.

Sam Brown, builder, has purchased two lots 70 by 113 feet each, on the west side of Westwood drive, between Parkdale and Buckingham drives, in Blue Ridge terrace, as sites for apartment buildings to cost a total of $125,000. Shaw & Francis handled the negotiations for the ground.

Each building will have eight apartments, alternating in four, five and six rooms, with one and two baths. Every modern facility is included in the specifications. Construction is to be started as soon as working plans are available.

Westwood drive is the most westerly north and south street of Moorlands Addition. It extends from Wydown boulevard to Clayton road.

Excavation is scheduled to start shortly on the west side of Westwood, between Buckingham and Oxford drives, for two 18-family apartments to be built by Lichtenstein Estate, Inc. The estimated cost of the two structures, exclusive of the ground, is $240,000. This entire Westwood block frontage has been acquired for these projects.

An apartment building recently completed at 7520 York drive, in Blue Ridge Terrace, was acquired yesterday by undisclosed clients of the Dimmitt-Rickhoff-Bayer Real Estate Co. for a reported price of $60,000. It contains eight four-room apartments, each with studio living room, bed room, tiled kitchen and bath, with colored plumbing fixtures. The garage is an integral part of the basement. The J. R. Van Raalte Mortgage Co. financed construction of this building.

A newly-built duplex structure at 7536-38 Wellington drive in Blue Ridge Terrace erected by the Adaber Realty & Building Co., has been purchased by George B. and Monte H. Wearen, represented by Edward M. Thornhill. There are two seven-room apartments, with two baths. A four-car garage is a part of the basement. The building is one of the most attractive in Blue Ridge. The Adaber Company was represented in the negotiations by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Real Estate Co., which financed construction of the building.

Several offers have been made for a building being built at 715 Westwood drive, facing Parkdale, in Blue Ridge, by Sam Brown. This building will contain eight four-room apartments, with every modern facility. It occupies a lot 80 by 110 feet. The site adjoins the above mentioned lots, acquired by Brown.

Negotiations are also said to be pending with Edward L. Bakewell, for various apartment structures, including several on a large scale. The prospective purchasers include both speculators and investors.

WALGREEN COMPANY ALTERS STORE PLAN

Eliminating Small Units in Favor of Larger Ones at More Central Points.

In line with the Walgreen Co.'s policy of enlarging its scope in the St. Louis area and the elimination of small stores in favor of larger ones at the more central points, the company is proceeding to close its store at 7169 Manchester and to enlarge the one at 7374 Manchester avenue.

The company will also eliminate its store at 629 North Grand in favor of an enlarged air-conditioned unit at Grand boulevard and Olive street. The stores at 6100 Easton avenue and 5001 Page boulevard will be moved to new and larger quarters at 6116 Easton, formerly occupied by the Victor Drug Co., while the recently enlarged store at Eighth street and Washington avenue will replace the unit at Seventh and Locust streets.

All these stores will be air-conditioned, as will most of the other Walgreen stores in the St. Louis area.

The Walgreen Co. operates more than 500 drug stores in the principal cities of the United States.

MARCH BUILDING SHOWS INCREASE OF 36 PER CENT

Residential Construction Lead of 87 Pct. Over Corresponding Month of Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The Labor Department's monthly survey of building activity in 1523 cities disclosed today that the value of new residential construction in March was 87.2 per cent greater than in March, 1936.

The report showed considerable residential building activity in the Middle Atlantic States, the East North Central States and on the Pacific Coast.

March residential building was estimated at $84,882,867, a 36.5 per cent advance over the February total of $62,188,632.

Building activity in March, including non-residential construction and alterations, amounted to $170,510,244, an increase of 32.1 per cent over February and 36 per cent over March, 1936.

In the first quarter of this year as compared with the same period of 1936, New York City building jumped from $40,560,851 to $81,795,839; Boston, from $1,900,011 to $8,563,062; Detroit, from $5,993,351 to $12,143,714; Chicago, from $3,946,258 to $8,276,260; Los Angeles, from $10,868,266 to $21,014,284, and Philadelphia, from $3,213,469 to $10,913,151.

In Milwaukee the volume dropped from $10,635,334 to $2,448,180 in the same period; Dallas, from $4,861,959 to $1,975,219; Houston, from $7,093,249 to $5,198,430, and Miami from $3,150,328 to $2,614,673.

Compared with the corresponding month of last year, the aggregate value of all buildings for which permits were issued in March showed an increase of 36 per cent, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins announced today. New residential building showed a gain of 87 per cent. An increase of 36 per cent was shown in the value of permits issued for additions, alterations and repairs, but the value of new non-residential buildings was 5 per cent less than in March, 1936, she pointed out.

"Measured by the value of permits issued, residential construction during the month was 37 per cent greater than in February," Miss Perkins said. "At the same time, non-residential construction rose 45 per cent. An advance of 7 per cent was registered in the value of permits issued for additions, alterations, and repairs to existing structures. The total value of buildings for which permits were issued during March showed an increase of 32 per cent over the preceding month.

"For the first quarter of 1937 the aggregate value of permits issued for all classes of construction in cities with a population of 2500 or over amounted to $398,279,569, an increase of 36 per cent compared with the corresponding period of 1936. All classes of construction shared in the gain, the greatest improvement occurring in the value of residential buildings, which increased 70 per cent. During the first three months of 1937 dwelling units have been provided in these cities for 47,309 families, an increase of 77.3 per cent over the first quarter of the preceding year."

The data collected by the Bureau of Labor Statistics include, in addition to private construction, the number and value of buildings for which contracts were awarded by Federal and state governments in the cities included in the report. For March, 1937, the value of these public buildings amounted to $6,318,000; for February, 1937, to $14,753,000; and for March, 1936, to $5,937,000.

stories in height, the structure extends through the block to Clayton road. It has handsome façades on both thoroughfares. The Anderson-Stocke-Buerman Real Estate Co. was the source of the capital for this project.

Kerckhoff Block, a Magnet.

Speculation is rather keen as to the future of the block frontage on the north side of Clayton road, extending eastwardly from Hanley road to Westwood drive, the west boundary of Blue Ridge terrace, acquired several years ago by Daniel C. Kerckhoff, president of the Pevely Dairy Co. Dominating the main entrance to Lake Forest, the site has a frontage of 716 feet on Clayton, with a depth of 212 feet on both Hanley and Westwood. Under the zoning law the entire frontage may be occupied for business purposes. A handsome commercial building is said to be planned by Kerckhoff for the Clayton and Hanley corner. Presumably, the remainder of the Clayton road frontage, extending east to Westwood drive, will be improved with a series of structures to harmonize.

The ground, which was part of the original estate of E. H. Simmons, was purchased in October, 1933, by Kerckhoff for a reported price of $50,000, through Shaw & Francis, Inc. It is regarded as one of the most attractive sites on Clayton road between Hanley and the North and South roads for a business block on a comprehensive scale. It is just a short distance west of the Clayton-Cromwell wedge.

The Kerckhoff tract is diagonally opposite Lake Forest, a 70-acre residential development at the southwest corner of Clayton and Hanley roads, and is directly opposite Hampton Park. Davis place is at the northwest corner of Clayton and Hanley roads.

Eugene and Harry Freund recently acquired the northwest corner of Lake Forest, the only ground in this development not restricted against business. This plot has a frontage of 265 feet on the south side of Clayton, extending west from the rock fence marking the development. It is 150 feet deep. The westerly 100 by 150 feet of this plot has been leased by the Freunds to the Continental Oil Co. for a service station.

B. & L. LEAGUE NAMES COMMITTEE HEADS

John C. Hall of St. Louis Reappointed Chairman of Organizations F H A Division

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 24.—John C. Hall, president of the St. Louis Federal Savings & Loan Association, has been reappointed chairman of the United States Building & Loan League's Committee on F H A. Harold T. Donaldson, Lansing, Mich., president of the league, made the announcement at the organization's Chicago headquarters today.

The committee was formed in 1936 to concentrate upon the effects of the Federal Housing Administration's activities upon the savings and loan business and possible uses which these institutions can make of the plan. According to figures from the F H A's report, commercial banks have done 61 per cent of the F H A insured mortgage business in the two years of F H A's existence, about $346,000,000. Hall reports that in the same period savings and loan institutions made $1,800,000,000 in new loans, only a nominal portion of this volume requiring the insurance charge to the borrower which is inherent in the F H A plan.

Hall was also appointed to the league's Committee on Trends. This group, composed mostly of the chairmen of the league's other committees, will take soundings of the savings and loan business in its large, small and medium-sized units, surveying its outlook and its present practices in order to map out future broad policies.

Heads Relations Committee.

Otto Kallmeyer, president of the Conservative Building & Loan Association, St. Louis, was appointed a member of the league's Committee on Public Relations. Appointments to these special leadership groups in the national league are made by Harold T. Donaldson, Lansing, Mich., president.

One of the oldest committees in the league's program, this group will undertake a new project this year in the establishment of a speaker's bureau for the savings and loan institutions. Representatives of the institutions will be asked to address various types of organizations which desire information on thrift, home ownership and like topics.

E. A. Kamp, secretary of the Washington Federal Savings and Loan Association, St. Louis, was appointed a member of the League's Committee on Compensation of Management and Staff.

The group is a newly-created committee of the league with the purpose of surveying the whole problem of management, personnel and retirement in savings and loan institutions in view of improving the services which they can give borrowers and savers.

For Admissions Committee.

Lucie S. Richardson, secretary of the Missouri State League of Building and Loan Associations, St. Louis, has been appointed a member of the Committee on Admissions of the United States Building and Loan League.

Sales Force Augmented.

Mrs. Ernest Meyer and Mrs. Octavia L. Lazarus have been engaged by the Edward Glick Real Estate Co., for its residential sales department.

ow Is Time to Refurbish Back Yard and Garden

utside Accessories Follow Color Scheme of House. Trellises Need Paint.

With returning prosperity, the ck yards of dwellings take on a ick-span appearance. This is due t only to repairing and rebuilding, but to cleaning up and repairing fences, trellises, tool houses, ga- es. Whatever is not really used needed is removed, remaining ructures are brought into color eement with the house itself.

In repainting these outside acories, the color scheme of the use is followed, either for harony or contrast. The picturesque cket fence may be painted the ditional gleaming white, a bright e, yellow or some other gay color ich repeats the tone of the front or and shutters.

The utilitarian tool house and the tached garage will take on an apparance of neat attractiveness if ven a fresh coat of paint and additional beauty may be added by tting up trellises along the sides. These will look well even before hey are graced with climbing vines and flowers if they are painted hite or flower-like colors—pale reen, yellow or even terra cotta.

Where there are children, an outoor gym is in demand—with ings, slides, wading pools or sandxes. Paint in bright, but houserhmonizing, colors serves to make e swings and things more alluring to youngsters. Such play apparatus, together with benches earby, is sometimes given its own olor scheme to set it apart from e rest of the garden.

A word, incidentally, about the ecessity for having upright posts orrectly conditioned before they re sunk in the ground. Posts that ave not been properly treated will ot away beneath the surface and re likely to crash to the ground ithout warning when one of the oungsters is "going-to-town" on he swing or slide. Such a bad fall s apt to have serious consequences —particularly if a heavy post falls n the child.

Before the posts are sunk in the round, the parts that will be below he surface should be thoroughly oaked in creosote or double-coated ith this material. Or a coat of sphalt paint may be applied. Such treatment will prevent rotting and will prevent the destruction of the wood by insects.

The wood above ground should have three coats of outside paint r two coats of exterior four-hour enamel to prevent the wood from racking and to keep the surface mooth so the children will not get painful splinters in their hands.

If the posts are new galvanized ron pipes, they should be washed ith a chemical solution (such as wo pounds of copper acetate disolved in a gallon of water), thoroughly rinsed with water and dried —then painted with two coats of aint or quick-drying enamel. However, if the pipes have been out-ofoors for several months, it is unecessary to treat them before finishing.

The lower sections of clothes oles should also be given a creosote reatment before they are sunk into he earth. They can also be made ess obtrusive by panting them a eep green that harmonizes with the rass.

In city back yards a little paint ften does wonders with board fences. If you have a high-board ence around your yard, you'll be nterested to know that painting t soft light green will make the pace seem larger.

FOR BETTER LIVING

There is a new lighting system n the market which is a silvered owl lamp which protrudes from he bottom of its specially designed fixture. The coat of pure mirror ilver which covers the bowl of the lamp makes the bulb its own reflector, deflecting the light rays and preading them evenly over the entire room. The result is a soft, indirect light which up to now has been found only in the most modern offices and shops. With this type of light, there is the same even illumination for the person tanding and working as for the one who is sitting and reading. Because the silvered bowl shields the brilliant filament of the lamp, o glare meets the eye and there re no shadows.

The fixture has two graceful ouvres arranged to give the appearance of lighted glass, although he unit is durably constructed of eavy-gauge steel. The silvered owl lamp is screwed in an opening at the bottom of the fixture, nd becomes part of the fixture esign. The unit may be screwed nto any open socket or ceiling receptacle just like a bulb. And since irt can never reach the reflector, ecause it is sealed into the light ulb, the housewife has no cleaning problem.

Fibrous roof coatings are thick aints containing short-fibered asestos and are used primarily for rolonging the life of composition nd also sheet-metal roofs.

Interior wall finishes are offered in many varieties. Smooth and ough plaster retain their popularity, although composition boards f various types, linoleum and even olored glass are extensively used. While price is an important factor, fire safety, appropriate decorating effects, ease of cleaning and maintenance cost require careful consideration as well.

Beauty of architecture and excellence of construction will not make up for doors in the wrong places, darkness where there should be light, and the thousand other details that make living pleasant and attractive. No home is suitable if it is not designed for or easily adapted to the needs of the family living in it.

When planning bookshelves in a new home, it may be well to have them adjustable, so they will conveniently hold books of any height.

Cork tile is a resilient floor material made from tree bark which is ground, compressed into various shaped molds and baked; the time of baking determines the color.

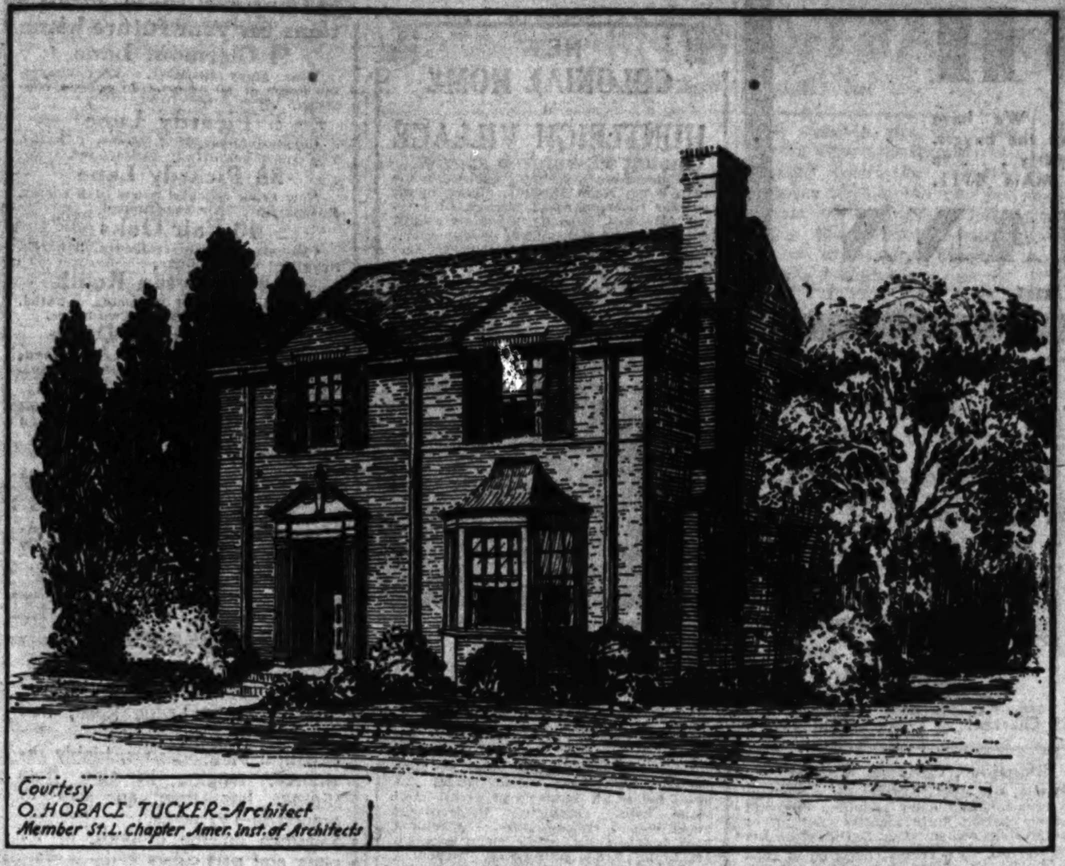
Black painted or stained floors are in vogue for well lighted rooms. The floor should be very dark and finished with a glossy polish or varnish. The principal color of the room, if incorporated in the black paint making it a red black or blue black will help the floor harmonize with the other furnishings.

Small Brick House in the Colonial Manner

Designed for a Narrow City Lot This House Includes All Its Elements Within a Rectangle.



Courtesy
O. HORACE TUCKER—Architect
Member St. L. Chapter Amer. Inst. of Architects

PROSPECTIVE home owners with a limited income have always been conscious of the need of the small house. It is only recently that architects have seen the possibilities that this field opens in the way of carefully planned small houses that function well, are simple and eminently livable.

Unfortunately, most small houses that one sees, have been built beginning with the outside as it were, with unnecessary decoration and arbitrary interior spaces, when they should be planned "from the inside, out," with proper regard for the relationship of masses and space which is the meaning of architecture. The small house must be livable. No matter how small the rooms, they must have the proper proportion and it is this factor that creates the elusive feeling of wellbeing in those who live in them.

By function is meant more or less the inter-relationship of rooms and their adaptability to the owner's manner of living. Elaborate ornamentation is certainly not necessary for good living. A few ornamental details are often used to enhance the ultimate simplicity of a room or a building. But to sacrifice comfort for the sake of an ornamental niche or stone trim which is wholly unnecessary to the function of the house is a foolish waste of money.

THE house shown here is a well-planned small house designed for a narrow city lot. In planning the house the architect has kept all the elements within a rectangle. There are no angles or "ells" to increase the construction costs. Kitchen, downstairs lavatory and bathroom on the second floor have been planned to reduce the amount of materials needed. The general aspect of the house is one of simplicity. There is no gingerbread and no waste space, rooms are of good size and well proportioned and there is ample closet space. In short, it is a small house in which people can live.

It happens that this particular architect is interested in the circulation in the house. By circulation is meant the dwellers' ability to get about the house, from one room to another, from the first to the second floor or basement, from the kitchen to the front door without interference. The entrance and stairway in the house have been planned for the side instead of center, the usual Colonial entrance and hall. Thus it is possible to go to the front door from the kitchen, to the second floor or basement, without interfering with any entertaining that may be going on in the living room or dining room.

The living room has a large bay which materially increases the spaciousness of the room. There is a brick colonial fireplace with quarried tile hearth and wood mantle. The staircase is Colonial in detail with dark handrail and turned balusters. The kitchen, downstairs, lavatory and bath have tile wainscoting.

There are three bedrooms on the second floor, each having ample closet space. Two closets open on the small upstairs hall and the bathroom has its own receptacle for linens. The clothes chute is located in this upstairs hall.

The house was designed to face south and is built of brick with a stone foundation. The roof is an asphalt roof and the shutters at the second floor are working shutters painted green. In order to keep the house from looking too tall the cornice line has been broken by the gables in the front bedrooms. A brick course at the second-floor line also helps to cut the height of the house. The entrance door is recessed and the extra thickness of the wall gives the doorway a deeper reveal. The interior wood trim is painted white. Floors are stained and waxed. Walls on the first floor are to be painted while the bedrooms will be papered. Cubage of the house has been figured at about 27,000 feet and the estimate cost is 29 cents per cubic foot.

This house which is under construction on the west side of Marwinette avenue near Carondelet park, was designed by O. H. Tucker, member of the St. Louis chapter American Institute of Architects.

TEN ROSE VARIETIES FOR GARDEN

April is the month the rose lover should choose the varieties he will grow this summer in the garden. Because of the many varieties on the market today, the beginner is hard-pressed to know which will give the best results with a limited amount of care. Here are 10 varieties that give good results:

Etoile de Holland is one of the best among the red roses; Charles K. Douglas is another. Among the pink roses Lady Ashtown has long been a favorite; Mrs. Charles Beel is a shell pink rose that is easily grown; Radiance is an old variety but should be in every rose garden because it is easy to grow and flowers freely.

Good white roses are relatively scarce, but Edel is satisfactory. The flowers are pure ivory white. Joanna Hill is a good choice for a yellow variety. Padre is one of the copper-colored varieties and is effective when massed in quantity. The variety Autumn is all its name suggests, yellow mingled with russet brown and red. President Herbert Hoover is a fine garden rose of cerise-pink, flame and scarlet with a touch of yellow. It can be planted in partial shade.

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE HOUSE

Q. We are building a home and the builder has specified sanded walls, but we have heard so much against this rough finish. For instance, it cannot be washed satisfactorily and if later we should want the walls papered, would need to have a finishing coat of plaster put on which would mean expense and much mess. What sort of finish would you suggest where after the walls have become soiled they could be either washed or papered?
C. H.

A. Smooth walls of plaster are probably best in your case. These may be papered or painted later. Many buildings are now using tinted plaster instead of the usual dead white. There is little difference in cost and wall decoration may be deferred for several years.

Q. The plaster in one of my rooms is so bad I find it necessary to have it removed. Is there any wall covering that would be satisfactory? I do not want any board that necessitates using molding.
MRS. J. N., Pine Bluff, Ark.

A. There are a number of wall boards on the market which would be very suitable. Some have a smooth finish and are applied with mastic. Your local dealer should be able to supply any of these.

Q. We would like a slate roof when we reroof our house. Is there any chance that the framing timber might not be strong enough? Is there any difference in the size of slate used for roofing? ED. E.

A. The weight of slate is about three times greater than the ordinary roofing. It is advisable to consult a competent architect or engineer in checking whether or not your rafters are strong enough. Slate comes in various sizes and thicknesses.

Q. Why do floors squeak? Can this be corrected in a five-year-old house without tearing up the flooring?
A. H. B.

A. Floors squeak because they were not properly nailed at the time the floor was laid. The simplest method of correcting the annoyance is to surface-nail the boards that cause the noise. Care should be taken that the nail is driven through the subfloor into the joist, as it may be the subfloor rather than the finish floor that is causing the disturbance. Countersink the nails and refinish the floor. This will silence the floor for the time being and may solve your problem for years. The surest answer is a new floor, properly laid.

Q. Every time we run bath water we find it full of sediment. How can this be prevented? E. H.

A. Drain the water system, including the hot-water tank. Then flush the system with fresh water. If repeated flushing does not clear the line, a replacement of the pipes may be necessary. Check the hot and cold water lines separately.

Q. What is considered ample closet space? MRS. H. R.

A. There should be provided a minimum of one closet for each bedroom, an entrance coat closet, a linen closet, and a closet for cleaning equipment. In large bedrooms two closets are desirable. The size and shape of a closet should be suitable to its purpose. Two feet is a satisfactory depth for clothes. A greater depth usually results in waste space.

Q. Is there any difference in the amount of ultra-violet rays that penetrate various types of glass?
L. S. JR.

A. Yes; some types are more efficient than others. Tables of various makes of glass and their relative efficiencies may be had by writing to the Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Q. What remedy is there for water pipes, attached to the basement ceiling, that drip over the floor in summer? E. F. F.

A. The drip is caused by either a leak or by condensation. If the water comes from a leak, it should be fixed. If it is caused by the condensation of water vapor, it is advisable to insulate the pipe.

Q. How should a one-story brick house with a high roof be insulated? M. S.

A. The ceiling of the first floor should be insulated, rather than the roof, as the cost of insulation is figured by the square foot, and there is less area in the ceiling. Of course, if the space within the roof is to be used for anything but storage purposes, the insulation should be carried over the attic rooms. In any case, adequate ventilation over the insulation should be provided with large louvers at all gable ends or by direct vents through separate flues in the chimney.

A Few Brush Tips

The appearance of painted furniture can frequently be improved by using contrasting colors on mouldings, grooves, knobs, handles and edges. Use a small, soft-hair, pencil-like brush for this striping work. Hold the brush between the thumb and index finger. Place the third finger on the edge of the furniture as a guide in drawing a straight line.

Each of us has a preference for some particular color, but not all of us know why. A slight knowledge of the meaning of color will help us analyze our likes and dislikes.

It is wise to consider the characteristic properties of individual colors before we proceed to change the color combinations in our homes.

Red, for instance, symbolizes vitality, energy, power. It is highly stimulating. Blue promotes tranquility. Psychologically, its influence is quieting. Yellow symbolizes light, cheerfulness. Green soothes, yet exhilarates.

If you don't wish the outside of your home to be disfigured with ugly greenish-brown streaks, be sure to have the wire of your screens painted annually. If your screens are not fully protected, rain will wash unsightly stains onto the walls below. Although copper screening does not need the protection of paint to prevent its disintegration—it does need it decidedly if you don't want such stains on the walls of your home beneath windows, doors and screened porches. To prevent this, coat screen wire with clear varnish, screen enamel or paint. Iron screens, of course, will rust away if they're not protected with such a coating.

PLASTER IS ANCIENT

Plaster for building purposes has been used for centuries and still covers 80 per cent of home interiors. Its insulating and sanitary properties were developed by the ancients and its decorative possibilities furthered by the Greeks and Romans. King John of England recognized its fire-resistive qualities after the great London fire. Sanitary laws in many states require all habitable rooms to be lathed and plastered. It insulates against cold and drafts as well as heat.

Taking 1 per cent to 4 per cent of total building cost, there is no cheap substitute, as other materials give much less in service for the comparative outlay.

BATHROOM FLOOR

The heaviest load per square foot of the entire house is usually carried by the bathroom floor, the reason for this being the weight of the materials used in the room—concrete, tile and fixtures. Unfortunately, this is one part of the building in which the floor beams are usually weakened by careless cutting for the installation of pipes. It is possible to avoid this error by proper framing for the pipes, and this extra support should be provided to avoid settlement cracks in the tile, between the tile and the built-in tub, and on the ceiling below.

What Our Customers Say—

A salesman with the Superior Dairy Products Co., writes:

Having recently purchased a used 1934 Dodge panel truck from your salesman Herb Miller and finding it to be everything represented by him I am writing you to express my complete satisfaction with same and will be more than glad to recommend you to any of my friends for either new or used cars or trucks as this has been my first experience in buying a used automobile where it has really been thoroughly reconditioned by your used car department as promised and actually in first class condition with no hidden defects.

Sincerely yours,

A. H. KISSEL, 3523 Bingham.

SALESMEN WANTED

FIVE MEN

Last week we started five men on the road to success with our company. We are now ready to start five more.

Our business has shown a constant increase throughout the depression years, as our product is without competition, performing a much needed service that cannot be duplicated.

This product is made in factories in principal countries, including the United States, and is backed by tremendous resources.

As there is nothing like our product, selling experience is not a necessary requirement. If selected, we train you thoroughly in our factory branch school at no expense to you.

You make no investment of any nature in our business, and we finance everything.

Our men are well paid. Last week, in our St. Louis branch, we paid H. G. C., former insurance salesman, $125.92 for the preceding week's work; while V. H., former grocer, was paid $86.29 for the week; A. S., $72.74; J. C. O. $60.26; C. D. R., $52.20; J. C., $60.61; H. G. T., $57.87; A. T. O., $48.60; H. S., $59.32; C. O., $47.56; W. S., $63.08; E. A. B., $111.83.

If you are selected you will work with and meet these men who are making fine weekly incomes because they are selling something people want and need.

No matter what your experience has been, if you are honest, reliable, and have the desire to succeed, we will be pleased to grant you a personal interview and you may be fortunate in being selected as one of the five men. Apply Monday between 9:15 A. M. and 1:15 P. M., Suite 512, Paul Brown Bldg., 9th & Olive Sts.

Woman's Club Junior Day to Be on Thursday

One-Act Comedies, Fashion Show and Tap Dance Will Be Given for Entertainment of Seniors Following Luncheon.

PURPLE door knobs, linen wrappings and smart spring attire, with a tap dance thrown in, all will have a part in Junior day, the annual gesture of the younger members of the St. Louis Woman's Club to the seniors, to be held Thursday. Because of the nature of this year's party, a few of the seniors themselves, and sub-juniors, as the children of juniors are called, have been asked to co-operate.

The celebration will begin with 1 o'clock luncheon, after which the audience will trek upstairs to the ballroom to watch the show.

"The Purple Door Knob" is the name of the first event—a one-act comedy for three women, written by Walter Prichard Eaton, associate professor of play-writing at Yale who conducts the well-known English 47 class. The scene is laid in an old-fashioned bedroom of a New England farm house on a summer afternoon. The occupant of the house, Mrs. Bartholomew, an elderly invalid, bored with life in bed and avid for excitement, sends her housekeeper-companion, Amanda Dunbar, to admit Viola Cole, an actress passing by who is attracted to the place by its purple door knob, which she covets as an antique. To gain her prize (for an enormous price) the actress, "radiant and young but not an ingenue" is compelled to give a one-man show for the bed-ridden shrew.

Mrs. Hugh M. Bowen will play the part of Mrs. Bartholomew; Mrs. Arthur H. Feuerbacher Jr. will interpert the amusing Amanda, and Miss Harriet Hulburd will be the actress.

The second and longest part of the program has to do with fashions. Mrs. Albert Happel will invite Mrs. Henry S. Butler, president of the club, and her granddaughter, Anne Jocelyn Butler, and Mrs. William S. McChesney, and her granddaughter, Anita O'Fallon, to sit in the president's box, built on stage, as a reviewing party, past which both adult and children mannequins will parade.

The children, walking in pairs, will be as follows: Eliza Brownrigg and Inez Garesche; Carla Rand and Frank Rand II; Nancy and Lucy Levis; Polly Rolwing and her brother, E. G. Rolwing Jr.; Cecil Ann Snodgras and Peter Muckerman; Betsy Bowen and Joan Emerson; Catherine Idelia Holmes and Peter Dennig; Margo Blue and Mary Harlow; Peggy Happel and Beverly Bowen, and Betty Harlow and Betty Ashcroft.

Grown-ups, who will model clothes ranging from slacks to formal summer evening gowns, include Mrs. C. Alvin Snodgras, Mrs. T. Middleton Levis, Mrs. John Brownrigg, Mrs. Edward G. Bischoff, Mrs. David B. White, Mrs. Lawrence H. Stern, Miss Mary Josephine Wagner, Mrs. Arthur Proetz, Mrs. Roy Wilcox Jordan, Mrs. Louis S. Dennig, Mrs. Leo Bartels, Mrs. Joseph W. Folk, Mrs. Henry Hale Rand, Miss Grace White, Mrs. Oscar Funk, Mrs. Ira Fischer, Miss Aurelia Gerhard, Miss Harriet Hulburd, Alicia Leu Kircher, and Mrs. Robert A. Black Jr. Each will walk the length of a canvas aisle stretched from the stage steps down the ballroom.

The fashion finale is to be a wedding party, in which Mrs. Black, the former Miss Jane Jordan, is to be preceded by Alicia Leu Kircher as flower girl, and by Miss Hulburd and Miss Gerhard, who actually took part in the Black-Jordan wedding a few months ago, as bridesmaids.

Nancy Levis and Buddy Banister will do an entr'acte tap dance before the second play, also a one-act comedy—"Ladies in Linen," by Carl Barker. Action takes place at 3 o'clock in the morning in the steam room of a New York Turkish bath, into which Sally Gale, a girl from the country, has rushed to escape a masculine pursuer. When the sheet-swatched inmates of the bath discover that Sally has left her husband, a "hick town pickle-maker," there is a concerted effort on the part of a "Stage Lady," a nurse, a newspaper woman, a debutante and an attendant to effect a reconciliation.

Mrs. Black will be the Stage Lady; Mrs. Ralph Waldo Emerson, the nurse; Mrs. Ira Fischer, the newspaper woman; Miss Dorothy Grote, the debutante, and Miss Betty Meyer the attendant.

Betty Berninghaus And J. E. Rosenbaum Wed in Church Service

MISS BETTY JANE BERNINGHAUS and John E. Rosenbaum exchanged wedding rings and each repeated the familiar "with this ring ——" at their marriage Friday night at St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The bride, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Arnold Berninghaus, 521 Midvale avenue, was escorted down the candle-lit aisle by her father, and stood with her wedding party in an illuminated setting of woodwardia fern against which were silhouetted three large clusters of white snapdragon and stock. Lighted candles in tall candelabra gave an irregular line of light across the chancel as the Rev. Dr. Ivan Lee Holt performed the ceremony.

Mrs. John Peter Brandenburg of Taos, N. M., the bride's cousin, was her matron of honor; Miss Ruth Tobin, Miss Elizabeth Jones, Mrs. Adelbert Ayars Francis and Miss Jo Ann Billman, were bridesmaids; Mr. and Mrs. Brandenburg's daughter, Barbara, was flower girl, and Edwin Roosevelt Thomas Jr. carried both rings on a flower-trimmed white satin pillow. Frederick Powell was best man, and George W. Shaeffer, Waren Flynn, Adelbert Ayars Francis and Boyd Rogers were ushers.

The predominant colors of the wedding were yellow and white. Each of the bride's attendants wore jonquil yellow starched marquisette redingotes, the bodice tops transparent over low-cut matching taffeta slips. Taffeta overlays cut in a leaf design outlined the neck and edged the fronts and flaring skirts of the coats, which were secured in front with taffeta ties. Wide puffed sleeves were worn short above the elbows. White sweetpeas, stock and snapdragon were clustered together for the bridesmaids' bouquets. Mrs. Brandenburg's costume differed only in the all yellow daisies and snapdragon which she carried. The flower girl wore a floor length frock of white organdie alternating with rows of lace insertion, and an off-the-face net bonnet caught with flowers at each side. She carried a yellow flower basket made of daisies and sweetpeas.

Pale ivory satin fashioned the bride's gown, with which she wore a Chantilly lace panel over tulle, overlaid with a shorter veil which Mrs. Berninghaus wore at her wedding. The veils were fastened to her hair with a coronet of roses cut from the lace, which also held in place the modesty veil which hung to her flowers—a bouquet of lilies of the valley centered with purple-throated white orchids.

The gown was simple, made with a heart-shaped square neckline, shirred to the inverted point from which the skirt flared to the floor and into a four-yard train in back. Butterfly sleeves extended to points at the hand.

Mrs. Berninghaus wore French blue Chantilly lace accented with orchid tulle set on at the waist in back and forming a slight train. The orchid note was repeated in her corsage. The bridegroom's mother wore dusty rose chiffon.

After the ceremony about 200 guests motored to Glen Echo Country Club for a reception. The receiving line formed in the lounge

Little Symphony To Have Third Year; New Board Named

THE Little Symphony Association will soon announce plans for a third season of summer concerts. Robert Brookings Smith, president, said it was not yet possible to give out perfected plans. Several meetings of the executive board have been held and new elections have augmented the board to twice its previous size.

Still preponderantly a young people's association, no general changes in the original purpose of the organization are contemplated. The music devotees who founded the Little Symphony two years ago intend to continue the policy of assisting young and little-known musicians. The works of American composers, seldom heard during the regular musical season, will continue to figure prominently on the programs. And above all the original intention of keeping the music as light, melodious and cheerful in mood as possible, will be continued.

It is understood there will be an attempt to cut the price of admission in an effort to make the con-

Many Parties Promise Gay Little Season

Openings of Country Clubs, Dinners, Teas and Garden Fetes Provide Varied Entertainment.

FOLLOWING a lull in parties which has prevailed since before Lent, debutantes of the winter, young married pairs and the school crowd are finding many social affairs on their spring calendars. Many of the festivities are informal, in keeping with the season.

Last night Mrs. Ellis Fischel of Hidden Springs Farm, Florissant, entertained 12 young women and their escorts at dinner in honor of her niece, Miss Virginia Elliot Fischel, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Walter Fischel, 14 Lenox place. Guests invited for 7 o'clock were served cocktails on the terrace before dinner. Bridge was played later in the evening.

Tonight Miss Barbara Brodhead, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Brodhead, 5272 Westminster place, will entertain a small group of her friends at supper in honor of Miss Mary Alice Collins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Richeson Collins, 5265 Westminster place, and Miss Sally Gruner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey E. Gruner, 506 Lake avenue. Other guests will include Miss Jane Clyde Miller and her fiance, E. Neil Gray, Miss Betty Hulburd, Miss Harriet Edwards, Miss Martha Ann Day, Joseph M. O'Reilly Jr., Francis Wade Corley Jr., Benton Wilkins Jr., George Barnett, Charles Albert Gunter and Selden Spencer.

Another affair planned for Miss Collins will be a garden party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Pettus of the St. Louis Country Club grounds. In Mrs. Pettus' absence (she will be abroad until after the coronation) her sister, Miss Rachel Watkins, will act as hostess.

Miss Jeanne Frances Charlot, daughter of Mrs. Theodore F. Fowler, 43 Kingsbury place, has invited a few of her friends to a tea Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock to meet Miss Ann Owen of Houston, Tex. Miss Owen will arrive Tuesday to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Moss of Upper Ladue road. They will entertain in her honor Friday night at a dinner at the Park Plaza. Preceding the dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey H. Clark, 501 Clara avenue, will give a cocktail party. Mrs. Clark is the sister of Mrs. Moss.

Saturday night Miss Effie Virginia Zeibig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hunt Zeibig of the Denny road, will entertain a few of her friends at dinner.

At the opening dinner dance at the St. Louis Country Club, which will probably be May 22, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Orthwein II of the Denny road will entertain in honor of their niece, Miss Betsy Mahaffey. The night before, Mr. and Mrs. George Hayward Niedringhaus of the St. Louis Country Club grounds will introduce their niece, Miss Dorothy Potter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Potter of New York, to the younger set. Miss Potter is one of the prospective debutantes of New York's next winter season. She will arrive for a visit here the middle of next month.

Bellerive Country Club was also gay last evening for its opening dinner dance of the little season. In addition to a Dutch treat table of last season's debutantes and escorts, Miss Emily Turman, daughter of Mrs. William Bedford Turman, 5152 Washington boulevard, was hostess to a group of her friends. Her guests were Miss Ruth Donnell, Miss Virginia Moser, Miss Marjorie McCarthy, Miss Jane Chappelow, Mrs. E. Bronson Corbett, Miss Harriet Edwards, John G. Graham Jr., LeMoine Skinner, Murray Cabell, Victor Kevin, Robert Bush, Lee Schnure and Charles A. Fitz-Gerald Jr.

The guests who arrived for the spring opening at Algonquin Country Club last night found tables decorated with bowls of spring flowers and lighted by candles. Dinner was served at 8 o'clock. Reservations for parties were made by: Arthur E. Wright, P. E. Lakin, L. M. Stewart, S. E. J. Sell, E. E. Brill, C. P. Daniel, F. H. Schleicher, W. M. James, C. B. Singleton, H. T. Ashton, W. J. Wright, O. B. Henry, J. L. Bauman, J. W. Rodger, G. A. Bedell and S. A. Townsend.

Mrs. H. B. Collins to Entertain Bride-Elect

MISS NOEL KENNERLY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude S. Kennerly, and Bertrand LeBlanc, her fiance, whose wedding is to be an event of late spring, will be guests of honor at their first pre-wedding party next Sunday night. Miss Kennerly's aunt, Mrs. H. Blakesley Collins, 50 Portland place, will entertain a group of their friends at supper at the St. Louis Country Club. At a smaller table Mrs. Collins will entertain Mr. and Mrs. Kennerly and a few of her own friends.

Former St. Louis Woman, Decorated for War Service, Back After 45 Years Abroad

Mrs. Guido Panfili Here With Husband, Relates Vivid Tales of Life in Foreign Courts — Established Hosptal for Turks in Dardanelles Campaign.

By FAY PROFILET.

FOR the last three weeks St. Louis has had a visitor whose years abroad bring fascinating glimpses of life at court, vivid scenes of the World War and intimate stories of rulers of Europe and the Near East. Mrs. Guido Panfili, the former Miss Lulu Hunicke of St. Louis, accompanied by her husband, Commendatore Guido Panfili, former counselor of the legation at the Austro-Hungarian Embassy at Constantinople, has for the first time in 33 years returned to her native city to renew friendships of her girlhood.

After about 45 years of residence in foreign lands Mrs. Panfili has many adventures to relate. She has been a citizen of three countries, has lived for years at court and has been decorated by two governments for her efforts during the war.

It is not hard to imagine a person of Mrs. Panfili's charm as a figure in court life or continental society, but one has to know her to appreciate the courage and determination she displayed during the war. An extremely modest woman, she is almost fragile in appearance. Her snow-white hair is beautifully waved and her youthful figure sets off smart clothes to an advantage. As a young woman she was taken to Europe by her mother, who was the former Miss Joanna Luthy, a member of an old French family of St. Louis for a "grand tour," in those days considered essential to the "finishing" of a young woman of fashion. There she was bethrothed to, and later married the Baron Ebner von Eschenbach, Grand Equerry to Ferdinand, King of Bulgaria, and an artillery officer in the German Army.

At the Court of Sofia.

For 10 years the Baron and Baroness von Eschenbach were much in evidence in the court life at Sofia. Their days were a succession of formal parties, state dinners, court balls and the entertainment of famous personages. A day not unusual for the baroness might include a large luncheon, a garden party, several affairs for charity, and a dinner for 20 or more guests at her home. After a day of social functions she would often, on reaching her home, find a command to appear at the palace for dinner at 9 o'clock, after which members of the court would be required to appear at several balls in one night. Briefly, social life required all her energy and thought. She said one had to live for society, and that it was impossible to have cares of any nature and still do justice to the demands made on one's time and hospitality.

After more than 10 years her marriage with the baron was dissolved by divorce.

Constantinople and the War.

In 1909 she married Mr. Panfili. Again her talents as a hostess were tested. Life in smart Constantinople society was gay and exhausting. Then came the World War.

As the war advanced and the wounded were taken to Constantinople the wounded Turkish soldiers found themselves in a sad plight. The German Government was in a position to care for its wounded in hospitals it had financed, but Turkish soldiers were housed in barracks without equipment or hospital supplies. The Austrian Ambassador, the Marquis Pallavicini, sought the assistance of Mrs. Panfili and asked her to finance, establish and manage a hospital. The only place available was the barracks, there were no supplies and no money with which to buy them.

"The large bare halls were no better than a pig sty," said Mrs. Panfili. "The beds were filthy and infested with vermin and there were no mattresses or coverings. By sheer labor the place was cleaned and I was given four Austrian surgeons and four Sisters from St. George's Hospital as nurses."

Raising Money for Hospital.

Mrs. Panfili personally applied to European banks and obtained funds to equip the hospital with 206 beds. She sold half of her supplies to the Turks for enough profit to run her hospital and still had a nice emergency fund.

To this hospital came the most seriously wounded. For 10 months, during the battles of the Dardanelles, Mrs. Panfili did not desert her post for a day. Her experience at that time was one of incessant toil and a long series of horrors. Following one battle 1376 severely injured men were taken to the hospital from the battle fields, after a journey of six days. The sisters and their little superintendent spent the entire night going from one soldier to another, bathing wounds and preparing the injured for the surgeons. Mrs. Panfili is very proud of the fact that of this large number only six were lost.

"It took hard work with a bit of a heart to carry on," she said. "I remember so well the big Arab, who had his thumb shot off. His wound healed nicely and he was impatient to join his family but he worried exceedingly about his missing thumb. I thought I had a bright idea so I got a pair of kid gloves for him and stuffed the empty thumb with cotton. He was greatly pleased. Then all of a sudden this enormous Arab started weeping as though his heart would break. Rushing to his side I heard him sob, 'But Madam it won't move.'

"Another case remains in my memory. A Turk came to us with a wound in his head. A silver plate was inserted and everything possible was done for him but he did not mend. He was so depressed that he was a pitiful object. I sent for his wife who, poor creature, walked all the way from the interior. When she arrived she was a mere shadow and held in her arms a wraith of a baby. It took us two weeks of feeding the mother and her child to make them presentable. I made two little white gowns for her and took her to her sick husband. The pathos of the reunion is beyond description, but I am sure the blessing of that good woman follows me every day."

Honored by Sultan.

After the war, Mohammed V, Sultan of Turkey, personally conferred the Sheffakat (a large plaque) of diamonds and rubies on Mrs. Panfili. In making the presentation he not only complimented her on her courage but said that she was the greatest financier he had ever known because she started a project with minus and ended with plus. Charles I, Emperor of Austria, decorated her with the Order of St. Elizabeth; she received two decorations from the Red Cross of Austria and the Medal of the Red Crescent of Turkey.

Mrs. Panfili has also received various complimentary titles but one she likes is White Cloud, given her by Buffalo Bill's Indians, when with their leader they visited in Munich. At the request of the Prince Regent of Bavaria, the former St. Louisans, entertained for the Princess Terese who wanted to meet Col. Cody and the Indians. The princess, a spinster noted for her philanthropies, attended the party in a bright red gown. The Indians named her Red Cloud, not because of her gown as was supposed, but in memory of an Indian princess, Red Cloud, who was beloved for her charity.

A Brilliant Entertainment.

An entertainment that surpassed in splendor all the court functions, celebrations for royalty and elaborate private balls was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Panfili in May, 1918, when the Emperor and Empress of Austria paid a visit to the Sultan of Turkey.

"The Austrian rulers with a suite of 50 were entertained at a reception and dinner at the Sultan's palace in Constantinople," said Mrs. Panfili. "Places were laid for 200 guests with candles gleaming from five-foot-tall gold candelabra arranged between the places of every two guests. The many courses were served on solid gold dishes by a small army of servitors. The Empress and the ladies of her suite were in gorgeous robes over which hung ropes of priceless pearls. Their ornaments of diamonds, rubies and emeralds glistened in the light of a full moon over the Bosphorus. The scene reminded one of a picture from the Arabian Nights."

Mrs. Panfili's husband, a member of an historic Italian family that includes Pope Innocent X, was born at Trieste and educated in Vienna. At various times he has been attached to the Austrian Embassies in Egypt, Turkey and Bulgaria.

The visitors have been much entertained here, and when they leave they will tour the West. Mrs. Hiram Neuwoehner, the former Fedora Hunicke, and Fred W. Hunicke of St. Louis are niece and nephew of Mrs. Panfili.

Following their visit in this country Mr. and Mrs. Panfili will retire to their home at Merano, in what was the Austrian Tyrol, which now belongs to Italy. They say they have had enough of society and are looking forward to a quiet life with their friends, their books and their garden.

Florence Hudson Wed To Jack Callaway

CARLINVILLE, Ill., April 24.

MISS FLORENCE BARCLAY HUDSON, daughter of Dr. William M. Hudson, president of Blackburn College, and Mrs. Hudson, and Jack Callaway, Newark, N. J., were married at 8:30 o'clock tonight in the Presbyterian Church. The Rev. H. Richard Rasmusson, pastor, performed the ceremony in a setting of smilax and white and yellow spring flowers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, had her sister, Miss Harriet, as maid of honor; another sister, Mrs. Albert W. Meyer, Nutley, N. J., as matron of honor, and the following bridesmaids: Miss Louise Hudson, Uniontown, Pa.; Miss Alice John, Denver, Colo.; Miss Ruth Pier, Marinette, Wis., and Miss Lois Molden. David Callaway, Cincinnati, O., was best man for his brother and the ushers included: Eric Bergman, Cincinnati; John Weaver, Cleveland; Herbert Dey, Belleville, and Edmund De Trzaska.

The bridal gown of white taffeta had a point yoke of lace, high bodice and long puffed sleeves. A veil of tulle fell over the long train from a cap trimmed with orange blossoms. The bridesmaids wore similar gowns of aqua mousseline de soie, designed in redingote style with high bodices buttoned to the waists and opening over floor-length skirts of taffeta. Their flowers were yellow daisies. The maid and matron of honor wore yellow mousseline, also in the redingote style. Their bouquets were white daisies. A large reception followed the wedding.

SEA SCOUT BOAT RACES AT CREVE COEUR LAKE

Events at 2 O'Clock This Afternoon; Pennant for Crew With Highest Point Total.

Sea scouts of the St. Louis area will race their boats for the first time this season at 2 o'clock today at Creve Coeur Lake. Points will be awarded winners of the various races and at the end of the season a pennant will be given the crew of the ship having the highest total.

X-boats, eight-oared dinghies, and four-oared gigs will participate in the competition for points and there also will be contests between individually-owned boats. Supervision of today's program will be by crews from sea scout ships Old Ironsides and Renown.

Ceremonies incident to the opening of the boating season were held at the lake last Sunday. Equipment previously had been made ship-shape by scouts participating in "work-cruises" sponsored by the sea scout division of the St. Louis Council.

The Vigil award, a high honor conferred by the national board of the Order of the Arrow, honorary camping society, was given last night to four St. Louisans at Lions Den Camp for their service in scout camping work. They are H. Max Nusser, Harry Noe, Karl Kerberg, and John Gast. The presentation was made after the four had maintained an all-night watch by a camp fire at the camp.

Preceding the national award, 42 scouts from the St. Louis area were given the second degree award of the organization, the Brotherhood Honor, and other scouts were given the first degree award, the Ordeal Honor.

Nusser, it was announced yesterday, will again this year direct Lion's Den Camp and will be assisted by Harry Siemers. Camp Irondale will be in charge of Sam C. Reaves, assisted by Guy Short and Lee Lane. Irondale will be operated in three two-week sections while Lion's Den will be run in six-day, short time sections to make available camping opportunities to more scouts.

Troop Notes.

Courts of honor were held last week by Troop 305 of Webster Groves and Troop 367 of Mount Pleasant. Courts will be held next week by Troop 333, Lyndover School, Maplewood, and Troop 130, Zion Evangelical Church.

A new rover crew which will participate actively in canoeing is being organized in West District. Dr. J. M. Beard will be leader and Fielding W. Chandler chairman of the crew committee. The new group will meet today at Stites Beach.

Scouts interested in attending senior scout camp at Powder Mill, near Owl Bend, will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p. m., at St. Peter's Church, Spring avenue and Lindell boulevard, to formulate a camp program.

Girl Scouts.

An annual girl scout regional conference will be held for three days, starting Tuesday at Davenport, Ia., and will be attended by 26 officials of the St. Louis organization. Plans for a mariner or water program for girls will be perfected on Wednesday, opening day. Dr. Lillian Gilbreth, vice-chairman of the Board of Directors of the national Girl Scout organization, will speak twice on Thursday, discussing programs for girls.

Problems facing handicapped girl scouts will be considered at group discussions Friday, concluding day. Those who will attend from St. Louis include: Mrs. Louis Burlingham, Mrs. Monroe C. Lewis, Mrs. S. Watts Smyth, Mrs. George Gannett, Mrs. Boyle O. Rodes, Mrs. James V. Dunbar, Mrs. John Calhoun, Mrs. Arthur Hughes, Mrs. E. S. Elder, Mrs. Conrad Lohrer Jr., Mrs. Betty Carpenter, Miss Dorothea Cook, Mrs. J. H. Albers, Miss Agnes Liddle, Mrs. Charles Wiegand, Miss Ruth Gundlach, Miss Lucille Vehslage, Mrs. J. Burr Taylor, Miss Eleanor Stevens, Mrs. H. W. Endres, Miss Norma Kissner, Miss Margaret Buck, Miss Ruth Adele Sampson, Miss Dorothy Taylor, Miss Ann Heap and Miss Estelle Demeke.

St. Louis is in a region composed of Colorado, Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa and Missouri. Representatives from the other states also will attend.

CHURCH ANTI-ATHEISM PARADE

Catholics to March With Protestants at Larchmont, N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

LARCHMONT, N. Y., April 24.—A "Christianity parade" in which one Catholic and two Protestant congregations here will take part is planned for next Sunday "in defiance of atheism."

The Rev. Robert M. Russell of the Larchmont Avenue Presbyterian Church said the parade was arranged in answer to a challenge he made from his pulpit last Sunday in which he called on all Christians to give evidence of their defiance of atheism. St. John's Episcopal Church and St. Augustine's Roman Catholic Church responded.

Social Hygiene Committee to Meet.

The Women's Social Hygiene Civic Committee, composed of representatives of women's organizations, will meet at 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning in the auditorium of Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney. Miss Ruth Ingram, director of the Washington University Training School for Nurses, will discuss social hygiene.

A. G. Mungenast Takes New Job.

Andrew G. Mungenast, director of the Sales Managers' Bureau of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce for the past eight years, has resigned to join Streckfus Steamers, Inc. George A. Marklin, head of the Chamber's Publicity Bureau, has been named to succeed him. L. H. Edmondson will direct the Publicity Bureau.

oronation Pageantry Will Help estore Shaken Prestige of the British Throne, Says Lloyd George onarchy Survives Because It Is Temple of a Living Faith, He Writes, Pointing to Many That Have Failed.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
War Time Prime Minister of Great Britain.
(Copyright, 1937.)

LONDON, April 24.

WHEN my school lessons first made me conscious of an external world of countries as great as our own, there were in Europe eight powerful monarchies — Great Britain, Russia, France, ssia, Italy, Austria, Spain and Turkey. There are only two of ose now left—Great Britain and Italy.

The scepter in Russia is now ielded by the son of a Georgian bbler clad in an environment grim simplicity. The splendor the dazzling court of the Ro- noffs has completely disap- red.

In Germany a house painter ho shuns pomp in his imme- ate surroundings has now been bstituted for the glare and ory of the Hohenzollerns.

In France the brilliance of the ird Empire has been supplanted the somberness of the Third epublic.

In Austria the Hapsburg Em- re has been broken up into agments.

The Oriental impressiveness of amboul is a thing of the past d the massive palaces of the anish monarchy have been con- rted into fortresses to defend authority of a republic of ar- sans and peasants.

And now, in Britain we are on e eve of pageantry which will isplay to the world the last speci- en of the grandeur of European onarchy in the last century.

Our monarchy has survived be- use it is the temple of a living ith which holds greater sway er the minds and hearts of its eople as a whole than it ever id. Its acceptance and influence no longer inspired and sus- ined by fear but by the general nviction that exists of its util- and beneficence.

ward's Dethronement.

Sixty years ago there was wide- read and genuine sentiment ong the masses of the people, pecially in the populous centers Great Britain, in favor of Re- ublicanism. The overthrow of e French empire and the set- ng up of a republic within sight our shores stimulated that feel- g. It no longer exists as a per- eptible political movement. There ave been recent symptoms of its eappearance. The circumstances rrounding the dethronement of Edward VIII have temporarily haken the sense of unquestioning dulation for the throne.

I was not in England when it appened but I have been ssured y many who passed through the risis that people of all classes ere just stunned by the event. he effect in the dominions was qually shattering. A blow of hat kind over the heart of the ountry will be felt for a long ime. The late King had won his ay to the admiration and affec- ions of all races and ranks hroughout the Empire. He pos- essed in exceptional degree the enius for kingship.

The ease with which a popular King was pulled or wangled off his throne and another substituted as given a shock to the divinity f the hereditary principle.

Mr. Baldwin, it is true, was ise enough not to follow the ex- mple of his predecessor Oliver Cromwell in putting an end to the onarchy and substituting a pro- ectorate. But he reasserted the d Cromwellian doctrine that Parliament must be the real ruler ver this country and that a mon- rch is just a crowned figurehead hich, if it is tarnished or clipped, an be replaced by another with- ut detriment or difference to the eneral structure of the Constitu- ion.

raditions Swapped.

There are many cases in his- ory where political parties swap raditions. In this case the Tory arty swallowed the fundamental rinciple upon which the Whig arty was based and built. That ay have accounted to a large ex- ent for the unanimity with which arliament acted.

Whether monarchy will regain its hypnotic influence will depend on the present occupant of the throne. The present King has none of the magnetic attributes of his grandfather or his deposed brother but he seems to possess the sober qualities which made his father among the most respected and ultimately one of the most beloved sovereigns who ever filled the British throne. The present Queen has charm. Already it has won for her popularity which, in the course of time, may rival that of Queen Alexandra, whose memory is still held in high honor. The nation also has taken to its heart the two young Princesses. Their childish doings and sayings are reported with delight on every hearth. The natural dignity and womanly wisdom of former Queen Mary also are a source of great strength to monarchichal institutions.

But it is no use concealing the fact that the mystery that surrounded sovereignty and brought it worship and devotion has received an ugly rent. The gorgeousness of the coronation may gild over the tear. But it is a patched robe and that feeling will continue for some time.

What will save the monarchy, however, is the general sense throughout the empire that it is essential to continued unity of that loosely knit commonwealth. The crown is the only constitutional bond that holds it together. Every part of this vast empire will be represented at the coronation ceremonies of their chosen leaders.

This assembly of chieftains at home and across the seas taking part in what probably will be the most glittering pageant since the great days of Queen Victoria will have the effect of restoring the prestige of the throne. With the exception of India—and that is no doubt a serious exception—there is no disaffection in any other part of the empire.

Ireland and India.

It is true that Ireland has not yet been completely reconciled. But a quarrel dependent entirely upon past grievances will gradually burn itself out provided no fresh fuel is cast upon the flames. The Irish attitude of studied aloofness is not taken too seriously on this side of the channel. Not much note is taken of it.

England is fed up with the Irish question. It has been a constant worry for centuries. No one on this side of the channel wants to hear any more about it. There are now infinitely graver preoccupations engaging British statesmanship. Our papers used to be full of Ireland, her rights and wrongs, her claims and counterclaims. Every day we had our fill of Irish stew. As far as Britain is concerned, it is now off the menu. Irish politics no longer interest the British public.

India is a different matter. The situation there is difficult and threatens trouble. I have always thought that the India Act gave too little or too much. It conceded to little to win over the most powerful political organizations in India. On the other hand, it endowed the disaffected with too much power for mischief while they remained hostile. It was a case for negotiating a treaty, not for imposing a constitution.

A definite attempt ought to have been made to come to terms with Gandhi and the Congress leaders before legislation was introduced. It may not be too late to repair that omission but it cannot be put right before the coronation. The result will be that

Where Does the Money Come From, And Where Does It All Go?

Year's Receipts $5,224,000,000—Expenditures $7,781,000,000

For Seven Years Government Has Spent More Than Income—Debt $16,026,000,000 in 1930, Now $35,000,000,000.

Failure of Revenue to Meet Expectations for Fiscal Year 1937 a Serious Problem for President and Advisers.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 24.

WHERE is the money coming from and where is it going? Can our income be increased to meet expenses and leave perhaps a little surplus so we can start paying our debts? Can our expenses be cut down to match our income? If not, how much longer can we stand off our creditors who would like to have something on past due accounts?

These personal and persistent questions, faced every day by the citizen who lacks economic security, become increasingly significant when applied to local and state governments and fateful when asked of a national government whose economy, in both the broad and restricted meaning, affects for good or ill every citizen and perhaps indirectly the entire world.

In his special relief message this week, President Roosevelt pessimistically reported that the Treasury's revised estimates for the coming fiscal year indicated another deficit. The Federal income during the 12 months beginning July 1, he said, would amount to $6,906,000,000, while total expenditures, exclusive of statutory debt retirement, would be $7,324,000,000, thus putting the Government $418,000,000 further in the red.

National Debt $35,500,000,000 by End of Fiscal Year.

For the current fiscal year, the President reported that the revised estimates disclosed that total receipts would amount to $5,224,000,000 and that total expenditures, exclusive of debt retirement, would be $7,781,000,000, leaving a net deficit of $2,557,000,000, and a gross deficit, which includes debt retirement, of approximately $2,961,000,000. The national debt on June 30, the end of the fiscal year, will be about $35,500,000,000.

If the present national fiscal situation is compared with a household budget, it is seen that the Government is spending during the present fiscal year about 50 per cent more than its income, and that for the coming year, even if the President's retrenchment policy is effective enough to cut down the deficit of $418,000,000 forecast by the Treasury, there will still be no current funds available to retire any of the national debt of more than $35,000,000,000.

For the past seven years the Government has been spending more than its income. That is the simple explanation of the growth of the gross debt from $16,026,000,000 on Dec. 31, 1930, to the present figure of almost $35,000,000,000, an increase of $19,000,000 despite the fact that taxes in virtually all income brackets have been increased and indirect taxes reach every person in the United States—down to the child who chews gum.

Outgo Now Double That of Normal Years to 1929.

The accompanying chart comparing Federal expenditures shows where the money has gone and is going. Outgo for the current fiscal year is more than 10 times what it was in the pre-war year of 1915, and more than double the normal years from 1925 to 1929.

In 1915, the financial structure of the country was relatively simple. Total receipts, including postal revenues of $283,748,165, which have been excluded from the accompanying chart except for postal deficits and surpluses, amounted to $981,658,992, of which $209,786,672 was from customs; $80,201,759 from the then new income tax; $335,567,887 from miscellaneous internal revenue such as the tobacco and liquor taxes; $2,167,136 from the sale of public land; $66,787,373 from miscellaneous sources and $3,500,000 surplus postal receipts recovered to the Treasury. The total ordinary receipts that year, exclusive of postal revenues, amounted to $697,910,827, which left an ordinary deficit of $62,675,974. The next fiscal year, however, produced a surplus of $48,478,346.

Taxes in the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1936, were much greater and much more complicated, and the deficit was $4,763,841,643. That year the total receipts, including the postal revenues of $665,343,356, were $4,781,299,971. These receipts were divided as follows: Customs, $386,811,594; income and profits taxes, $1,426,575,434; miscellaneous internal revenue, $2,086,276,174; sales of public land, $74,355; miscellaneous receipts, $216,219,058. These taxes, added to the postal receipts, made up the total income of the Federal Government.

The largest categories, income and profits taxes, and miscellaneous internal revenue, were broken down in round figures as follows:

Corporation income tax, $738,500,000; individual income tax, $674,416,000; excess profits tax, $14,500,000; alcohol tax, $505,464,000; capital stock tax, $95,000,000; estate and gift tax, $378,840,000; tobacco tax, $501,100,000; nuisance taxes, $538,835,000; A A A taxes, $71,637,000.

The miscellaneous receipts, other than internal revenue, were accounted for as proceeds of $90,400,000 from Government-owned obligations; seigniorage, $39,300,000, and aggregate minor receipts of $86,100,000.

A comparison of 1915 receipts with those of 1936 shows that later receipts were only five times the former, whereas expenditures of 1936 were 10 times the ordinary expenditures of 1915. In 1915 the corporation income tax was 1 per cent of net income and the highest individual income tax was 6 per cent. There was no Federal estate tax in that year. In 1936, the corporations paid a series of taxes, the corporation income tax ranging from 12 to 15 per cent, while individual income taxes ranged from 4 to 75 per cent. At present, estate taxes stop at a maximum of 70 per cent for estates of $50,000,000 and over.

Political Considerations Enter Into the Problem.

Can income be increased to meet expenses and leave perhaps a little surplus to start paying debts? This remains to be seen. The President told Congress this week that "There is an immediate need for a careful survey of the present tax structure" and that the Treasury would be prepared by November to present suggestions to the appropriate con-

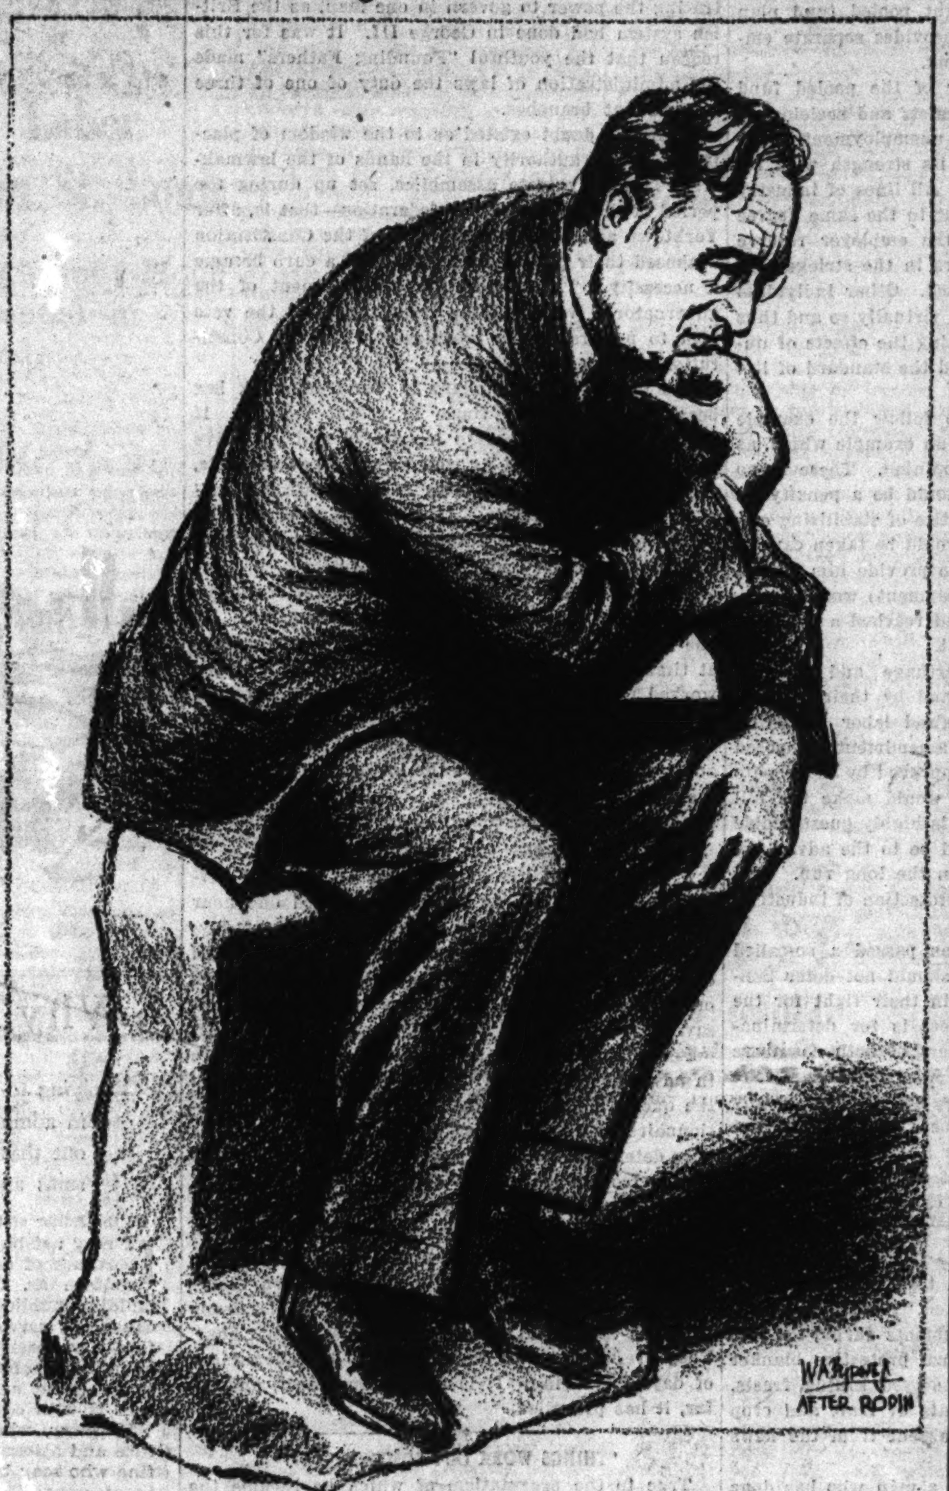
Something to Think About



Warning Which Brookings Institution Gave Congress

> "THE ultimate consequences of repeated failure of revenue collections to meet the costs of government are those which attend an increasing governmental debt. They are, first, an increasing burden of fixed charges, making for a large proportion of mandatory expenditures and a loss of budgetary flexibility; second, a weakening of government credit in financial markets, and third, the danger of pressure from inflationary groups in financial emergencies. Thus a focal point of the problem is the increasing public debt."

Senate Apparently Set to Repeat Grim Farce of Debating But Not Passing Anti-Lynch Bill

Lodge Once Found It Useful in Winning Reelection—One Measure Is From House, Other Is Sponsored by Wagner.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 24.

IN THE repertory of the Senate there are certain set pieces which go off with a fine, loud explosion of oratory—that and nothing more, so far as the bystander can detect. Actually, of course, these set pieces are for the purpose of making political capital back home. One of the favorite set pieces is the tragi-comedy of the anti-lynching bill, which is scheduled for production very shortly. There is no reason to believe that this grim farce will take any different course in the present Senate than it has taken on two or three occasions in the past.

A few Senators sincerely believe that action by the Federal Government may end lynching. Other Senators from northern states, particularly where there is a large population of Negro voters, get a reputation for being high-minded humanitarians at very little cost. They champion the bill. It is brought up in the Senate. Southern Senators rise to fight, bleed and die for states' rights and white supremacy. The bill is finally allowed to languish obscurely on the calendar, forgotten by both sides at the session's end. And that is exactly what everyone knows from the beginning will happen.

For it has happened that way several times in the past. Once was the occasion when the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts was up for re-election and stood in dire need of the Negro vote. He reached an understanding with the late Senator Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama. The measure was reported out of committee—as part of the deal—and for two days the Senate chamber resounded with impassioned oratory. Then the administration knocked the props out from under the stage set and the Senate put the anti-lynching bill back in the warehouse where other ancient stage properties are kept. Senator Lodge was re-elected.

Two Bills in the Senate.

There are two anti-lynching bills now before the Senate Judiciary Committee. One has already been passed by the House. Behind the action of the House is a bit of political wrangling that illustrates how seriously the issue of anti-lynching is regarded when it is a question of votes.

The only Negro in Congress is Representative Arthur W. Mitchell of Chicago. Mitchell introduced an anti-lynching bill which, he said, met the constitutional objections raised against other such measures. It was opposed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People because it did not go far enough. The House voted two weeks ago to lay it aside.

Indignant at this action, Mitchell charged that Democrats had joined with Republicans for political purposes to prevent his bill from being considered. Obviously, of course, it would have been bad politics to allow a Negro member to get his anti-lynching bill adopted by even one branch of the Congress.

Negroes in Northern cities who have the vote might begin to wonder whether or not the cause of their race could be advanced more rapidly by electing representatives from their own ranks. And Negro votes are vitally important in New York, Detroit, St. Louis and a dozen other cities.

Tammany politicians are well aware of the voting strength that is concentrated in Harlem, where a large population is crowded into a small area. It was a Tammany representative in Congress, Joseph A. Gavagan, who succeeded in having his anti-lynching bill substituted for Mitchell's measure.

The Gavagan bill came up in the House just a day or two after the lynching of two Negroes at Duck Hill, Miss., under circumstances of especial ferocity and savagery. Tammany representatives unloosed torrents of oratory, pointing with horror at the barbarism of the South. And the South made the traditional response. After a day of debate that all had a familiar sound, the House passed the Gavagan bill by a vote of 277 to 119. But, as one of the shrewdest politicians in the House remarked, "It is a two-lap race that this bill has to go," meaning, of course, that it would in all probability be killed in the Senate.

Bill as Passed by House.

Although the Gavagan anti-lynching bill follows a familiar pattern, it goes somewhat further than past measures. Among other provisions is the following:

"Any county in which a person is seriously injured or put to death by a mob of riotous assemblage shall be liable to the injured person or the legal representatives of such person for a sum not less than $2000 nor more than $10,000 as liquidated damages, which sum may be recovered in a civil action against such county in the United States District Court of the Judicial District wherein such person is put to the injury or death. Such action shall be brought and prosecuted by the United States District Attorney of the district in the United States District Court for such district. If such amount awarded be not paid upon recovery of a judgment therefor, such court shall have jurisdiction to enforce payment thereof by levy of execution upon any property of the county, or may otherwise compel payment thereof by mandamus or other appropriate process; and any officer of such county or other person who disobeys or fails to comply with any lawful order of the court in the premises shall be liable to punishment as for contempt and to any other penalty provided by law therefor."

Based on Amendment.

The second anti-lynching bill before the Senate Judiciary Committee is sponsored by Senator Wagner (Dem.), New York, and Senator Van Nuys (Dem.), Indiana. Both measures are based on the fourteenth amendment, which guarantees to all citizens "equal protection of the laws." This was one of the amendments adopted after the Civil War to assure a fair deal to the Negroes of the South. Although, in many respects, both measures would seem to violate states' rights provisions, their sponsors insist they have a good chance of approval by the courts because they are a further guarantee of "equal protection" to Negroes.

A bloc in the Senate has always contended that such anti-lynching laws are clearly unconstitutional. This group is headed by Senator Borah (Rep.), Idaho. Borah, in an interview with the Post-Dispatch, contended that the two anti-lynching bills now under consideration have the same constitutional defects of past laws intended to end the crime of lynching.

"There is nothing in this move but politics," Borah said. "And, when these bills come up on the Senate floor, I intend to say so. It is nonsense to talk about the fourteenth amendment as a justification for such measures. The fourteenth amendment was intended to insure that states did not pass laws which discriminated against any race."

The Southern States, of course, have not discriminated in their laws against Negroes. Negroes in the deep South under the law have Rebirth.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

(WINDSOR, England, April 16.—Led by King George VI, a movement started today to scrap the war trophies won by British armies, to help finance Britain's $7,500,000,000 program for new armaments. George started the campaign with an order to remove two German field pieces from the east terrace of Royal Windsor Castle.)

We thought they had outlived their use,
Those two iron funnels of destruction;
We mocked at them chained in that peaceful garden,
Captive in a land that was not theirs.
We asked them where their power had gone,
With scorn we ridiculed their empty bulk.

And then he came, that man whom we had loved,
Whom we had trusted with an empire's care;
He spoke and made us foolish in their sight,
Those two iron funnels laughing at our words,
Leaving us helpless as they rolled away,
Already rumbling with a greed for war.

It took but little time for fire and skill,
For science to bring forth those two again,
More deadly and more powerful than before,
Monsters to whom we bowed at his command.
And there were no regrets in their chilled veins
That they were pointed toward their native land.

Widowed by a Drunken Driver.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MRS. SHANKLAND'S letter on drunkenness and auto accidents, and "The Cost of Failure," as reprinted from the Kansas City Times, were intensely interesting to me, for my husband was recently killed by a driver who was, at the time of the accident, foul with the odor of booze and totally unfit to be at the wheel of a car. What a cruel trick of fate, that the careful, blameless driver should have his needed life snuffed out, while the other should not only be spared to live, but to live as a future menace to potential victims!

The day has come when our highways are a "no man's land," just as real, and the unfit driver an enemy, just as menacing, as any the mind can conceive. How much further must the stupid tragedy go on before the anti-social individual is eliminated from the highways?

A Schoolmaster Makes a Proposition.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

AS a schoolmaster, and hence as one of the favored class of public servants thus far exempt from the Federal income tax, I most heartily concur in your suggestion that such exemption be removed—if only to make unnecessary such silly cartoons as the one you reprinted the other day, showing an "unfavored" citizen staggering beneath his load of taxes, gazing with envy at the public servant swaggering on his tax-free way.

My concurrence, however, is not so altruistic as it may sound. Although my salary is something over twice that of the United States average paid to teachers, it still is about 30 per cent short of reaching the exemption that would be allowed me as a married man with two children. So if all teachers had to pay this tax, my payments would be multiplied by 100,000 or so, the total amount still being approximately no dollars and no cents. My State income tax, which I duly pay, comes to about $4 a year.

In the meantime, I have been disbursing between 15 and 20 per cent of my salary in sales tax, personal property tax, internal revenue taxes on the moderate amounts of tobacco and beer I can afford to consume, real estate taxes (paid in rent, since, like most of the "favored" class, I cannot afford to own a house), to say nothing of an unestimated but large amount of hidden taxes on everything my family and I wear and eat. All these disbursements make it impossible for me to own an automobile, which is probably just as well; for if I did, I should have to add another $50 or $60 a year to my tax bill.

I propose a bargain: I shall do everything in my power to further your proposal to remove my exemption from the Federal income tax, if you in return will put forth your best efforts in behalf of such a salary schedule for me and my colleagues as will require us, when the exemption is removed, to pay a substantial sum as income tax—the more the better.

Urges Minimum-Wage Law.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WITH reference to the minimum-wage bill—H. 516—pending in the Missouri Legislature, introduced by Representative Edgar J. Keating and favorably reported out of committee: We understand from the United States Department of Labor that there is some enthusiasm for the bill in Missouri and there is hope that it will pass.

While it is not the standard minimum-wage bill recommended by the National Consumers' League, we believe that it should be boosted by everyone interested in minimum-wage legislation.

EMILY SIMS MARCONNIER,
Associate General Secretary, National Consumers' League.
New York City.

FOR A POOLED FUND.

Remiss though it has been in many respects, there is no doubt that the Missouri Legislature will pass an unemployment insurance bill. Forty-four of the 48 states now have legislation which enables them to share in the unemployment insurance benefits of the Federal Social Security Act. Missouri must enact such a law or continue at the financial disadvantage which has already cost the State some $6,000,000.

The question is: What kind of unemployment insurance law will Missouri have?

There are, briefly, two main plans for state statutes of this sort. One is the employer reserve fund type, such as Wisconsin alone has in its pure form. This type, as the name suggests, provides that the payments of each employer shall be kept in a separate reserve in his name, this reserve being subject to demands upon it only by the employes of the individual employer who created the reserve. Three states have made the employer reserve the basis of their systems, but have modified it so as not to rely solely on individual reserves.

The other type is the pooled fund type. Under it, all the payments of all employers go into a common fund, to be drawn upon as needed by any or all contributing employers. All the states with unemployment insurance systems, with the exceptions noted, have adopted either the outright pooled fund plan or a modification of it which provides separate employer accounts for merit rating.

This preponderance in favor of the pooled fund type reflects the view of economists and sociologists generally that the success of an unemployment insurance system will depend upon its strength with respect to the whole of industry. All lines of industry do not experience unemployment to the same degree when times are bad. Under the employer reserve fund plan, reserves of employers in the stricken industries would soon be exhausted. Other individual reserves would remain intact or virtually so and thus be of little or no use in mitigating the effects of unemployment on consumption and the standard of living generally.

The course of wisdom is to follow the example of the majority of other states, an example which, as we have said, reflects expert opinion. There is no reason why the pooled fund should be a penalty on the employer who makes a practice of stabilizing employment. Such an employer would be taken care of if the bill were written so as to provide him with a merit rating under which his payments would be reduced or stopped when they had reached a specified proportion of his annual payroll.

Senator McReynolds of Carthage and Senator Rozier of Perryville should stand by their original bill for a pooled fund. Organized labor is behind them, as labor should be. The amendments proposed by Associated Industries and approved by the Senate Committee on Social Security would make the bill an employer-reserve affair. It is highly questionable whether the amendments would be to the advantage even of individual employers in the long run. Certainly they do not look to the protection of industrial workers by and large.

The fact that the House has passed a so-called combination of the two types should not deter Senators McReynolds and Rozier in their fight for the sounder principle. The prospect is for determination by a conference of members of both chambers after a contest in the Senate. What if it does take several weeks longer? The Legislature has already wasted four months. Its members should not object to staying in Jefferson City for a sufficiently longer time to enact the best bill that experience with unemployment insurance to date can recommend.

A TOAST.

Fellow-citizens! We offer a toast to a man who is more often panned than toasted. A man who skillfully mixed the atmospheric elements during the last few weeks, laid a late but warm protective blanket of snow over our plants and stayed killing frosts, while the annual announcements of fruit and crop damage have been noticeably absent from the news columns.

Fellow-citizens, we offer you a man who has done his work well, nourishing nature with slices of sunshine sandwiched between warm showers. A man who has made possible the greatest show on earth—the spring flower show—made it finer than we usually see it in this section of the country.

We give you Roscoe C. Nunn, for his work this spring.

UNION EFFORTS IN HARLAN COUNTY.

One of the most amazing aspects of the situation in Harlan County, Ky., now being exposed before the La Follette committee, is the fact that union organization efforts persisted despite the policy of terrorism constantly directed against them.

Organizers going into this "feudal barony" literally took their lives in their hands. They were hounded, threatened, beaten, fired upon; meetings were broken up and houses bombed. Many of the organizers were not "outside agitators"; they were employes of the coal company and residents of the district. And, despite the personal peril, many of the miners themselves showed enough concern in organization to take part in meetings and to attempt formation of union groups. Men must have zealous devotion to a cause when they follow it in the face of such formidable opposition, wielded by those who control their economic welfare and that of their families.

Perhaps the wholesome airing by the Senate inquiry, together with the validation of the Wagner Act, will mean a new day in Harlan County. The United Mine Workers already is opening an organization campaign there. State authorities, pilloried before the nation for tolerating oppression in the mine field, should be shocked into action to protect the workers' rights. By a long period of martyrdom, the miners of Harlan County have won the right to organize in defense of their interests.

DUDLEY DIGGES SETS A STAGE RECORD.

Dudley Digges, who played his three-thousandth performance for the Theater Guild the other night, may not be one of the stage folk whose names are blazed in the bright lights, but the world of the theater knows him as among the finest practitioners of its exacting art. His current play, "The Masque of Kings," now in New York, is his twenty-third for the Theater Guild, and the 3000 performances he has rounded out give him a record for acting under one management. St. Louis theater-goers will remember him for such excellent character studies as the worthless Alfred Doolittle in Shaw's "Pygmalion" and the rich and powerful munitions magnate, Andrew Undershaft, in "Major Barbara." Other Theater Guild productions which owed a great deal to his talents include "Volpone," "Mr. Pim Passes By," "The Brothers Karamazov" and "Marco Millions." His late entrance into the motion picture field gave him a further repertoire of character roles, in such superior films as "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "The General Died at Dawn." Even on the stage, there are those who, to use a thought of the late Justice Holmes, try to "hammer out as good a piece of work as possible and leave it unadvertised." Dudley Digges is such an actor.

WHY WE HAVE CHECKS AND BALANCES.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In connection with the Supreme Court controversy, may I suggest that you publish the fundamental reasons for the three branches of our Federal Government? This information is needed as a basis for discussion of the President's bill.

M. K.

While many scholarly books have been written about the framing of the American Constitution and the political ideals behind it, the basic reason for dividing the Government into three co-ordinate branches—executive, legislative and judicial—can be stated in a few words.

The colonists had been through a war for independence, waged primarily against executive tyranny. They did not want to make the mistake of concentrating the power to govern in one man, as the British system had done in George III. It was for this reason that the youthful "Founding Fathers" made the administration of laws the duty of one of three independent branches.

A similar doubt existed as to the wisdom of placing too much authority in the hands of the lawmakers. The early state assemblies, set up during the period of the Articles of Confederation—that is, after Yorktown and before the framing of the Constitution—abused their powers so grossly that a curb became a necessity. This led to the establishment of the gubernatorial veto and the transference of the veto idea to powers of the presidency when the Constitution was drawn.

The place of the judiciary in the framework has been discussed many times in recent months. If there were to be separate legislative and executive branches and Federal as well as state governments, each with powers and duties of their own, an umpire was indispensable. If the umpire erred, the people would have the authority and means to make suitable correction under the Constitution.

There are other elements in the system of checks and balances, but these are the most important. No one will deny that the system has its disadvantages at times. But through a century and a half, it has worked remarkably well. The end test is the result, and the result today is that Americans continue to enjoy democratic self-government when repression and tyrannical misrule are the lot of most peoples of the world.

ST. LOUISANS AND DAYLIGHT SAVING.

A large part of the country goes on daylight saving time today, moving the clock forward one hour to give people the benefit of an extra hour of daylight in the evening. This will give rise to the annual crop of inquiries as to why, since it seems to work out well elsewhere, St. Louis does not adopt daylight saving.

Perhaps it is just as well to answer these inquiries in advance. Numerous tests of public sentiment on the question have been held here, including a questionnaire by the Chamber of Commerce, and it has been determined that the plan meets with vigorous objection from a large body of our citizens.

St. Louis, as most of us recall, is pretty hot in summer and the heat often remains after the sun goes down and far into the night. The coolest hour of the 24-hour period is the hour before dawn. Daylight saving would cause thousands of St. Louisans to forfeit the restful slumber that comes in that hour. They prefer that cool hour in bed to the advantages of daylight saving. It is a good argument, and, so far, it has prevailed.

"THINGS WORK OUT SOMEHOW——"

True to the pragmatism of which he became the first exponent on the death of William James, Dr. John Dewey still bets his money on "ordinary horse sense." He sees no possibility of the country's turning to Communism, which his fellow-philosopher, Dr. Meiklejohn, has confidently predicted for the near future. A determined effort to establish Communism would, he thinks, precipitate a "short-cut to Fascism," though a dictator here would have no such absolute power as the European type.

Opinion will overwhelmingly agree with Dr. Dewey, we feel sure, as to the improbability of the American people's acceptance of Communism. As a matter of obvious fact, Communism—meaning the Russian experiment—is on trial. Assuredly, it has yet to prove itself, and it has made compromises with capitalism for purposes of self-preservation. As for the isms operating in Italy and Germany, will anyone seriously say that either Mussolini or Hitler has erected a durable system of government or that either really possesses certainty of tenure? Guedalla, in his latest work, "The Hundred Years," dismisses dictatorship "as a contrivance for giving an air of permanence to a temporary retrogression."

"Things work out somehow in the long run. . . . After all, certain fundamentals remain." So says Dr. John Dewey in the fullness of a wisdom reserved for the elect—in a faith which is the communion of democracy.

PILE IT ON!

Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee held a pretty picture before the nation when he said that, unless demands upon Congress for more and more money are curbed, a national sales tax will become a serious threat.

By all means, let us have a national sales tax on the bread our people eat and on the milk their children drink. Let us pay the Government 2 cents on every dollar we spend in addition to the 2 cents we shall soon be paying the State of Missouri. Pile it on!

Missouri's tax will yield $25,000,000 a year. A national sales tax would pour the riches of Golconda into the Federal Treasury. It would yield enough, perhaps, to satiate the most lavish spenders of the public funds. Maybe, in time, it would be possible to relieve the burden of surtaxes on our multimillionaires.

A brilliant idea! It will have the fullest support of great patriots like William Randolph Hearst, and if the poor people grumble, let them eat cake.

IT CAN HAPPEN HERE!

Why Trained Social Workers Are Needed

Replying to recent resolution by Missouri House condemning use of trained workers in administering security program, social service heads of three universities point out that experienced personnel is all-important; unskilled aids may waste huge sums and throw into disrepute the whole effort to help society's dependents.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IT may not be as easy to recognize the importance of adequate personnel for public welfare as, for instance, it is in road-building, public health or even education, because the services rendered by public welfare have been so intimately a part of our habit of neighborliness. Need is not hard to recognize, and we get the feeling that its care is with equal ease attended to.

However, when the state enters the picture and attempts by legal enactment to define who may be aided and how, the project is at once lifted to an entirely different plane. It isn't that the state ignores suffering or that its representatives are not moved by the sentiment of pity. It does mean, however, that those who are helping the needy are handling other people's money, and are doing it within the framework of law and under administrative regulations which, though changed by experience from time to time, are necessary to define what can and cannot be done and how.

The law defines who may receive assistance, how much he may receive, and in what form it is to be given. In public administration, there is always the danger that some might be neglected and others who do not need assistance receive it. The public administrator of assistance gradually comes to control the very lives and happiness of those dependent upon his judgment and insight. These are far different conditions from mere neighborliness, or that constant and universal spirit of helpfulness by which mutual aid is carried on without organization and without much planning, but with our own money and our own time.

Passage of the Social Security Act and the legislation which first came in as emergency and now probably is being gradually transferred on a permanent foundation, such as the provisions for work, provisions for employment and possibly provisions for relief, has introduced a new chapter in the field of public welfare. It has made it at once the largest single governmental activity, overshadowing any sum of money spent on any other objective, even education, or the army and navy. In the possible beneficiaries—the old, the blind, the unemployed, dependent children—it probably will have to care for more people than any single organization has attempted to protect in all history.

When such important values are entrusted to public servants, it is obvious that the selection of those who are to be given such authority constitutes a vital factor in the success or the failure of the law, a law which has the possibility of wasting such an enormous amount of money—money running up into several billions each year throughout the United States, and a law which places the fate of so many people in the hands of its administrators must be entrusted only to the best possible available persons.

When one attempts to define what is good and bad in administration, there is sufficient experience to indicate that there are really only two tests: one is experience, the other, education. As we have more knowledge of administrative efficiency, it becomes clear that experience itself is dependent upon education, and that to secure the best type of administrator, it is necessary that he be prepared by a thorough educational discipline.

It is inconceivable that the Federal Government would grant money to a state without directly or indirectly defining the way it is to be spent, and the qualifications of those who are to spend it. The Commission on Economic Security, whose report was the basis on which the Social Security bill was passed by Congress in July, 1935, included in its recommendations that the law establishing the Social Security Board should entrust to that board the power to determine the qualification of appointees of state administrative units. The Senate, however, eliminated that item, but left with the Social Security Board the right to designate those conditions of efficiency which it considered necessary for honest administration of the law.

It is only by such a right to determine personnel and method that the Government grants money to a state. It used that policy in its grant to agricultural colleges in determining the quality of those who could be employed in such colleges and the subjects they taught. It did the same thing in the matter of farm demonstration agents, in grants for road-building, for vocational rehabilitation of the handicapped, for infant and maternal welfare and, most recently of all, for the public employment offices.

In each instance, there has been some resistance to such exercise of power by the Federal Government, but never has that resistance been effective, for the simple reason that it is inherent in the nature of grants in aid that the authority granting the money shall have some right in determining the way in which it is to be spent. There is no reason to believe, therefore, that Congress, even if it would abridge the power of the Social Security Board more narrowly than it already has done in the matter of indicating the type of administrator the state must appoint if it is to receive the benefit of Federal grants, would be at liberty to do so.

The well-equipped and experienced administrator in the field of public welfare is the only one who can insure, on one side, that the money spent shall go exactly or as nearly exactly as possible to the objects for which it is voted and, on the other side, that it shall be administered in a humane and discriminating fashion, so that it will secure the maximum of benefit and the minimum of harm. By no other personnel is there any insurance that these huge sums of money will not be badly wasted and the whole project of establishing some form of insurance for the aged, the unemployed and the handicapped in our industrially organized society, come into disrepute.

The projects under the Social Security Act and its allied measures constitute the greatest experiments in social protection ever undertaken in any nation. They have all the perils of an experiment because of the untried elements in them. They also have all the potentialities for lasting social benefit which the smaller experiments largely made in Europe in social insurance have demonstrated can be secured under such a scheme when it is properly administered.

MUSSOLINI, GOERING WILL MEET TOMORROW

Italian Will Consult With German on Policy Toward Austria and Spain.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, April 24.—Premier Mussolini, fresh from a conference with Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria, will meet Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering of Germany Monday to discuss the Italian-German attitude toward Austria and Spain. He will give Goering the results of his Venice conversations with the Austrian Chancellor. Goering now is in Capri.

Popolo di Roma, authoritative newspaper, said the predicted calling of Nazis to join with the Fatherland Front in Austria would not be "anschluss (union with Germany) from within," but assumption of responsibilities by the Austrian Nazi party which it has "a right to assume" because of the number of its followers.

Mussolini, many persons believed, would like to see the Spanish civil war end with a compromise.

BERLIN, April 24.—Informed political circles insisted tonight there was nothing sensational in the Mussolini-Schuschnigg talks in Venice. They followed the lines of previous understandings between Germany, Italy and Austria, and undoubtedly would strengthen these relations, these sources said.

I. C. C. HEARING ON PROPOSED COTTON BELT REORGANIZATION

Testimony on Conditions Leading Up to Its Bankruptcy Ruled Out.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The Interstate Commerce Commission refused today to receive testimony dealing with conditions which led to the bankruptcy of the St. Louis Southwestern (Cotton Belt) Railroad. Chairman Mahaffie ruled the testimony was irrelevant, during questioning of Henry W. DeForest, former chairman of the Southern Pacific Railroad, at a hearing on proposed reorganization plans for Cotton Belt.

DeForest expressed willingness to answer the question, put by counsel for proponents of the plans, but the commission agreed only to admit an exception to its ruling.

Earlier in the hearing, Hale Holden, present chairman of the Southern Pacific, said a merger with or lease of Cotton Belt by Southern Pacific would be impractical at this time, on the ground that terms might be based on earnings during depression years.

Counsel for proponents of immediate reorganization presented an exhibit proposing a conference of interested persons with a view to working out a plan under which present creditors would remain undisturbed and calling for issuance of common stock to meet any cash requirements.

KING ZOG OF ALBANIA WANTS WIFE WITH ABOUT $5,000,000

By the Associated Press.

TIRANA, Albania, April 24.—King Zog of Albania still wants a wife, but royal romance comes high. Diplomats, denying rumors of his engagement to a member of the Italian aristocracy, said there remained two obstacles to the King's marriage.

The first is to find a wife with at least $5,000,000; the second, to get four of his sisters married off. Albania is a poor country, with a possible future in oil. Zog figures an heiress—perhaps an American—not only would bring him a personal fortune, but would aid him in interesting the United States or some other country in his little kingdom.

She would have to be nice to these sisters-in-law: Princess Adile, 42 years old, married to Emir Bey Dibra; Princess Nafize, 37, a widow; Princess Myzeyen, 27; Princess Ruhije, 26, and Princess Maxhide, 25, all spinsters, and Princess Senije, 28, who married a Turkish Prince in March.

May Day, International Labor Holiday, Originated in St. Louis

Marked Beginning of A. F. L. Fight for 8-Hour Work-Day and Was Adopted in Europe for Same End.

Next Saturday, when labor organizations in many parts of the world will celebrate May day—the only international holiday in existence aside from religious festivals—they will be observing a date fixed by a resolution adopted nearly a half-century ago in St. Louis.

This labor holiday, contrary to widespread belief, did not originate in Europe, and has no connection with Maypole dancing and pagan or other primitive festivals. It was instituted by vote of the third annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, which met in Central Turner Hall, on Tenth street, south of Market street, St. Louis, the week of Dec. 11, 1888.

Samuel Gompers, president of the new organization, which had been erected two years before at Columbus, O., on the wreckage of the Knights of Labor and the Federation of Organized Trades and Labor Unions of the United States and Canada, declared in his annual address that the work-day should be shortened as a means of relieving unemployment. The work-day at that time was commonly 10 hours, but in some instances rose to 12, 14 or 18 hours.

"I recommend," said Gompers, "that some day be set apart by this convention, not later than 1890, when the working people of the entire country shall be called upon to demand simultaneously the enforcement of eight hours as a day's work."

Choosing of the Day.

This portion of the address was referred to a special committee of seven, the chairman of which was John S. Kirchner, a Philadelphia cigar-maker. The committee recommended that labor mass meetings in behalf of the eight-hour day should be held on Washington's birthday and Independence day, 1889, and on Washington's birthday, 1890.

All sections of the report were unanimously adopted save that referring to the date. Delegate H. Blackmore, a St. Louis carpenter, moved that it be set for June 1, 1890. But E. Applehagen, a delegate from Milwaukee, had a flash of inspiration. He offered a substitute motion fixing the date as May 1, 1890. That would be the fourth anniversary of the strikes, centering at Chicago, which began on May 1, 1886, and which led to riots on May 3, in which police killed four workers, and to the Haymarket Square incident of May 4, in which a bomb thrown by a striker killed one policeman and wounded others. Applehagen's motion was carried by a vote of 38 to 8, "amid tumultuous cheers and enthusiastic applause," according to the minutes of the convention.

Adoption in Europe.

In the following year, during July, 1889, there was formed at Paris the Socialist-Labor International, which became known as the Second International. Among the representatives from various countries were Liebknecht, Bebel, Vollmar, Anseele, Cunningham-Graham, William Morris, Pierre Lavroff, Victor Adler, Amilcare Cipriani and Pablo Iglesias.

A delegate from Bordeaux, Raymond Lavigne, proposed a motion in the following terms: "That there shall be organized a great international manifestation on some day to be fixed, in such wise that simultaneously, in all countries and cities, the working classes may demand of the public authorities a legal reduction of the work-day to eight hours."

The date was settled by two paragraphs inserted in the resolution as passed by the congress, to this effect:

"Whereas, a similar demonstration has already been decided upon for May 1, 1890, by the American Federation of Labor, in its convention of December, 1888, held at St. Louis;

"Be it therefore resolved, that this date shall be adopted for the international demonstration."

Revolutionary Complexion.

The arrival of May 1, 1890, was a signal for an outbreak of strikes in many parts of France, and for a monster parade of workmen in Paris, who marched upon the Chamber of Deputies with petitions for an eight-hour day, and were ridden down by mounted police. These events gave to the holiday the revolutionary complexion it has since possessed. That character was officially recognized in a resolution passed at the Socialist Congress held at Brussels in 1891, which read:

"Henceforth May 1 shall be observed by the internatonal proletariat as a day of rest, on which the proletariat affirms its class consciousness and its determination to win ultimate emancipation."

From that time, in nearly every industrial country save the United States and Canada, May 1 has been celebrated as a holiday of public demonstration and often insurrection by trade unions, Socialist parties and labor organizations in general. On the continent, it has frequently been marked by sanguinary conflicts with the police. It is an official holiday in Russia, and is forbidden in Fascist Italy. In Great Britain, the first Sunday after May day is usually observed.

May 1 is celebrated as Labor day in the Philippines. The continental United States observes the first Monday in September. This date was fixed by an act of Congress of 1894 as that of national Labor day.

Central Turner Hall.

Central Turner Hall, where the labor convention met in 1888, was known earlier as St. Louis Turnhalle. It was an historic downtown structure until its demolition less than five years ago. It was built in 1855, home of the first of the turnvereins, or gymnastic societies, organized in St. Louis by citizens of German birth. It stood on the east side of Tenth street, between Market and Walnut streets.

The first companies of the First Regiment, Missouri Volunteers, were organized in this hall in 1861, and the hall was used as a drill place. Because of this use and because of the large number of the turnverein members who became Union soldiers, the hall became known as "The Cradle of Liberty."

An immigration inspector prevented her entrance into the country at Norfolk, Va., where Dr. Sarma met her yesterday, and ordered her to remain aboard ship until an immigration board here could consider her case.

Where Money Comes From—Where It Goes

gressional committee "for such new additional taxes as may be necessary to meet deficiencies, if any, in the revenue-producing power of the present levies."

The quotation says the administration is ready to impose new taxes early in the next session, but next year is a congressional campaign year, a period when Congressmen are reluctant to compel their constituents to pay more money into the Federal Treasury. Already there is talk of widening the individual income tax base by lowering the exemptions so that instead of about 2,000,000 individuals paying the direct Federal tax, the number would be greatly increased. In the past, however, aside from the political aspects of the question, it has been said that the widening of the base would entail administrative difficulties costing as much as or more than the additional taxes.

The Tax Committee of the Twentieth Century Fund, an endowed institution devoted to the study of governmental problems, has recommended that the present undistributed profits tax be repealed, for which would be substituted "a genuine excess profits tax with high progressive rates reaching a peak perhaps between 50 and 75 per cent in times of peace." This would be a tax on business profits, and it was repeatedly urged by the late Senator Couzens of Michigan, who said it would force corporations to lower the price of their products, to increase the wages of labor and to stimulate plant additions.

Roosevelt Silent About New Taxes He Favors.

As yet the administration has not indicated what "new or additional taxes" it favors, but if expenditures are maintained at the level of the last few years, it would take great tax increases before a dent could be made in the mountain of national debt.

Can expenses be cut down to match income? Advocates of a balanced budget say that expenses can be cut down without distress to the worthy needy on relief. In the past, Mr. Roosevelt has replied that governmental costs could only be reduced by cutting down governmental services, and he has been unwilling to concede that there has been needless expenditures for relief and the priming of the industrial pump. His latest message, however, attacked the minority pressure groups which have been so successful in getting Federal funds, and he said that he intended to take definite action at the beginning of the next fiscal year to withhold a substantial percentage of congressional appropriations for the executive departments and agencies. He told reporters that he thought he had this power, but would prefer to have a specific grant of authority from Congress to hold up part of the appropriations. How and when he expected to get this authority he did not say.

The pressure groups are already busy in Congress, not to reduce expenditures, but to increase them. Representative Taber of New York, ranking Republican member of the House Appropriations Committee, put into the Congressional Record this week a list of bills introduced in the present session authorizing or making appropriations of Federal funds. The list totaled more than $150,000,000,000.

Appropriation Bills Huge; Government Services Grow.

The Taber list included many duplications. A more compact list was presented by Representative Lamneck (Dem.) of Ohio, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, which totaled $16,254,000,000.

Bills to Spend $16,500,000,000

WASHINGTON, April 24.

REPRESENTATIVE LAMNECK (Dem.) Ohio, has made the following list of appropriations introduced at the present session of congress, totaling $16,154,000,000:

Florida ship canal	$ 265,000,000
Farm Tenancy and Rehabilitation loans	195,000,000
Public works	3,000,000,000
Housing	100,000,000
Slum clearance	1,000,000,000
Old-Age Pension grants to states	500,000,000
Farm Mortgage refinancing	3,000,000,000
Home Mortgage refinancing	3,000,000,000
National libraries	50,000,000
Relief (to June 30)	750,000,000
Education	500,000,000
Venereal disease control	25,000,000
Weed control	50,000,000
For buying securities from towns, counties and school districts	100,000,000
Flood control, Pittsburgh district	2,500,000,000
Flood losses	200,000,000
Military posts	34,000,000
Dust bowl aid	10,000,000
Roads	125,000,000
Dairy relief	30,000,000
Youth appropriation	500,000,000
Soil survey	200,000,000
Livestock feed	20,000,000
Total	$16,154,000,000

But even if the special appropriations could be cut down or many of them eliminated, the Government would still be unable to pare expenses to the so-called normal times of the twenties. As President Roosevelt has said, governmental services have increased. The Social Security program eventually will run into billions of dollars, the Soil Conservation program which supplanted the unconstitutional Agricultural Adjustment Administration has become a permanent institution and the Civilian Conservation Corps has been absorbed from "Recovery and Relief" into the general governmental system. These are only a few—but the largest—of the new governmental agencies.

The increased governmental personnel, the annual debt charges and expenditures for national defense have become fixed annual charges.

The Brookings Institution, in a recent confidential report to the special congressional committees investigating the executive agencies of the Government, said:

"In the administration of the national government the payroll cost, or the expenditures for personal services, constitute by far the largest item of expense. According to the United States Civil Service Commission, the aggregate net payroll for the civil executive branch of the Federal Government for November, 1936, was $130,237,173. At this rate the annual payroll for civilian employes, including postal employes, would exceed $1,500,000,000.

"The number of civil employes in the executive branch furnishes an excellent statistical index of the changes that have taken place in the size of the executive establishment."

Civil Personnel Increased to 835,704 by September, 1936.

The report then listed the changes in civil employes in Government service between July, 1920, when the Civil Service Commission started its statistical service, and Sept. 30, 1936. This list showed 691,116 civil employes on the payroll on July 31, 1920, when the demobilization of war employes had not been completed. By June 30, 1923, the number had been decreased to 515,772. From then on there was a gradual increase to 568,200 on Feb. 28, 1933. By June 30, 1933, the figure had jumped to 572,091; by June 30, 1934, to 673,095; by June 30, 1935, to 719,440; by June 30, 1936, to 824,259, and by Sept. 30, 1936, to 835,704.

Liquidation of personnel takes time and while some of the outstanding New Dealers are leaving governmental service for higher paying positions in private industry, the rank and file are hanging on for dear life. It will be difficult to dislodge them even if there is a real economy wave.

The cost of national defense is another ever-increasing item and in the present state of world affairs there is little likelihood that it will be reduced. In fact, it is more likely to be increased. In 1915, the cost was $267,000,000, and by 1925, it had jumped to $590,000,000. From the then peak of $702,000,000 in 1932, it sagged for two years, reaching a low of $480,000,000 in 1934. Last year it was $764,000,000, and the estimates for the current and the coming fiscal years are $888,000,000 and $981,000,000, respectively.

Interest on National Debt Rises to $860,000,000 a Year.

As in private business, interest on debt is a fixed charge, and while the interest rate on Government securities has gone down because banks were heavy with private and governmental deposits, the total cost has gone up with the increase in the national debt.

In 1915, the interest on the national debt was only $22,936,642, an amount which in governmental circles today is considered chicken feed. Because of the enormous war debt, the interest charges jumped to $829,680,000 in 1925, and showed a gradual decline to $588,987,000 in 1931. The figures for the subsequent years are as follows: 1932, $671,604,000; 1933, $742,175,000; 1934, $842,301,000; 1935, $750,677,000; 1936, $838,002,000; 1937 (estimated), $835,000,000, and 1938 (estimated) $860,000,000.

Thus no matter what other reductions are made, the interest on the national debt will remain almost a billion dollar fixed charge for a considerable time.

What will happen if governmental costs are not reduced? The Brookings Institution gave the answer in its report to the congressional committees when it said:

"The ultimate consequences of repeated failure of revenue collections to meet the costs of government are those which attend an increasing governmental debt. They are, first, an increasing burden of fixed charges, making for a large proportion of mandatory expenditures and a loss of budgetary flexibility; second, a weakening of government credit in financial markets, and, third, the danger of pressure from inflationary groups in financial emergencies. Thus a focal point of the problem is the increasing public debt."

Translated into terms of household economy, the Brookings Institution said in effect that if debts get too large, too much of income must go to pay interest; that the banker will demand higher interest rates if there is no payment on principal, and finally bankruptcy—for inflation is to the Government what bankruptcy is to an individual.

British and American Ways of Meeting an Emergency.

Many experts and laymen have insisted that Great Britain followed a wiser course during the depression when the Government there insisted that taxes should be increased and expenditures held to a minimum during the trying years. By coincidence, on the same day President Roosevelt sent his relief and budget message to Congress, Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain was introducing in the House of Commons the British rearmament budget which called for an increase in the standard income tax rate to 25 per cent. President Roosevelt told Congress that the Treasury's revised estimates for the coming fiscal year indicated a net deficit of $418,000,000,000. Chamberlain told Commons that the increase in the British taxes indicated a prospective surplus of $1,260,000.

Chamberlain reported a deficit of $27,985,000 for the fiscal year 1936-37, and explained: "If it had not been for big expenditures for military services, the nation's balance sheet would have shown a $1,000,000 surplus. This would have come after debt retirement of $65,000,000."

The President reported an estimated deficit of $2,557,000,000 for the fiscal year 1936-37, an increase of $309,000,000 over his January estimate. This did not include $401,000,000 for debt retirement. The omission, he later told reporters, was insignificant, because, when there is a deficit, inclusion of debt retirement merely means putting figures down on one side of the ledger and taking them off on the other side.

Why wasn't the British pay-as-you-go budget system followed in this country? One answer is that both the Hoover and the Roosevelt administrations underestimated the size and force of the depression. The nation accepted the increases in the national debt, and pressure groups demanded more Government funds. Meanwhile the British were tightening their belts and paying on the line. Perhaps the British system eventually will be adapted to this country. After seven years of mounting debt, there is a big job ahead, unless, of course, the leaders prefer inflation, which would be an admission of bankruptcy.

Senate Expected To Repeat Farce on Anti-Lynching Bill

a right to vote, but they do not dare to exercise that right. Even in many of the so-called border states Negroes vote only under white surveillance.

Borah's memory goes back to the "deal" entered into by Lodge and Underwood 15 years ago, when the Dyer anti-lynching bill was before the Senate. In fact, as he explained in the course of the interview, Borah unwittingly had a part in that deal.

"Journeying Georgians."

By way of background, it should be explained that Lodge was, to a considerable degree, dependent upon a bloc of Negro votes in the Bay State. A Negro member of the Republican National Committee in the course of a speech, once referred to Lodge as the "flower of New England manhood," and added, to Lodge's annoyance, that he held his seat in the Senate by reason of the fact that "20,000 journeying Georgians" paused at the polls in Massachusetts long enough to vote for the beau ideal of Back Bay Boston.

Senator Pat Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, used to take a sadistic pleasure in reminding the sensitive Lodge of this speech.

At the time that the Dyer bill was up, in 1922, old Knute Nelson, Minnesota Republican, was chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Nelson came to Borah and asked him to head up a subcommittee to consider the measure. Borah replied that he was unsuited for such a task because he had carefully studied the bill and had come to the conclusion that it was not only unconstitutional but unworkable. Fine, said Nelson; we want somebody to consider the bill who knows something about it and, besides, nobody else thinks very much of it.

Borah finally consented to be chairman of a subcommittee and this group, after considering the bill, turned in an adverse report. After consideration by the full Judiciary Committee, a vote was taken and, as Borah recalls it, there were not more than one or two favorable votes out of 18 cast. The feeling was virtually unanimous that the measure was unconstitutional.

Rescue of Senator Lodge.

But shortly Senator Lodge heard of this action and came to Nelson in a state of agitation, explaining that he had an election on his hands and that the anti-lynching bill must come up on the floor. Thereupon Nelson went back to Borah and asked him and other committee members to change their votes so the measure could come onto the floor with a favorable report. Borah refused but most of the other committee members listened to Nelson's plea on behalf of Lodge and switched over. Although they voted to report the Dyer bill out favorably, they reserved the right to vote against it when it came up on the floor.

And so the measure was called up in the Senate. Lodge sounded off a splendid burst of oratory, ringing all the old changes on the theme of Negro oppression. Promptly Senator Underwood rose from his place to announce that not a wheel would turn, not a minor appropriation bill be considered, so long as the odious anti-lynching measure was before the Senate. Back and forth for two days the oratory was bandied, a fierce sectionalism raging between the Republican and Democratic sides of the chamber.

After two days of this warfare, Lodge capitulated, the Dyer bill was laid aside and the Senate went on its urbane way. Both Lodge and Underwood had known that that would happen from the beginning. But the Negro voters of Massachusetts were duly appeased. They thought that Lodge might have fought a little harder and a little longer but perhaps, since he was an elderly gentleman, he had done the best he could. They voted for him at the election that followed shortly.

Some Sincere Advocates.

There have been sincere advocates of anti-lynching bills who have firmly believed that action by the Federal Government could end this national disgrace. Former Senator Costigan (Dem.), Colorado, was one of these. Two years ago Costigan championed an anti-lynching bill, and no one could for a moment question his motives. In the first place, he had virtually no Negro voters in his state and, in the second place, he was generally recognized to be a man of profound convictions above political trickery. His retirement from the Senate, due to ill health, was a serious loss.

Senator Wagner joined with Costigan at that time in pushing the the Costigan bill to stop lynching. Wagner, too, has very deep convictions on the subject. Southern Senators united in a filibuster which persisted until Costigan, at the insistence of administration leaders, agreed to have his anti-lynching bill laid aside.

It has been said that there is no reason to believe the Senate will take any different course when the present anti-lynching bill comes up. A surprise is possible, however, if only because the politics involved are so obvious and so shopworn that the South may surrender. But, if Southern Democratic Senators in any number vote for an anti-lynching bill, it will be with the confidence that the Supreme Court will, as a matter of course, declare such a measure unconstitutional.

MARYVILLE COLLEGE HORSE SHOW TO OPEN THURSDAY

Eighteen Preparatory Schools Entered; Three Nights; Special Attractions.

The Maryville College Horse Show for preparatory students will open for three nights next Thursday at the Missouri Stable Arena. With 18 schools entered, arrangements have been made on a wider scale than in previous years. There are 190 entrants from 7 to 18 years of age.

The show will be divided into classes for beginners, advanced riders, hunters and jumpers, and a class in which the riders will be judged for attire as well as equestrian skill. Each school will be represented in the latter division.

Special attractions are scheduled for each evening's performance, including an exhibition of hounds of the Bridle and Spur Hunt Club, and a "gay '90s" feature, with old-fashioned costumes and equipment. The Maryville College students will ride in a specialty class of their own, in order not to conflict with the classes open to preparatory schools.

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY
JOHN G. NEIHARDT

THE FIRST CITIZEN OF TILBURY TOWN

THE COLLECTED POEMS OF EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON remained the citizen of one town. In "Talifer" and "Amaranth," in "Merlin" and "Lancelot," as surely as in the early poems, "The Children of the Night," his nativity is shown, and the sources of his inspiration are not hard to find. Born in "Tilbury Town," the New England habitat of Richard Cory, Capt. Craig and the man Flammonde, he resented its hard common sense, its hopes, and the near-sightedness that made it deny the Light. "Dear friends," he told its citizens,

"remember, if you will,
The shame I win for singing is all mine,
The gold I miss for dreaming is all yours."

So, in his life as in his poetry, he deliberately turned his back on the gold and the easy optimisms of a creed, and welcomed the shame of poverty and the "strange gloom" of inquiry. With him, into this weird, questioning world, a Cloud Cuckoo Land of his own speculaive mind, he took the "man from Stratford," and Shakespeare talks of "bugs and emperors go(ing) singularly back to the same dust." To the same town he brought Merlin and Lancelot and Arthur, no longer the headlong knights of Malory, but wise men brooding over the fading of a king's dream. Cavender, Timberlake, Talifer, all of the folk in the later poems, wander in this place where human experience fades away mysteriously under man's scrutiny of its purpose.

The surprising truth about Robinson's poety is that, moving in this dark home of his, looking "soulward" instead of outward, he said about human experience so much that rings true. There was an irony about him, perhaps from Tilbury Town, that hardened the sentiment even of "Tristam," and there was a liking for familiar turns of phrase that brought his poetry to earth. Even Guinevere steps down from Camelot in her lament, as Lancelot is leaving her:

"He must have been a lonely God, who made Man in His image, and then made only a woman."

Although Robinson, toward the end, wrote lines of blank verse that were only noisy groups of polysyllables, he always came back with a clear, wise sententiousness, or a number of lines musical with grave, brooding tones. Like his own Lancelot

"He was not sure of anything but the Light,
The Light he saw not."

The songs he sang were sorrowful, strange as the man himself: but, living in the dark places of his own heart, with Tilbury Town to deepen the gloom as it had deepened Hawthorne's, he has made these places less terrible by the hope that out of the darkness itself the Light comes.

Linklater's Juan Roves Again

JUAN IN CHINA. By Eric Linklater. (Farrar & Rinehart, New York.)

JUAN MOTLEY, the picaresque character who stormed his way through the United States several years ago in that humorous and rather ribald fantasy "Juan in America," has been revived by the able Mr. Linklater. The hero is transplanted from a nudist colony under the warm California sun to Shanghai under Japanese bombardment. Love of Kuo Kuo, beautiful and patriotic young woman of China, causes Juan to forsake a humdrum time among the nudists for a series of astounding adventures in the boudoirs and battlefields of Cathay.

The hero is not long in Shanghai before he finds that Kuo's patriotic love for China dwarfs her passion for him. In fact, her only interest in him is in using him as a tool against the Japanese. About this time the Russian Siamese twins, Varya and Masha, find that their scientist-lover's interest in them is confined to such things as seeing whether a kiss for Varya sends her blood-pressure higher than Masha's. They tell him to go and make love to a guinea pig. Then Juan comes to their rescue in the midst of a Japanese air raid. So it goes. Juan is in demand wherever he appears and is always in brilliant conversational form.

But Juan nearly meets his Waterloo when he becomes involved in a tank deal with the Chinese army that would have done credit to the late Sir Basil Zaharoff. The men with whom he rubs shoulders in this enterprise of cross purposes are the Falstaffian Flanders, a delightful character who likes his liquor better than even his namesake did, Rocco, the Detroit gangster, Harris, a British war correspondent who knows his way around, and the omnipresent Hikohoki. The climax of the tank deal begins when the Chinese, learning that their tanks are plywood covered with tin, force Juan, Flanders, Harris and Rocco each to enter a tank and lead a charge of Japanese machine gunners. Juan's winning of victory despite the riddling of the tanks is about as amazing a feat of warfare as any that ever distinguished a knight of good King Arthur's court.

Linklater ignores the existence of persons who live anything like normal lives, just as he did in "Juan in America," and at times his story seems even too wild for a fantasy; but the conversation is sparkling and the irony is good for chuckle after chuckle. Reckless as Mr. Linklater and his characters are, they manage—sometimes by the skin of their teeth—to avoid overstepping the limits of decency.

A Sane Appraisal Of Poe's Gift

EDGAR ALLAN POE. By Edward Shanks. (The Macmillan Co., New York).

JUDGMENTS on the work of Poe have varied widely. He has been called everything from "America's greatest poet, with tremendous world influence" to "the jingle man." He has been designated the father of the modern detective story. On the other hand, Sherlock Holmes, shortly after his debut, ridiculed Poe's famous detective, Monsieur Dupin. The best of Poe's short stories have been called perfect. They have also been called inhuman tales of horror, good only in inducing the creeps. In all this, American opinion has been, upon the whole, more disparaging than European.

For whatever reason, our generation's oral opinion of Poe has seemed to crystallize sanely into something approaching the definite. Written judgments, however, have been scarce. The present calm appraisal of Poe by the English poet, Edward Shanks, is therefore welcome.

Mr. Shanks believes Poe's poetry inherent, and very largely unexpressed; that Poe heard dark, lovely music not heard by other men; that, despite a fine technique, Poe found it difficult to put into words the visions these strange melodies cast before him; and that he had to depend upon the repetitious burden of his song rather than upon its notes to produce upon his reader the desired effect. It is just this partial and imperfect realization of his work that prevents his being placed among the first rank poets.

In his short prose, and particularly in his detective stories, Poe has achieved a position among the very greatest. He was first among short story writers to realize the full value of aiming at a single effect, and that everything introduced into a tale must have a direct bearing on it. In him there is nothing irrelevant, and there is no waste. His influence upon the short story can hardly be measured. Mr. Shanks deplores the lack of adequate Poe texts, and casts about for a scholarly American to prepare them. Evidently he has not learned of the new definitive edition of Poe now being prepared under the auspices of Columbia University by Dr. Thomas Ollive Mabbott.

The book reveals wide reading, critical acumen of a high order, and an ability to write calmly and entertainingly on a controversial subject. To the reader seeking a compact, modern approach to Poe this volume is recommended.

Remarkable Novel

THE TRAMP AND HIS WOMAN. By Dorothy Charques. (The Macmillan Company, New York.)

HERE is a first novel which surmounts two rather serious handicaps — a tawdry title and a tawdry plot—proving to be an exceptionally well-written and sensitive interpretation of English rural life.

It is the story of three people: of Ellen Bown, the daughter of a small-town tradesman, who, after 14 years of wandering and degradation, is desperately seeking some means of re-establishing herself in respectability and security; of Annie, Ellen's 14-year-old daughter, sickly and old beyond her years, whose passionate attachment for Jim is the dominating force in her life; and of Jim "the Tramp," with whom Ellen and Annie are wandering the English roads, sleeping in Government vagrancy camps or in the open fields, and begging food from farmers' wives.

Ellen's attainment of her ambition, with its resulting tragedy for the other two, makes a sordid and somewhat sensational story, but so logically is it developed and so simply is it told against a background of what certainly seems to be authentic English rural life that it is thoroughly convincing.

It is in the development of her background that Miss Charques has done her best writing. Her pictures of the farm people, with their cheerful solidity and their homely gossip, are drawn with unusual sympathy and perception, and her descriptions of certain farm activities—the "harvest supper," the raspberry picking, the hay-making—are so cleverly done as to make the book well worth reading for these things alone.

'Sure Only of the Light He Saw Not'

Once Shocking, Now Merely Modern

FOUNTAINS OF YOUTH. By Dormer Creston. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

REMINISCENT of the "Journal de Marie Bashkirtseff" published in 1887, and its American edition which created a sensation in 1919, "Fountains of Youth" has appeared to renew memories of the courageous girl who dared to record her unsuppressed thoughts and emotions.

Encouraged in her selfish ambition by a proud mother and an indulgent wealthy aunt, the inherent egotism of Marie Bashkirtseff, evinced at the early age of three, grew until it became an absorbing determination to achieve "success, fame, la gloire." That everything was swept before her consuming desire for acclaim is revealed in the diary begun by Marie when she was but fifteen. "What am I? . . . Nothing. What do I want to be? Everything." The diary, shocking to Marie's censorious generation, is a complete and unabashed revelation of the heart and mind of a girl as modern as today's young womanhood.

At first it was a perfect love she demanded of life. Later she struggled grimly for artistic success as a collateral glory. But recognition came too late, for Marie died a consumptive, at the age of 24, a failure in her own estimation. She could not know that greater glory than she imagined would be hers in the translation of her diary into many languages, in the inscription of her name in the encyclopedias of the great nations, and in the exhibition of her portrait and paintings in the Musee du Luxembourg.

Dormer Creston's selection of significant quotations and revealing episodes gives the biography a charming authenticity. While she modestly keeps herself in the background and gives Marie all the "gloire" she coveted, the author's sympathy with and delight in her character is constantly evidenced. Her extraordinarily skillful depiction of society life between 1870 and 1884 in Paris and Rome adds an informative quality to the entertainment value of the biography.

A Famous Family And Its Source

UNLESS one has an overwhelming interest in the Du Maurier family—that Anglo-French combination of the early eighteenth century that gave Great Britain both distinguished authors and actors—and at least an outline knowledge of their triumphs, this latest tale-bearing by a descendant will not be completely enthralling.

For Miss Du Maurier, great-great-granddaughter of the Mary Anne Clarke to whom she attributes the family's genius, makes personages of individuals who can have little significance to the world at large and goes into family matters that will always be just family matters and not worth remembering.

Mary Anne Clarke was a delightful old reprobate. And reprobate she plainly is, in Miss Du Maurier's portrait. A lovely creature who came from the gutter, she induced the then Duke of York (1809) to grant an annuity for her support and that of children who could not have been his. The annuity, small as it was, allowed a certain freedom for literary and artistic pursuits; and lo, after a marriage of Mary Anne's daughter to a charming Frenchman, the Du Mauriers!

In the first generation was George Louis Palmella Busson du Maurier, known to the family and to this volume as "Kicky," and to the world as the author of "Peter Ibbetson" and "Trilby." Miss Du Maurier, who has published a biography of her father, Sir Gerald Du Maurier, the celebrated actor-manager, goes no farther than that, merely combining the elements that made the Du Mauriers and leaving them to posterity.

She has drawn a clear picture of the times in which they lived; she even has some of that nostalgic beauty which distinguished "Peter Ibbetson," but she has been unable to maintain throughout her work the richness that Mary Anne Clarke gives to its first part.

GARDENING ON NOTHING A YEAR. By Mary S. Griffith. (Hale, Cushman & Flint, Boston.)

GARDEN RUBBISH AND OTHER COUNTRY BUMPS. By W. C. Sellar and R. J. Yeatman. (Farrar & Rinehart, Inc., New York.)

JUDGING by early arrivals in the market, gardeners are assured of another crop of hardy garden books whatever summer may bring to the nasturtium beds and cabbage rows. Already there is such profusion that the gardener stands bewildered before the book counter much as he does when confronted by the scores of plants and shrubs and bulbs from which he must choose in the greenhouse or department store.

"Friday-to-Monday Gardening" is an alluring report of one country week-ender's garden experiences around an old house on the edge of a deserted quarry in Connecticut. The scientific facts are left for others to tell, the author, who is an interior decorator, dealing with the fun and mistakes and surprises that go with hobby gardening. Gardeners who live in cities will find "Your City Garden" most provocative. The many illustrations of transformed city backyards suggest what can be done where tall buildings look down. Veteran city gardeners tell what to plant and how to care for it.

Dr. Wescott, one-time plant pathologist at Cornell, discusses plant insects and diseases month by month, from March through November. Her book is for ordinary gardners and so is generally nontechnical. "The Gardener's Second Year" gives an extensive descriptive list of flowers with pronunciations and name origins, as well as general information.

"Design in Flower Arrangement" concerns the display of flowers in the house, but since countless gardeners raise flowers to brighten interiors, these lectures by the president of the Society of American Etchers will prove of interest to many. The three books by Cecile Hulse Matschat are practical primers by the chief contributor to the definitive "Garden Dictionary," the outstanding horticultural publishing event last year.

The gladiolus cult will find the 1937 publication of the New England Gladiolus Society full of news of research and development in their fast-changing specialty. Miss Mansfield's slim, large-paged book consists of 38 detailed pencil drawings of herbs such as chives, horseradish, thyme and dill, together with brief descriptions. The artist-author is special artist of the Brooklyn Botanic Garden.

"Gardening on Nothing a Year" has its good points, but the title is not one of them. Few gardens can be operated on "nothing a year" and certainly that of the author is not one of them. What she has to say about the high price of irises is proof enough.

"Garden Rubbish and Other Country Bumps" is by the writers of "1066 and All That." It is, as the title and authorship indicate, a burlesque on garden books and gardeners. Although much of what Sellar and Yeatman concoct is sheerest nonsense, your gardener with a sense of humor is in for many a hearty laugh.

Pushkin's Chief Work

EUGENE ONEGIN. By Alexander Pushkin. Translated into English by Dorothea Prall Radin and George C. Patrick. (University of California Press, Berkeley.)

A CENTURY ago this year, Alexander Pushkin, Russia's most celebrated poet, was killed in a duel at the age of 38. The hundredth anniversay of his death is now being commemorated on a national scale by the Soviet Government, which recently published a centennial edition of his complete works.

Pushkin was an aristocrat with pronounced nonconformist tendencies, as a result of which he served a brief term of banishment in Southern Russia. There was a strong African strain in his blood, as his portraits show. His mother's grandfather was one Hannibal, an Abyssinian prince who, having been taken as a hostage to Constantinople, was sold to a Russian envoy and became a favorite of Peter the Great who ennobled him.

"Eugene Onegin," a verse novel in eight cantos, is generally regarded as Pushkin's chief work. Previous to Babette Deutsch's translation, published last year, there had been only one complete English version of the poem, and that has been out of print for half a century.

Just what special merits as a translation the version here noted may have must be left to those familiar with the original to determine; but certainly Dorothea Radin reveals extraordinary skill as a verse-smith. The original stanza of 14 eight-syllable lines has been retained with only slight changes in the rhyme scheme, and an easy flow, which is said to characterize Pushkin's verse, is achieved. As for the poem itself, after making all possible allowance for loss in translation, something essential to greatness seems lacking. Fundamental attitudes and conceptions can scarcely fail to break through the barrier of language, even though beauty of detail and much of the original mood be lost. "Eugene Onegin" seems to be no more than a light, sentimental novel. Eugene, a youth of fashion, loves, and is loved by, Tatyana. His friend, Lensky, is similarly affected. There is a duel, and Lensky is killed. Tatyana marries another. Years after, she and Eugene meet again, but it can never be, for Tatyana is faithful to her wifely duty. That is the story told in 5000 lines.

Byronism, a violent epidemic in Europe during Pushkin's time, is strongly felt throughout, both in mood and manner. Passages of moderate but undeniable beauty in the translation may well be much more impressive in the original.

Humorous, Gentle, Wise

THEY CAME LIKE SWALLOWS. By William Maxwell. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

HERE is a book of common things, yet it is not at all ordinary. On the contrary, it is poetry—not because of beautiful words and striking phrases, but of something inherent in the matter, or, perhaps even more, something inherent in Mr. Maxwell. For the everyday people and events that make up the story, despite their commonness, are every one unique, as, to a "seeing eye," everything in life is unique. And Mr. Maxwell has been able to discern at the core of these age-old happenings their essential freshness. The book is like dawn; it is old; and yet there is dew on the grass, and none of it has ever been until now; the sun and clouds and air were never before like this. "They Came Like Swallows" is illuminated from within.

Elizabeth Morison is central in the story, and about her revolve the lives of the other characters: her husband, James, and their sons, Bunny and Robert. Elizabeth is as natural and strong and full of the grace of living as a great tree. Her quiet strength draws the other, lesser persons of the book into a pattern about her, and it is that pattern which is the subject of the book. Mr. Maxwell cares less for Elizabeth herself than he does for the various lines of force that radiate from her.

Perhaps the one word which best describes this story is "natural." Nothing of it is forced; nothing is unreal. The characters move easily, and the sentences flow with the cadence of ordinary speech. Like Elizabeth Morison, "They Came Like Swallows" is balanced. And, also like her, it is calm, humorous, gentle and wise. Few novels can boast virtues like these; and few can combine, as this one does, perfect simplicity with perfect beauty.

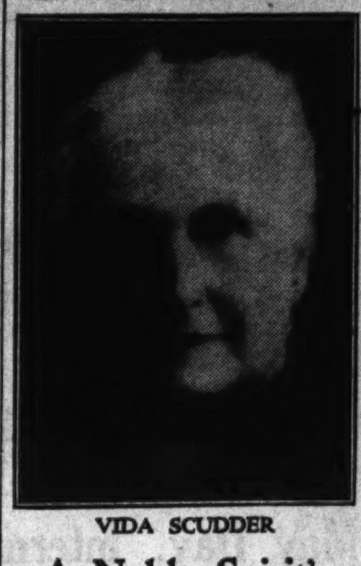
One of the Great Women of Our Day



VIDA SCUDDER

A Noble Spirit's Search for Peace

ON JOURNEY. By Vida Scudder. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

MISS SCUDDER was born to the intellectual and moral heritage of Boston's Back Bay. Travel in Europe, study at Smith College and later at Oxford, then a professorship at Wellesley, all these activities filled the young woman's life but left her spiritually unsatisfied. Her quest for reality led her to devote her spare time to pioneer welfare work at the famous Denison House in Tyler Street. This experience showing her the necessity of aiding the underprivileged, she reached the conclusion that a reorganization of society in general was necessary, and hence she became an ardent Socialist. The fact that her political convictions were strengthened by a sincere and mystical belief in the teachings of Christ enabled her to meet with serenity the opposition and criticism which she naturally encountered.

It is significant that, though Miss Scudder has led a very active life and has known many people of note, the chief interest of her autobiography lies, not in reminiscences of events, but in the story of her spiritual development. Unsatisfied with the ordinary round of Boston society, this woman's unusual mind urged her to seek the foundations of reality. Her beloved St. Francis became her guide, but she ruefully admits that she found it impractical to follow literally in his footsteps. Actually she suffered no greater persecution than having certain over-conventional snobs refuse to meet her at dinner!

Now in old age Miss Scudder has found, in a "self-realization which is God realization," the peace and reality which she so long sought. Years have taught her a dispassionate outlook upon life. Nor is this a negation of her early beliefs, for she states that in her thoughts she is really more of a radical than ever.

Boyhood in Oneida Community

MY FATHER'S HOUSE. By Pierrepont Noyes. (Farrar & Rinehart, New York.)

IT was a wise child that knew its own father in the Oneida Community, and a lucky child that could claim such a father as John Humphrey Noyes. To Pierrepont Noyes came this honor which colored and determined his childhood in the picturesque society established by his father in 1849 at Oneida, N. Y.

These religious communists followed the "Christian ideal" so far as to abandon marriage which they regarded as incentive to self-seeking, and with their theory of "stirpiculture" experimented with eugenics on a scale never before attempted in the world. But the perfection-seeking communists could not remain forever at peace with the orthodox clergy or with themselves. Pressure from without and internal dissension became so strong that, after 30 years of "success," a gradual dissolution set in. Stirpiculture was discarded for legal matrimony, members divided their communal assets into shares of stock and drifted away to make their fortunes in the outside world.

Pierrepont Noyes, one of 30 Noyes offspring, was born 20 years after the founding of the community. His book is the story of a child raised in the South Wing under the all-seeing eye of Papa Kelly, for children lived apart from their parents who, in turn, lived apart from each other.

Mr. Noyes analyzes his childhood with scrupulous accuracy, searching zealously through his memory for significant reactions and humorous anecdotes. At times the tale becomes monotonous, for the narrative depends almost entirely upon the subject matter for vitality. Yet the history of this, one of the most intelligent of the many religious fanaticisms that appeared in the nineteenth century, compels attention, and the child's point of view casts a new light on the whole affair.

THE TRAIL OF GOLD. By Dane Coolidge. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

WITH a gold rush in Nevada as background, the author describes a young Westerner's fight for land, for gold and for the love of an Indian girl.

DRAMA OF BIOGRAPHY SINCE THE RENAISSANCE

ONE MIGHTY TORRENT: The Drama of Biography. By Edgar Johnson. (Stackpole Sons, New York.)

THE arresting title of this book comes from Shelley's lines about "a great stream of people . . . hurrying to and fro, . . . old age and youth, manhood and infancy, mixed in one mighty torrent." So the writer sees history, a mighty torrent of human lives, tossed by the workings of social and political change. History cannot, to be sure, be written as a sequence of case studies, but in his view it "sorely needs the humanizing voice of biography to remind us of the flesh and blood behind its abstractions."

So he mapped a huge task: a study of biographical writing, from both the factual and the critical standpoint, in its relation to formal history. To insure any thoroughness of treatment without unwieldy bulk, a limit had to be set, so he determined to confine his survey to English biography. But hard and fast rules could not apply when the work had begun, and some exceptions, such as Mme. de Sevigne, Henry Adams and Lincoln Steffens, had to be admitted.

True scholarship, keen critical sense and literary skill have gone into the tracing of the mighty torrent from its first rivulet, in the dawn of the Renaissance, through its placid Victorian meanderings, into the present whirlpool of biographical mass production. Enough is told about each work considered to create a portrait in miniature, so that the comments may have a solid foundation. The book is worthwhile for these sketches alone. It is more than a digest of biographies, however; many of its chapters can stand alone as sound essays on a particular phase of art.

Mr. Johnson, a teacher of lite ture in the College of the City New York, is devoted to no school. The first requisite of ography is obviously "truth to character of the human life it trays." Truth-tellers and cen he shows, are found among ancient and modern writers. Victorian type of "Life and Let was a funeral oration, which fo the facts into a rigid mold. modern "debunkers" are equally worthy. Those who "specializ sneering or denigration are clea as dishonest as those who conc blameworthy truths."

Perhaps the greatest praise is served for Lytton Strachey. He hailed as a healthy influence on ography, with his devotion to cl ity and balance and careful p traiture. But is his art someth new under the sun? For answ the writer cites George Cavendi sixteenth century biographer Cardinal Wolsey, who, using al gether different literary tools, p duced a realistic portrait that me fully the exacting modern stan ards.

The comparative method is u throughout the human torren long and uneven course, on who sands Boswell and Pepys, Lo Chesterfield and D. H. Lawrenc Macaulay, Lockhart and many m have left their imprints. The mil and centuries traversed by all th characters are a rich common he tage. The reaches ahead, the writ concludes, will have their biogr phers who still seek for truth, b with new scientific means of lear ing about what influences hum behavior.

"Half Horse, Half Alligator"

THE THREE-HEADED ANGEL. By Roark Bradford. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

PHINIZY County, Tenn., was never a place for milksops. Even its aristocrats are a hard-working, hard-riding and straight-shooting lot, true Tennesseans of the "half hoss and half alligator" breed.

The aristocrats of Phinizy County all pursue the Three-Headed Angel: "First a man is required to gather an excess of worldly goods. Next, he must devote the leisure that comes with his riches to acquiring a polish of gentility. And finally, he must bring his riches and his gentility to some urban center where they can be displayed."

The most resolute and ambitious character in this Phinizy County chronicle is Joseph Goodner, who was a brush-hiding scalawag during the Civil War, realistically refusing to participate in a conflict of which neither his heart nor his reason approved. After the war he moves to Phinizy County to escape the odium of his patriotic neighbors, having prudently cached some gold pieces which purchase a great deal in the stricken post-bellum South. His brother, Wash, is an inveterate liar and a continual thorn in proud Joseph's side. Wash has caught, on the rebound, the frustrated daughter of a down-at-the-heels plantation owner. Her unnatural love for a cousin slain in war eventually leads to her suicide. Joseph's ardent pursuit of the Three-Headed Angel is embarrassed by the infiltration of white trash into his family and he is harassed by the fear that his war record will be discovered. Nevertheless he rises to dizzying heights in the community, and there ensues a sometimes confusing multiplicity of marryings, fights, involved relationships, and frequently extraneous excursions into whimsicality.

Mr. Bradford's chronicle of John Henry, Herculean roustabout of Negro legend, established the author as one possessing more than a casual knowledge of the rhythms and flavors of Negro speech. In the present work it is the robust talk of the poor whites that lends a convincing authenticity, whereas the conversation of characters higher in the social scale often falls into stereotypes and platitudes. Nevertheless, a persuasive grace pervades the tale, and some measure of human dignity is bestowed upon even the most degraded characters.

Camera Concoction

IN PICTURES. A Hollywood Satire. Pictures by Will Connell. Story by Nunnally Johnson, Patterson McNutt, Gene Fowler and Grover Jones. (T. J. Maloney, Inc., New York.)

SEVERAL of the boys—famous ones—got together in a back room in Hollywood and set out to draft a screen play. The procedure was a little crazy, the result a little crazy, but the story wasn't bad at that. It would hold up, would probably wow them from New York's Radio City Music Hall to the cinema centers of the backwoods.

A stenographer took down the proceedings, and last fall the Saturday Evening Post printed them. Now we have the Hollywood story conference, that example of lunacy on the loose, in book form, illustrated with 48 photographically lovely, always incisive and sometimes bawdy, illustrations by Will Connell, the West Coast's famous cameraman. The edition is one of those luxury books in big type and clean printing that would attract anyone's attention.

Assorted Thrills For Murder Fans

DEAD RECKONING. By Bruce Hamilton. (Simon & Schuster, New York.)

THE LAUGHING BUDDHA. By Carl Glick. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., New York.)

THE FALCON CUTS IN. By Drexel Drake. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

THE MOON SAW MURDER. By G Oliver. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

THE CANDLE. By Linton C. Hopkins. (L Furman, Inc., New York.)

THE DEFRAUDED YEGGMAN. By Harry Stephen Keeler. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

THE detective novels this week represent a great variety of approaches. "Dead Reckoning" resembles Hull's "Murder of My Aunt" and Phillpott's "Anniversary Murder," in that the reader sees the events through the murderer's eyes. It is an excellent character study of an egocentric person whose selfishness drives him to wife-murder.

"The Laughing Buddha" is a lively tale about the strange disappearance of oddly assorted persons, all of whom leave behind them the image of a laughing Buddha. The amateur detectives are an editor of a news weekly and his sports writer. In addition to the exciting events portrayed, the author gives a witty account of metropolitan life. Solid entertainment guaranteed.

The Falcon returns to New York in "The Falcon Cuts In," saves a burlesque strip-tease queen from death and finds a Siberian death mask. This is one of the best of the series, since the Falcon's accomplishments are made more plausible than usual, and the author has given some attention to characterization. However, the book is marred, as are all of the others, by spots of over-writing.

"The Moon Saw Murder" is a conventional detective novel with the scene laid in a summer resort hotel. Beautiful but despicable Vashti Parr is discovered strangled and with a broken neck on the terrace below her room. Practically everyone in the hotel has a good reason for wanting her put away. Easy to solve.

"The Candle" is not quite as "different" as the blurb makes out. The only difference is that the high spots are run through in the first two chapters, and as a result the rest of the book seems anti-climactic. However, it is a fairly entertaining tale of an invention so pleasant in its implications that one scarcely minds its improbability.

"The Defrauded Yeggman" might justly be entitled "The Defrauded Reader." It is most unusual in its structure and demands a sequel. Three bums find themselves outside a small town in Texas which is hourly expecting an attack by air from a mad Mexican bandit. The book is a challenge to those who like to spend their time trying to trip the author up. It contains more careful detail than do most books of this nature.

ONDS PICK UP SOME F EARLY-WEEK LOSSES

mprovement Is Evident in Government and Other High Grade Issues.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Some improvement was shown in several sections of the bond market today, although it was clear sentiment continued to grope for a direction factor.

U. S. Governments and high grade corporate issues were the principal beneficiaries of a selective light demand, while railroad bonds gained momentum on the upside. Other portions of the list held even or fluctuated narrowly.

Turnover was light, even for a Saturday, although it exceeded by a small amount the previous like session. Bonds traded totaled $5,483,000, face amount, compared with $5,330,000 a week ago.

The Federal list's upturn marked a reversal of trend over the past several days. While gains were moderate, they enabled a number of liens to reduce losses on the week to less than a point. Treasury 2¾s of 1954, the 2¾s of 1959, Federal Farm Mortgage 3¼s of 1964 and Home Owners s of 1952 accomplished this feat after being off a point or more on the period at the close Friday. Gains on the day ranged to 11-32nds of a point while losses on the week went to 26-32nds.

Accumulation of offerings in the railroad quarter may have been influenced by the threat of a strike by clerks, freight handlers and station employes in the New York area, although some observers felt it was too local to weight importantly. Others, however, said such a strike if called would command national interest because of its spreading possibilities.

The Associated Press average for 20 carrier loans declined .3 of a point to 93.3. Great Western 4s gave upl ½ at 45¼, Canadian Pacific 4s lost 1 to 94½, Baltimore & Ohio 4½s fell ⅝ to 75¾ and St. Paul 5s of 1975 lost ⅝ to 30⅝. New York Central convertible 6s capped a week of reverses with a 2-point drop to 120¼.

The rest of the market stood even to better with prime corporate loans finishing on higher ground. The Associated Press average for 10 low yield issues improved .1 of a point to 109.2.

Foreigns showed little in the way of activity or trend.

Stocks, U. S. Government Bonds and Commodities Falter Anew in Week's Trading After Cautious Beginning

Inflation Possibility Discussions and Fear of Advancing Retail Prices Meeting Consumer Resistance Cited in Market.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Stocks took another nose-dive in today's market, many leaders dropping fractions to 3 or more points to new year's lows in the most active Saturday dealings in six weeks.

Analysts, trying to put a finger on the cause of the third successive setback, found nothing outstanding in the immediate news.

But a number of factors were cited which taken together, it was said, may have gone a long way toward shaking confidence of recovery contingents.

Among these were: revival of discussion in Wall Street over the Government's gold-buying policy and the possibility, despite official denials any change was contemplated in the present price of the yellow metal, that some step may be taken to stem the heavy flow from abroad; growing doubts industry will be able to hike prices of goods sufficiently to offset mounting payrolls and operating costs; possibility of at least a recession in business over the next few months, and realization labor controversies are still a matter of serious consideration for corporations. Larger selling from abroad was reported.

Talk of possibility of consumer resistance to advancing retail prices also was cited.

Closely studied in Wall Street circles was the President's budget message. The opinion expressed by one quarter was that it provided a good working basis for the gradual realignment of income and outgo. However, many commentators said traders would likely await detailed working out of the problem before regarding it as an active market influence.

Chart students were impressed with the way the list steadied at the close on Friday after the abrupt downward jolt. It meant, they said, that much money was probably waiting and ready to slide quickly into the market in search of employment.

Bond Market Drifts Lower.

The bond market drifted lower. Under pressure were U. S. Treasury obligations and, in the corporate sector, industrials and rails.

Investment circles said considerable confusion still prevailed over the credit outlook and the revival of officially denied rumors there might be a lowering of the U. S. gold-buying price.

In Government bond quarters, it was suggested that when banks complete their reserve requirement adjustments many institutions might find themselves with more funds than estimated earlier. A good part of this capital, it was believed, would possibly find its way into long-term Federal issues.

Sales during the week amounted to 6,381,379 shares, compared with 6,635,860 a week ago and 8,996,180 a year ago. Total sales from Jan. 1 were 184,435,235 shares, compared with 210,088,553 a year ago and 70,338,413 two years ago.

Ticker Out at Week-End.

The list displayed some steadying tendencies at the start of Saturday's trade. For half an hour declines were moderate. Then a flood of offerings was unloosed on trading forces and virtually all sections toppled. The downward rush put the ticker tape behind for a few minutes.

The flurry was comparatively brief and mild support soon put in appearance. Later activity was slow, but extreme losses were reduced in numerous instances before the close.

There were a number of resistant spots in evidence during the erratic session. Steels and motors bucked the trend for only small declines as production in both these fields was reported holding at post-depression peaks. Some rails retreated only a trifle. Aiding the transportation department were expanding freight loadings and the possibility of still heavier shipments this fall when larger crops start to move.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .6 of a point at 69, only .3 of a point above the 1937 bottom. On the week the average was down a full point. Transfers amounted to 807,640 shares compared with 444,100 last Saturday.

The wide distribution of declines was shown by the fact that of 745 issues traded 538 were lower, 70 higher and 137 unchanged.

Some of the Losers.

The share division received no aid from bonds or commodities, the majority finishing highly mixed. Wheat at Chicago was off ¼ to up ⅜ and corn was ⅛ up to down 1⅝. Cotton regained 5 to 30 cents a bale. U. S. Government securities improved after an early dip.

Conscipuous share losers included American Telephone at 166, Western Union 64, Westinghouse 137½, American Smelting 86½, Schenley 43¾, Sears Roebuck 85½, Montgomery Ward 55¼, Loew's 79½, du Pont 155½, Continental Can 55, American Can 99, U. COMMODITY PRICES AGAIN GIVE GROUND

Metals Lead Movement Despite Substantial Rally in Grain Market.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24. — Commodity prices continued to give ground last week under leadership of the metals, despite a substantial rally in the grain markets.

Copper dropped a cent a pound to 14½, compared with its recent high of 17 cents, and set the pace for other non-ferrous metals.

Commodity men said the industry has been fishing for a price level that will bring buying into the market, holding little the red metal changed hands on the way down. Most important consumers are reported to be well supplied for the present, while some buyers are known to have contracted for more than was actually needed for months to come during the late boom.

Drop in Index Figure.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 important wholesale staples dropped to 93.87 per cent of the 1926 average from 94.26 a week ago, and compared with 74.33 in the same period last year.

Agricultural commodities rallied briskly immediately following limit breaks in grains at Winnipeg, a flood of buying orders turning the tide. Thus although a heavy winter crop harvest is in the offing, spot supplies were sufficiently low to bolster the market.

Corn led the upturn in this group, with wheat chalking up a slight advance; rye and cotton also gaining. Livestock was mixed; hogs and cattle eased fractionally, while lambs improved.

Industrial raw materials were weak. Steel scrap reflected the appearance of increasing supplies, brought out by unusually high prices. Tin, zinc, turpentine and burlap also slipped. Rubber and bituminous coal edged ahead.

Textile quotations fell away for the third week; wool, cotton cloth and silk concurring. Analysts hold production recently has far outstripped consumption, that stocks have been piling up.

What Index Shows.

Foods slumped to new low ground for the years as eggs, sugar, coffee and butter reacted. The Department of Agriculture stated part of the weakness was seasonal; in butter and eggs, for example. Cocoa recovered, however, and lard pushed ahead as spring shipments of hogs loomed smaller than last year.

The index, with its components, based on 1926 as 100, compared as follows:

HUTTIG IS LEADER OF TRADING AND UPTURN

General Market Improvement Shown on the St. Louis Stock Exchange Last Week.

Securities on the St. Louis Stock Exchange showed improvement last week on a smaller turnover. Huttig led, both in volume of business and upward range, gaining 2 points on turnover of 1444 shares. Falstaff had very narrow range on sales of 1185 shares.

Scullin Steel preference had upward range of over 2 points and Ely & Walker and Brown Shoe a point each. The steel stock, however, lost most of its gain in the last session.

Fractional improvement was shown by Missouri Portland, Wagner Electric and several others.

Fractional declines were shown in several issues.

FOREIGN MARKETS AT A GLANCE

By the Associated Press.

LIVERPOOL, April 24.—Wheat futures closed quiet today, up 1d to 1½d. The market's firmness followed sharp advances at Buenos Aires yesterday, stronger Argentine and Canadian C. I. F. offerings, continental buying of nearby positions.

Cotton closed quiet and steady, 3 to 4 points higher. Most traders were awaiting fresh incentives and the market was sensitive to small orders. Selling in sympathy with a reaction in Egyptian cotton was followed by a recovery on scattered buying. Offerings were light. A good business was done in Brazilian cotton.

London and Paris—Closed on Saturday.

$40,127,000 MORE GOLD ON WAY HERE

Sterling Rises to New Top for Year — Franc at New Devaluation Period Low.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Dominating trading in foreign currencies during the week were contrary trends in the British pound and the French franc.

While the pound sold up to the highest this year, the franc tumbled to a new low since devaluation of the gold bloc currencies last September.

Sterling was up more than 2 cents on the week at one time. Scandinavian and other leading European currencies, aside from the franc, followed it.

Traders were at loss for clear-cut explanation of the conflicting movements in the franc and the pound.

However, the continued big shift of gold to the United States, with Soviet Russia selling more metal in the open market at London, and rising tourist expenditures for travel to Europe were held chiefly accountable for the lift in sterling and its attendant currencies.

It was suggested in some quarters the French monetary control may have been disposed to let the franc fall a little further as a bid for tourists.

The Japanese yen joined European moneys on the move against the dollar. It was aided by reports Japan would send more gold to this country.

Gold engaged for shipment to New York during the week totald $40,127,000, mostly taken in England, compared with $43,-580,000 the preceding week.

Adjustments for the week-end layoff brought slightly higher quotations for most foreign currencies in terms of the dollar today.

The British pound closed 1-16 of a cent higher, French francs improved .00⅛ of a cent and Holland guilders held stationary at 54.76 cents. The Swiss franc was sensitive to light offerings and yielded .01 of a cent at 22.87½ cents.

At London the dollar was in fair demand and closed at 4.93 to the pound against overnight New York rate of 4.93⅛. The markets were closed in Paris in observance of the summer schedule.

The New York Federal Reserve Bank reported another large bloc of gold engaged abroad for shipment to the United States. Eleven million, one hundred eighty-five thousand dollars of the yellow metal was earmarked at London, $2,546,000 in Canada and $260,000 in India.

The market opened 1 to 4 points higher in sympathy with the action of Liverpool and on trade and foreign buying. During the first half hour prices reacted under the May liquidation partly for New Orleans account. The offerings were not active however, and the market again responded to covering and trade buying to send all positions to new highs for the day in the late trading.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY 23 PER CENT OVER '36

Sharp Upswing in Heavy Industry Bolsters Rate to Near 1937 High.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Charging ahead to within a fraction of the year's high, industrial activity was bolstered by a sharp upswing in heavy industry.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index jumped to 105.8 per cent of the 1929-30 average from 104.9 last week and 85.8 a year ago. The current pace was 23 per cent above the 1936 rate.

Automobile production, freight carloading and steel mill activity were at a faster clip, the latter chalking up a new recovery peak. Buoyant heavy goods lines more than offset a dip in electric power and cotton manufacturing, both consumption goods.

The boost in steel operations meant actual output was the largest ever recorded, due to the increase in capacity during the past seven years.

Faster moving assembly lines in the auto business stemmed mainly from the desire of producers to build up inventories depleted by strike shutdowns.

Freight shipments reflected an earlier movement of ore through the Great Lakes due to a mild spring.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted components based on 1929-30 as 100 and using the latest available statistics, compared as follows:

	Latest Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Composite index —	105.8	104.9	85.8
Auto production —	99.5	98.2	90.7
Steel mill act. (H.)	122.5	121.2	94.5
Cotton mfg. act —	131.3	131.9	97.4
Elec. pwr. prod. (L.)	116.3	117.6	104.9
Residential bldg. —	69.5	69.5	42.1
Total carloadings —	81.2	78.5	69.4

NON-FERROUS METALS FOLLOW LONDON TREND

Domestic Copper Declines 1 Cent—Zinc Also Is Lower.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Non-ferrous metals were unusually sensitive to the rapid and erratic fluctuations at London the past week. Tin see-sawed over wide limits, finishing with a net decline of 1¼ cents a pound. Meanwhile, consumer buying abated pending a more stabilized price situation.

Domestic copper declined 1 cent a pound, dropping to 14½ cents a pound, delivered valley. Electrolytic for export broke 90 points, then rallied about 55 points from the lows. Speculative hysteria seemed to have ebbed somewhat and the feeling prevailed the market position now is better than it has been for some weeks.

Zinc declined ¼ cent a pound, but was steadier in tone as the week closed. Consumers that have been holding off reentered the market for supplies on a moderate scale, and with most smelters well booked ahead.

Lead was unchanged with favorable March statistics acting as a bolster. Shipments last month totaled 63,425 tons, an increase of 13,050 tons over February and the largest since 1930. Production increased 6191 tons to 43,642 tons. Refined stocks in hands of domestic producers totaled 137,028 tons, a drop of 19,804 tons and the lowest for any period since November, 1931.

Antimony held unchanged in a dull market.

New business in steel has shown some reduction from the record-breaking pace of the first quarter, but the shrinkage is not particularly large, and sales are not far below current shipments.

ALUMINUM STOCK DROPS ANOTHER 10 POINTS ON CURB

NEW YORK, April 24.—A 10-point drop in Aluminum Co. of America pointed the way for a generally declining curb market today. All divisions participated in the drop.

The break in Aluminum followed another bad spill on Friday when the Government announced an anti-trust suit had been filed against the company. It closed today at 140.

Other shares on the losing side for minor fractions to a point or more included American Cyanamid "B" at 29; American Gas 36; Creole Petroleum at 33½; Eagle Picher Lead 20½; Electric Bond & Share 20¼; Gulf Oil 56½, and Pan American Ariways 63¼.

Sales of 176,000 shares compared with 159,000 last Saturday.

WHEAT MARKET IS ERRATIC WITH CLOSING MIXED

Unsettlement Attributed Largely to Reports of Beneficial Rains in Many Sections.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 24.—Wheat prices fluctuated erratically within a maximum range of 1⅛ cents today.

The market's unsettlement was attributed largely to reports of beneficial rains in many sections of the grain belt, but enough buying found its way into the pit to keep prices fractionally higher most of the session.

Some of this buying, which represented short covering afrer yesterday's late rally, was associated with more than a cent upturn at Liverpool and further selling of Canadian wheat for export largely to Germany.

Wheat closed ¼ lower to ⅜ higher, compared with Friday's finish, May $1.30⅛@⅝, July $1.18¼@⅜, Sept., $1.15¾@⅞, and corn was ⅛ up to 1⅝ off, May, new, $1.25¾@1.26; July, new, $1.15⅞; Sept., $1.08½@⅝. Oats were ⅛ off to ¼ up, May 48⅞@49c; rye ¼ off to ⅛ up, May $1.10¼, and provisions 8 cents lower to 3 higher.

Professionals supported wheat at times, but houses with Eastern connections were on both sides of the market. Export sales of Canadian wheat were estimated at about 500,000 bushels, including sales to Germany. Further sales of red garlicky wheat for August shipment from Baltimore were reported. Some of the carlot receipts here were believed to be arrivals of grain recently reported moving this direction from Kansas City.

Traders generally believe crop conditions are better. Further rains were received over the Northwest and in sections of the winter wheat belt. Official forecast of possible frost in Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri attracted little attention. Crop authorities said it would take heavy frosts to damage wheat at this stage.

Professional dealers were credited with persistent liquidation of May corn contracts, which knocked the price down almost 2 cents a bushel at one stage. More deferred corn futures, however, were not so weak. Incoming Argentine corn, while little can be delivered on contracts, nevertheless is believed to be depressing corn futures to the extent that demands from cash interests is satisfied. Reports were that arrangements have been completed to move 750,000 bushels of Argentine corn from Montreal to Chicago during May.

Oats and rye paralleled the action of wheat.

Provisions eased slightly in sympathy with Friday's hog market decline.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 52,084,000 bushels, and corn 2,511,-000. Open interest in wheat was 102,-298,000 bushels, and corn 32,550,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, April 24.—Wheat and oats sold lower on the local board at week-end session. July wheat closed ¼c lower and September oats ⅛c off.

Winnipeg wheat opened unchanged to ¼c off. The close was ¼c higher to ⅛c lower.

Liverpool wheat closed 1@1¼d higher after opening 1¼@2d up.

Argentine wheat opened ⅛@⅜c up and corn at unchanged price. Wheat closed ⅝@1c lower and corn ⅛@⅜c lower.

Local wheat receipts which were 34,500 bushels, compared with 18,000 a week ago and 34,500 a year ago included 13 cars local and 10 through. Corn receipts, which were 51,000 bushels, compared with 38,500 a week ago and 92,000 a year ago, included 31 cars local and 3 through. Oats receipts which were 12,000 bushels, compared with 22,000 a week ago and 34,000 a year ago, included 6 cars local. Hay receipts were 6 cars local and 4-through.

Era of Rackets Followed War, Asserts 'Roosevelt to Roosevelt,' Frank History From 1900 to Date

Prof. D. L. Dumond of Michigan U., Presents Incisive Views on Harding, Hoover, Prohibition and New Deal.

By IRVING DILLIARD
of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

"The decade following the World War was an era of rackets. Man shrank from denouncing another man's racket for fear of having his own exposed. Children were brought up to feel that anything one did was all right provided one could get away with it. They did not need to be told. It was in the very air they breathed. Scarcely a ripple of excitement followed the exposure of corruption in high governmental circles. Few realized then the extent to which this philosophy of life was undermining the economic structure of the nation, for it was a matter of economics as much as a matter of morality and ethics. The idea that a nation of people could become wealthy by gambling was an economic fallacy of the first order; yet everyone was trying to get something for nothing."

The rantings of a wild-eyed radical orator on Boston Common? If not, then the sharp judgment of some none-too-sympathetic British critic of American institutions and life? The answer in each case is "no." These words appear about midway through a new book on American history since 1900 by a professor at the University of Michigan, who presents it "for the use of college students."

"Roosevelt to Roosevelt."

Casual inspection of the book which is called "Roosevelt to Roosevelt" (Henry Holt & Co.), makes it plain that the intention of the author, Dwight Lowell Dumond, is to give university students a better understanding of present day problems through a realistic statement of what has gone on in the United States since the Spanish-American War.

His portrait of the national life is not the familiar combination of glorification of American institutions and dry mechanical details to which successive generations of students have been exposed in history and civics classes. Prof. Dumond's canvas shows the warts on Uncle Sam's face as well as his noble brow.

The passage quoted above is typical of the directness and sharpness of the author's presentation of facts and opinion. In some 20 chapters with such suggestive headings as "What Price Victory?" "The Age of the Golden Calf," "The Last Stand of Rugged Individualism," "Political Decadence," and "Bourbons to Crackpots," he marshals the diverse elements of the national character during the third of a century span from the first Roosevelt to the second. Bryan and La Follette, Gould and Morgan, Gompers and Green and Lewis, Dr. Townsend and Dr. Wirt, the Klan and the Liberty League, the D. A. R. and the Socialists, the Supreme Court and the Communists, the Railroad Trust and the Brain Trust, and hundreds of other individuals, groups and institutions pass under the historian's bright light. Some are in the public glare only momentarily; others come back again and again.

Corruption Under Harding.

Earlier writers of school histories may have blinked the scandals of the Grant era. Prof. Dumond wants the students, who study his book, to know just what government was like under Warren G. Harding.

"The short period of Harding's administration turned out a sordid record of corruption and inefficiency. His vision embraced his party, not the nation, and he served his party, not the people. He was a local politician and of all the people he gathered together in public office, few could be classed as capable public servants. The complete corruption of the Attorney-General's department necessitated the prosecution of the investigations of the other departments by outside legal talent.

"The Tariff Commission ceased to function except to justify increased rates on the products of special industries. The growth of monopolies was smiled upon. Income and corporation taxes were reduced again and again under the prodding of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. All these facts, and more, reveal the complete reversal of those policies which men in public life sponsored and fought for in the first two decades of the century. They leave no escape from the conclusion that the prevailing philosophy of government in this period had no precedents in the 150 years of national development."

Hoover's Fundamental Weakness.

What the author has to say about Hoover is equally incisive. Making the point first that Hoover and Curtis "simply rode into office in the most powerful whispering campaign ever set in motion," he goes on to say that the fundamental weakness of Hoover was "an inability to see the possibility of a better way of life than that which permitted any man to accumulate great wealth. . . .

"It is doubtful if Hoover had any appreciation of the extent of suffering in the land or of its import. His recovery program consisted of passing out millions to save from bankruptcy corporations which had turned out millions of men to starve until they could be re-employed at a profit."

The bonus army ouster during the Hoover administration, Prof. Dumond describes as "one of the worst exhibitions of official blundering and cruel oppression the country had ever witnessed."

The author does not indicate his political affiliation, if any. His criticism of party policies is dispassionate but severe. He says for example that "for 75 years, the Republican party had neglected the best interests of agriculture and labor, never consulting them and making concession grudgingly when forced to do so." Writing of the Harding-Coolidge-Hoover period he declares: "Of the four Attorneys-General—Harry M. Daughtery, Harlan F. Stone, John G. Sargent and William D. Mitchell—only Stone was distinguished enough to justify the conclusions that he measured up to the important functions of his office."

Blind Party Allegiance.

Politically the worst heritage of the Civil War still weighing down on the country at the century's turn was the "blind party allegiance which lived on in families for generations," as the Michigan historian puts it. If these words did not indicate the break which Prof. Dumond has made with the text book writers which have gone before him, the cleavage would be established beyond any question by this passage:

"The power of accumulated wealth increased until it could influence legislatures; the United States Senate was spoken of as a millionaires' club; and extra-legal or liaison officials known as 'bosses' came into being. The free lance newspaper editor who knew no superior all but disappeared, abandoning public opinion to the mercies of unintelligent of ofttimes, intellectually dishonest editorial hack writers. Official corruption, spreading through all branches of the public service, was condoned by many, regarded with helpless alarm by others, and utterly disregarded by the public at large."

Disrespect for law and order since 1900 was "cumulative and deep rooted in the lives of the people," the author says. Suggesting typical instances, he writes:

"Millions of traffic tickets were torn up with a shrug of the shoulders because the offender knew someone who could 'fix' the matter with the enforcement officers, until the whole business became a national disgrace and the annual toll of traffic deaths alone reached more than 36,000. Hundreds of helpless men and women were hunted like beasts, torn from the custody of officers and courts, tortured and burned by howling mobs of men, women and children with a semblance of trial or effort to determine guilt, not only because of the lack of laws, but because of a complete break-down in their proper administration."

Prohibition "Dismal Failure."

Students who study this book will know as fully as can be known from a text just how bad prohibition was. Describing it as "the most dismal failure in the history of the republic," Prof. Dumond says that those who were charged with administering prohibition, both high and low, "not only considered themselves and their friends above the law but did not hesitate in the enforcement of a single law, to violate others equally sacred."

The Michigan historian does not avoid the changes that have come with respect to the family and the church. "Children," he writes, "ceased to be cherished as an economic asset whose labor supplemented the family income. The size of the family came to be regulated to conform with the ability of the parents to properly rear and educate them, rather than by accident and God's providence. . . .

"The clergy, along with teachers, lost much of their commanding position as authorities on all matters, temporal as well as spiritual. It is pretty generally agreed that an increasing number render only lip service to their professed faith and regard the obligation of membership lightly."

"War to End Wars."

Prof. Dumond's chronicle of our part in "war to end wars is equally realistic." He writes quite bluntly: "The public had no more choice about buying Liberty bonds than the soldiers had about buying Government insurance. The Government did not directly coerce the purchase of its securities, but it worked the people into such a frenzy of patriotic hysteria that few dared risk the disfavor of their neighbors by not purchasing irrespective of their ability to do so."

George Creel's propaganda machine gets the same kind of treatment, while the author says that the Espionage Act of 1918 swept away at one stroke "the most cherished principles of the American people: freedom of spech and of the press under all circumstances."

Prof. Dumond makes the most of his opportunities to pin fallacies to the wall. Pointing out that it was customary "when the American system was regarded as 100 per cent perfect" to dismiss technological unemployment with "the traditional fiction that other enterprises made possible by invention took up the displaced workmen, he says "a more ridiculous idea was never foisted upon an intelligent people."

"How many blacksmiths became garage mechanics when automobiles replaced horses?" he asks. "How many piano tuners went into the radio business? How many employes of the shoe factories of New England moved to St. Louis? The answer in any case is: precious few."

Concerning the New Deal.

The New Deal comes under review in the latter part of the book. The National Recovery Act is described as perhaps not the most important single piece of legislation in congressional history, but "certainly one of the most interesting." Calling it in some respects "a legislative monstrosity," born "in the midst of confusion," Prof. Dumond says the law was much more than its limited name implied. Agreeing that it was addressed to the most vexing problems of modern economic history, he writes that the unanimous decision invalidating N R A was unquestionably supported by public opinion. "The system had failed and was already largely moribund before the decision was rendered."

Pertinent now, because of the Roosevelt plan to overhaul the Supreme Court, is the writer's observation that the constitutional issue was obviously kept out of the 1936 campaign. "The President," he writes, "almost precipitated the issue, when after the N R A decision, he momentarily lost his political acumen and intimated he might incline toward abolishing the power of judicial review; but he did not return to the issue, probably because of the immediate wave of criticism over the country."

As to why people voted for Roosevelt instead of Landon, Prof. Dumond says that 100 reasons could be given. He thinks most of them did so because they, personally, were better off than they were four years before. The people he says "refused to vote against a man who took a despairing and misgoverned nation, in one of the darkest hours of its history, and set its face toward the light, gave renewed hope and courage to its people, saved its homes and extended a helping hand to its young men and women. The talk about Communism and Fascism, debts and repudiation, regimentation and Farleyism left them cold."

Supreme Court Decisions.

There are frequent references to the decisions of the Supreme Court and, unlike most school historians, Prof. Dumond invariably sets forth the significance of these decisions, —what they meant to the people. Prof. Dumond does not hesitate to say that the fourteenth amendment, "instead of being a safeguard for the rights of the Negro, became by virtue of successive Supreme Court decisions, a charter of liberties for a new creature of the law: corporations." He says that not until this was explained by Roscoe Conkling in 1882 was it known that the framers of the amendment had "purposely concealed their objective."

In discussing the character of the press of the period, he says: "The New York World until its demise and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch kept alive the spirit of their founder, Joseph Pulitzer, as tribunes of the people." Elsewhere he singles out the Post-Dispatch for special credit in the editorial fight for academic freedom and free speech.

Coronation Will Strengthen Throne, Says Lloyd George

the largest dependency in the empire, with a population as numerous as that of the whole continent of America, North and South, will not be represented in Westminster Abbey by leaders trusted and chosen by the vast majority of its people. That is a misfortune.

The Princes of the native states will be fully represented. A considerable powerful minority of the population of British India will also have their delegations — but the leaders of the majority of the people of India living under the British flag will be absent.

The success of the new reign from an impartial standpoint will largely depend on measures taken to reconcile to the Empire the whole of India from the Himalayas to Travancore. It can be done, but not by half measures. And it certainly cannot be done in time for the coronation. Indians will be there, but not India.

There is one propitious circumstance which will make the ceremony one of unfeigned rejoicing. The British Empire is reaching the pinnacle of prosperity. It has almost climbed out of the deep depression of 1931. Its home and foreign trade are both leaping upward.

Its huge armament program has given the fillip which has speeded up—at least temporarily—recovery in industries which a short time ago were lying prostrately inert after a crashing fall.

But without bringing the armament boom into the reckoning, there has been real improvement in trade with every country throughout the Empire. Hence, there will be a feeling that the golden splendor which will be lavishly displayed is justified by the great and growing wealth behind.

It is a pity that greater effort was not made in time to heal the festering sore of the distressed areas. But the pageant will take place in the prosperous south. London is doing well. The black areas of Durham and Lanark are a long way off. The King and Queen have wisely promised to make a visit after the coronation to the distressed coal districts of South Wales.

But the problems of chronic unemployment will not mar the festivities. The nation has endured it so long that it has become accustomed to local infirmity. It is bad but is much better than it was three years ago and that compensating fact will be woven into the texture of rejoicing.

The coronation will prove that Monarchy as a symbolism survives in the British Empire. It will be for the occupants of the throne to convert the symbol into a living influence.

$15,000,000 DAM UNDER WAY IN NORTH CAROLINA

It Is Sixth in T V A Program for Harnessing Tennessee River and Its Tributaries.

MURPHY, N. C., April 24.—The Tennessee Valley Authority's dam, nearly 300 feet high, is under construction on the Hiawassee River in the mountains of Western North Carolina.

It is the sixth dam in the Government agency's program of harnessing the Tennessee River and its tributaries for flood control, navigation and hydro-electric power.

The dam will back water 22 miles upstream, just above Murphy. Present plans do not call for a power house, but provision is made for later installation of generating units. The T V A estimates the work will cost $15,000,000.

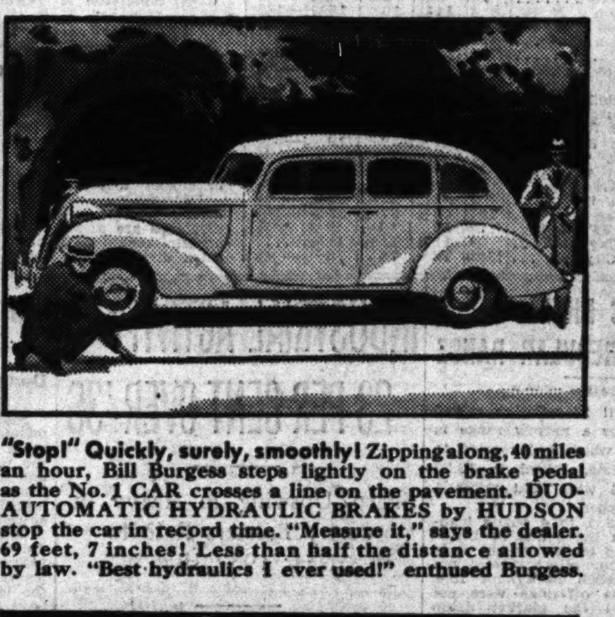
BILL BURGESS DISCOVERS

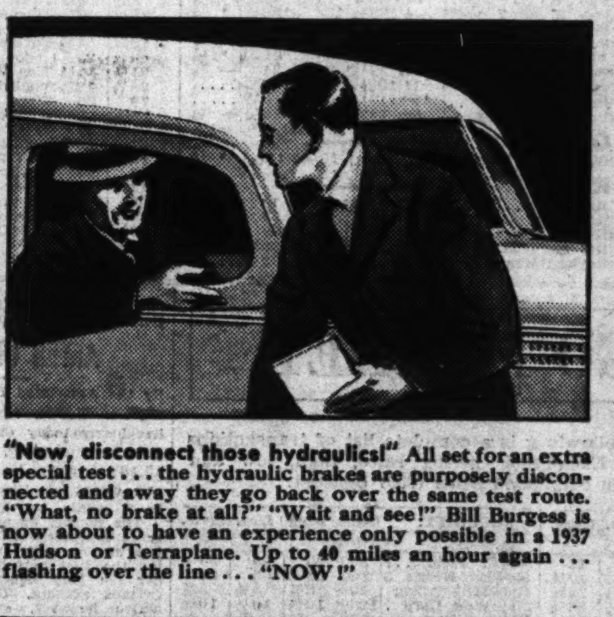
A new kind of brakes

SAFEST STOPPING ANY CAR EVER HAD . . . ANOTHER No. 1 FEATURE OF AMERICA'S No. 1 CARS

"All aboard for a brake test that's different!" Bill Burgess was a crank on automobile brakes. "I'm from Missouri," he said when his local dealer told him about the new kind of brakes on the 1937 Hudsons and Terraplanes. So off they go on the most dramatic, convincing brake test ever given any car! Equipment? Just a No. 1 CAR and a tape line!

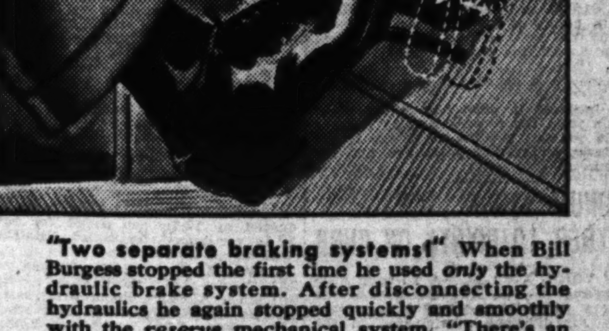


"Stop!" Quickly, surely, smoothly! Zipping along, 40 miles an hour, Bill Burgess steps lightly on the brake pedal as the No. 1 CAR crosses a line on the pavement. DUO-AUTOMATIC HYDRAULIC BRAKES by HUDSON stop the car in record time. "Measure it," says the dealer. 69 feet, 7 inches! Less than half the distance allowed by law. "Best hydraulics I ever used!" enthused Burgess.



"Now, disconnect those hydraulics!" All set for an extra special test . . . the hydraulic brakes are purposely disconnected and away they go back over the same test route. "What, no brake at all?" "Wait and see!" Bill Burgess is now about to have an experience only possible in a 1937 Hudson or Terraplane. Up to 40 miles an hour again . . . flashing over the line . . . "NOW!"

"Stop again!" . . . AND HE PUSHES THE SAME BRAKE PEDAL! No fumbling for an emergency brake lever. Bill just pushes the regular brake pedal a little farther down . . . and again . . . a quick, smooth stop! "That's the kind of a brake system for me!" exclaims Bill. "Think of having brakes like that!" Yes, and only Hudsons and Terraplanes have them!



"Two separate braking systems!" When Bill Burgess stopped the first time he used only the hydraulic brake system. After disconnecting the hydraulics he again stopped quickly and smoothly with the reserve mechanical system. "There's an advancement that's years ahead," explained the dealer. "Typical of all Hudson engineering!"

"Only Hudson and Terraplane have brakes like these!" For your complete protection Hudson builds three separate brake systems into their cars . . . hydraulics that are big, powerful, sure-acting . . . an entirely separate mechanical system that operates from the same pedal and a hand lever parking brake conveniently placed under the cowl with a finger-release for extra ease of operation.

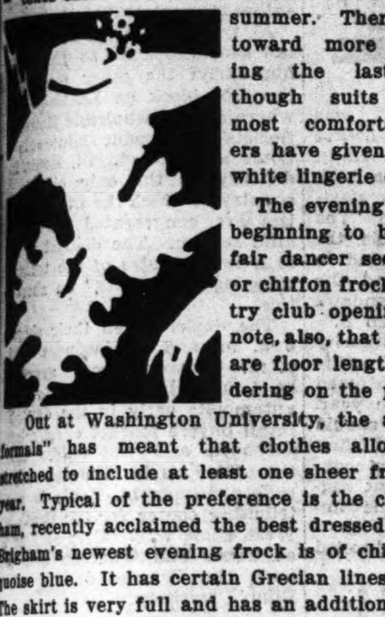
St. Louis FASHION PARADE

By Sylvia Stiles



FLOWER-TRIMMED dresses and millinery, sheer jacket frocks and prints which devote more space to white and less to subdued tones indicate that St. Louis women are preparing to greet the summer. There has been a decided trend toward more summery costumes during the last ten days and even though suits may have been the most comfortable costume, the wearers have given them a light emphasis by white lingerie or pastel tinted blouses.

The evening fashion picture likewise is beginning to be a summery one. Every fair dancer seems to demand a pale net or chiffon frock for school parties or country club openings. It is interesting to note, also, that the majority of these frocks are floor length with bouffant skirts bordering on the picturesque.

Out at Washington University, the annual epidemic of "spring formals" has meant that clothes allowances have had to be stretched to include at least one sheer frock to complete the school year. Typical of the preference is the choice of Miss Jeanne Brigham, recently acclaimed the best dressed girl on the campus. Miss Brigham's newest evening frock is of chiffon in a pale tone of turquoise blue. It has certain Grecian lines which are most becoming. The skirt is very full and has an additional gore at the back to give a back sweep to the hemline while the low-cut bodice has soft folds of the chiffon over the top of the shoulders. A brief little bolero that is entirely pleated is a striking feature of the costume.

Typical of the trend also in daytime wear of the college girls is a bolero frock which Miss Brigham has been wearing. This is made of navy blue crepe, the skirt very much gored and quite full at the hemline. A touch of white is at the neckline and sleeves. Sleeves of the bolero jacket also are trimmed with white. A dressmaker type of coat buttoning the entire length of the front, a modified blue sailor, white Ascot scarf and white gloves complete this costume.

● MISS ETHEL JANE ELLIS, another Washington University student in the well-dressed category, has an attractive new formal of peach colored net. The skirt has three rows of tubbing which gather the skirt into spaced sections and regulate the degree of fullness—the row nearest the hemline permitting decided bouffancy. Tiny bows adorn the front of the skirt. The bodice has a V neckline adorned with a spiral-shaped rhinestone clip and there are wide shoulder straps of the net that are shirred with the tubbing at the shoulders where bows add a decorative note.

One of Miss Ellis' spring daytime frocks for "off-campus" wear is of black crepe in alliance with white pique and lace. Butterfly bows of the lace-trimmed pique are placed in a row at the center front, the one at the square neckline really forming a collar. Shoulders are wide and padded. The skirt has the Maggy Rouff fullness that is so popular with the younger girls. A black straw sailor trimmed with tiny white lacquered wings and a white veil adds a dramatic emphasis to this costume.

White pique is an essential of costume completeness this spring. While its appearance is not new, the designers find new ways of applying it and this year are advocating the material for entire hats to wear with dark clothes as well as for jackets and dress trimmings. An illustration of the popularity of pique for frock adornment was the sawtooth edging extending from the neckline to the hemline of the navy ribbed crepe frock worn by Miss Eleanor Hanson at a recent bridge party. The pique went around the neckline and on down the front in a striking line.

● FLOWERS OF WHITE PIQUE and other cotton materials are striking on dark hats, and the larger these flowers the more interesting. I saw one smart hat the other day that had two huge water lilies posed at the top front of the brim. The hat was navy blue straw shaped as a close-fitting basket.

—o—o—

FLOWER CLUSTERS trimmed the frocks of several well-dressed women who attended the recent card party given by the Women's Medical Auxiliary of St. Louis University. Mrs. Harry N. Moss, for example, used two large white daisies to finish the V neckline of her printed frock. The print was most interesting in itself, being of white Chinese designs on a brown background. Large, puffed sleeves, a skirt that was gored to flare at the hemline and a narrow brown leather belt were other noteworthy features of the dress. With this Mrs. Moss wore a three-quarter length swagger coat of brown ribbed silk trimmed with the print of the dress. Her large brimmed brown straw hat was edged and banded with brown grosgrain.

Mrs. Alphonse Wade was noted in a flattering black sheer frock patterned with white that was arranged in squares. Red buttons supplied a bright accent and Mrs. Wade's jacket, which was of the same fabric as the dress, had a scarf of red and white companion print that hung loose from the neckline. The coat was about finger-tip length and flared decidedly at the hemline. A close-fitting black felt hat had a perky brim adorned with a bright red patent leather flower at one side. Black patent leather pumps were effective with this costume.

AMONG THOSE who wore suits of arresting color combinations was Mrs. Vincent Jones. Hers was of a soft rose woolen, the jacket fitted and hip length and the skirt having interesting pleats arranged at the front. A dark blue linen blouse was most attractive in alliance with the rose. The same shade of blue was repeated in hat, footwear and bag.

Miss Betsy Howell also wore a suit. Hers was of the costume type—the skirt dark blue and the blouse of soft powder blue while the jacket was of a light neutral tone. Large tucks trimmed either side of the blouse front and there were daisies at the neckline. A large brimmed hat of navy straw repeated the daisy theme.

ONCE A CROONER

● But Now Rudy Vallee Is a Showman Executive With a Quarter-Million Dollar Income a Year; Don't Mistake Him for a "Sissy."

By William A. H. Birnie

MAESTRO VALLEE GIVES THE ORCHESTRA THE WORKS AS NBC DIRECTOR O'KEEFE CLOCKS HIM.

NEW YORK, April 24.

SEVEN or eight years ago there were only two men in the United States who had plausible excuses for wearing colored glasses as a disguise in public; they actually needed some sort of protection from their more enterprising fans. Superficially these two had a few characteristics in common. Each of them was tall, slender, wavy-haired. Each took his career very earnestly, and each had a certain boyish exuberance thousands of women found romantic. One of them was Col. Charles A. Lindbergh; the other, who performed under a somewhat more garish spotlight, was Hubert Prior Vallee.

In those days you had to take sides about Mr. Vallee—he had adopted the forename of Rudy in tribute to one Rudy Wiedoeft, whom he always called the "sax god." You either went into a tender trance as Rudy's disembodied crooning emerged from your radio, or you thought it was terrible. You either preferred his Connecticut Yankees to Paul Whiteman, Goldman's Band and the Philharmonic, or you declared they put you to sleep. Innumerable blondes, who had just been assured that gentlemen were partial to them, were terribly hurt when Vallee confessed a heresy in a copyrighted article describing his ideal woman. His exact words were memorized by several million schoolgirls and middle-aged wives:—"There was a time when I thought that she must be fair. Now I feel that my ideal woman may be a brunette." The nation-wide debate over that present subjunctive rivaled the one which had arisen a few years previously over Mr. Coolidge's I do not choose to run.

In Brooklyn, Dorothy Yosnow, a music student, reported she had collected $600 in dues from loyal members of the "Rudy Vallee Rooters," "It was my great love for the art of Mr. Vallee," Miss Yosnow explained when someone asked her why. And in a Boston theater Vallee barely eluded a grapefruit which had been hurled from the balcony by a Harvard undergraduate in literal response to the lyric, "Please Give Me Something to Remember You By." In fact, sentiments about Vallee ran so high that no one was particularly surprised when a woman in the Middle West shot her husband to death because he interrupted a Vallee broadcast with the observation, "why don't you get something worth listening to?" You could sympathize with either the husband or the wife, but you certainly understood their dilemma.

TODAY it is doubtful that any wife, even in the Middle West, would kill her husband in the name of Rudy Vallee. He could walk down Fifth avenue at no more risk of serious manhandling from autograph enthusiasts than, say, Stan Laurel or Kate Smith. He often does, as a matter of fact. A few months ago a Chicago newspaper did record breathlessly on its front page that he had jammed his thumb in a taxicab door, but that was really a sort of anachronism. Willingly or not, Rudy Vallee has dropped the mantle of the late Rudolph Valentino; he has ceased to exert an appreciable effect upon the national pulse.

FLORENCE DESMOND, MIMIC, GOES EMOTIONAL AS SHE SHARPENS UP HER IMPERSONATION OF KATHARINE HEPBURN. RUDY'S STAND-IN CONDUCTOR, BENNY KREUGER, WATCHES, BUT THE MAESTRO TURNS HIS BACK AND STICKS TO THE SCRIPT.

Yet he is still one of the top names in entertainment. He makes between a quarter and a half million dollars a year. Right now he is probably making more money than ever, excepting the three years he was starred in feature motion pictures. For his radio program, a patriarch that has been running Thursday nights since 1929, he receives about $3500 a week, of which he pays about $1000 to his orchestra and banks most of the rest—he has no Broadway flair for spending money. He gets from $3000 to $8000 a week for himself and his men for personal appearances and he has no trouble securing bookings. He makes several shorts a year for Hollywood, and he is president of the Rudy Vallee Units Corporation, which manages about 15 acts and orchestras for the customary 10 per cent commission. He is no longer a crooner; he is a showman, more or less incorporated.

Vallee, now 36 years old, recognizes this transformation himself, even if a bit vaguely. He still assures his friends that he thinks his voice has a permanent appeal, but he has been willing to see it featured less and less on the radio. At the outset his program was dedicated almost exclusively to the Vallee music and the Vallee crooning, but about 1932 it was changed into a variety program, a sort of old-time Palace vaudeville bill with innovations to fit the times and the medium. The idea, which proved highly successful and has been copied widely, was not Vallee's; it originated in the offices of the J. Walter Thompson company, advertising agents for Standard Brands, the program sponsor. Since then the Thompson company has maintained a paternal authority over the program. It selects the guest stars Vallee introduces so cordially. One of its men, George Faulkner, writes the script, and another, Tony Stanford, has charge of the direction.

Generally Vallee doesn't see the drafted program until Wednesday afternoon when he appears at Studio 8-G in the NBC Building in Radio City for a rehearsal. Of course, if he is supposed to say something that doesn't appeal to him, he can have a change made, but he does not do the rewriting himself. Faulkner does. There is a depressing little story which suggests the limitations of Vallee's role in creating a program. For several weeks he tried to line up a job for an old friend as a bit player in the skits. It got to be a joke with the older men working on the hour, and they took a malicious pleasure in telling Vallee each week that, for one reason or another, his friend couldn't have a job. Finally, at one rehearsal, Vallee said, "You don't have to think up excuses about my friend any more. He committed suicide in Chicago last night."

Although that anecdote may be apocryphal, it is generally accepted in radio circles. But it doesn't do Vallee full justice because he is recognized as an ace talent scout. He is largely responsible for putting over Alice Faye, Frances Langford, Joe Penner, Bob Burns, the bazooka virtuoso, and several other artists who have gone on to stardom on their own. He helped Frank Fay and Edgar Bergen, the ventriloquist, stage their comebacks, and he helped Rubinoff secure his first commercial radio program. An appearance as a guest star on the Vallee hour is one of the major ambitions of young theatrical people, and an astonishing list of prominent stars have made their radio debuts on it, including Bea Lillie, Gertrude Lawrence, George Jessel, Burns and Allen, Joe Cook, Jimmy Durante, Grace Moore, Ethel Waters, Katharine Hepburn, Helen Hayes, Phil Baker, Lou Holtz, Fanny Brice, Gertrude Niesen and Kate Smith, to mention only a few.

VALLEE does have full charge of the musical portions of the program, and he selects all the numbers to be played in the "spots" assigned to him. He starts off with the "Heigh Ho, Everybody," which probably still sends expectant shivers up some feminine spines, and he usually sings three or four choruses himself. He shows up for rehearsals in a gray, double-breasted suit, pretty baggy around the knees. He wears blue-tinted glasses and he leads his men from atop a blue stool from which most of the paint has scaled off. Like Toscanini, he leads with his right arm; unlike Toscanini, he uses a score. He has two arrangers, but he frequently makes changes in their work when he doesn't like the effect. Occasionally he gets excited when one of the boys makes a mistake. "Damn it," he exploded at a recent rehearsal, "why can't you count bars when you have a printed program right in front of you?" He has exchanged blows with George White, an unidentified dancer at the Atlantic City Street pier who threw pennies at him, and a society leader of Toronto he thought had hurled a whisky bottle at his drummer but really hadn't, but Vallee has always succeeded in controlling his rancor at radio rehearsals. He has missed only two programs in nearly eight years—one in 1931 when his mother died, the other last November when his second wife, Fay Webb, died of peritonitis a few months after the conclusion of their tempestuous divorce proceedings.

Although one of the main reasons for his continued financial success is that he has had the good sense to take orders from show business experts, he has implicit confidence in his own talents as an impresario. Some day he would like to have full charge of a radio variety show himself. He says he has had offers from several companies to sponsor his own show, but he prefers to stick with his original sponsors. Anyhow his contract runs until 1941, with yearly options. He would like to direct motion pictures and to try directing a symphony orchestra, although he confesses he has no taste for classical music. "Think of the thrill of controlling all those men in front of you," he explains.

HE isn't disturbed by the thought that very few people now regard him as the vagabond lover, or any lover at all; he thinks his reputation can stand on his musicianship. He lives in an unostentatious seven-room apartment on East End avenue in the early Eighties. The telephone is listed under a friend's name. He has two automobiles, two dogs, three servants, an electric organ, and four radios with loud-speakers in every room. He can control one of the radios from a dial attached to the dining-room table. If a caller claims to be musical, he subjects him to an inquisition by phonograph, which consists of listening to a recording of disconnected notes and trying to tell which are sharp, flat, longer or shorter than others. After submitting to this ordeal for an hour or so, Richard Himber, an orchestra leader, who used to be Vallee's manager for club engagements, once shouted, "My God, get me out of here." Rudy smiled tolerantly and shut off the phonograph.

When he is in town, he gets up about 1 o'clock in the afternoon and generally drops in at his office on the sixteenth floor of Steinway Hall, which he shares with the Philharmonic Symphony Society of New York. The two office staffs see little of each other, however—probably have nothing in common to talk about. Vallee has six rooms. Two of them are given over to musical instruments, amplifier equipment, sheet music, phonograph records and recordings of every Vallee hour broadcast. Another is occupied by Mrs. Marjorie Diven, his personal secretary for the last eight years. Its walls are covered with evidences of her touching faith in Vallee's art, including a progression of photo-

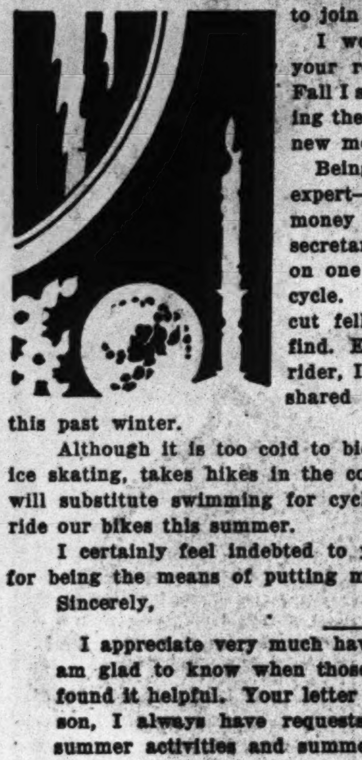
THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

MY OPINION

by

Martha Carr



Dear Martha Carr:

SOMETIME ago I noticed a letter in your column from a young man who complained that he was lonely because the social life and recreation of the young people he knew was beyond the means of his pocketbook. In response, you advised the young man to join some sort of club.

I would like to pass on to you and your readers my own experience. Last Fall I saw in your column an item concerning the Missouri Cycling Club . . . inviting new members.

Being fond of cycling—though not very expert—and not having a great deal of money to spend, I got in touch with the secretary of the club and went as a guest on one of their trips, using a rented bicycle. A more congenial crowd of clean-cut fellows and girls would be hard to find. Even though I was practically a new rider, I soon became a member, and have shared in many of the club's good times this past winter.

Although it is too cold to bicycle in the winter, the club goes ice skating, takes hikes in the country, etc., and I understand we will substitute swimming for cycling, when it becomes too hot to ride our bikes this summer.

I certainly feel indebted to you and your column, Miss Carr, for being the means of putting me in touch with this club.

Sincerely, L. S.

I appreciate very much having such letters as this, and am glad to know when those who read my column have found it helpful. Your letter is very timely, as at this season, I always have requests for suggestions concerning summer activities and summer pleasures.

—o—o—

My Dear Mrs. Carr:

CAN DARK GABARDINE twill jackets and skirts be washed? Do they shrink? Must they be ironed? I have a suit like this and don't know what to do, since it is soiled; I don't want to experiment with it.

SEGOFREDO.

Most gabardine is made of wool, hence there is always a chance of shrinking. Some of it may have had a treatment which diminishes or prevents this; but with a suit, you would be taking chances. You had better trust to cleaning. Of course it must be pressed if washed.

—o—o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I HAVE LONG BEEN a faithful reader of yours and have gained a great deal of excellent advice from your letters to others. Now I am in need of your opinion and hope that you will be kind enough to help me.

Early this winter I met a young man who was very attractive and awfully nice—in fact, I have liked him better than any young man I have met in recent years. My problem is that he insists upon my gaining weight and even though it may seem silly, he really becomes quite angry when I continue to refuse to make an effort to put on eight or ten pounds which he thinks I need. We have lots of fun together and I should not want to spoil things over anything so trivial. Shall I give in to his wish or shall I assume the attitude that if he doesn't like me as I am, to just run along.

I am five feet three inches in height and weigh about 95 pounds—is this too little? I am quite attractive looking and believe that I have a very pleasing personality.

LIZ.

Perhaps he thinks, as do some others now about the girl of the present, that you are foolishly trying to appear slim and that you would be stronger and more vivacious if you would gain a few pounds. You should weight 10 pounds more, to be up to your best physically.

I do not know why you should take offense at this suggestion and I think you might be wise to profit by it. Rest and sleep and wholesome food undoubtedly will bring the result.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● I AM WRITING YOU in behalf of a very dear friend of mine. She is younger than I—nevertheless we are fast friends. She is taking a course in school which makes it necessary for her to read a few books (one probably would do). She doesn't know what to select or buy, so I thought you might help her. The teacher of the school is advising her to read books containing the so-called "facts of life." Could you please help her choose the right ones—and not make the mistake of reading the wrong ones?

A FRIEND.

If your friend will ask for "The Enchanted Road" and "Growing Into Life" I think she may be able to decide, after looking them over which might be of most assistance to her.

—o—o—

I WANT YOUR OPINION of a mother who expects her daughter's boy friend to buy her daughter's clothes and give her car fare and spending money, if she gets any. This mother can afford it and the girl is a nice girl and doesn't run around with every fellow who comes along. She has a nice steady boy friend who comes from a very good family here. But the girl hasn't decent clothes to go out in. She hasn't had any steady work for a year. And she is neat and clean and a good worker.

She had to quit school when she was 16 and go to work to help support the younger children. Now the younger ones are working, but every time she asks for any clothes the children raise Cain and tell her it is enough to have to feed her. Don't you think they should provide some decent clothes for this girl to look for work? She walks wherever she goes, but I have never heard her complain. She does all the housework and laundry when she is at home.

Mr. Hal. Brown

New York.
N.Y.

This girl tells me she is afraid her boy friend is losing respect for her. I will appreciate any advice you will give this girl, Mrs. Carr, and I know this girl will also.

A "NOSEY FRIEND."

I cannot imagine any mother who would allow her daughter to accept clothing from a man to whom she is not married; certainly, it is out of the usual and almost cruel for the mother of a good girl to expect this. If the young man is accustomed to the right kind of family and atmosphere, it is not surprising that he shows contempt for such a situation or at least seems to be backing away from it.

The girl seems to be doing her part at home, but since other members of the family do not appreciate this, I think she should leave no stone unturned to get employment and even to get away from such conditions.

"Forget Your Errors After You Repent"

"Wallowing in Remorse Isn't a Virtue; Instead, It's a Vice."

By Elsie Robinson

YOU'VE done something wrong? That's bad.

And now you're sorry?

That's good.

Be sorry. But be so sorry that you'll get the whole thing out of your system . . . not only the wrong act itself, but the weakness that caused the wrong act. Be 100 per cent sorry all through—

And then forget it and get busy.

Lingering over wickedness, wallowing in remorse, isn't a virtue. It's a vice—as great a vice as the original sin.

Why was that first act wrong? Because it was silly, selfish, cowardly . . . because it was a menace and a waste. But remorse can be as great a menace and a waste.

A reformed sinner can make as great a nuisance of himself, recounting and repenting his evil deeds, as a dozen drunks can by lapping up alcohol.

Personally, I vote for the drunks every time. For you can enjoy yourself with some drunks, but I never knew a chronic repenter who wasn't an unmitigated blight.

—o-o—

IN THE first place, he's always an egotist. His psuedo-sorrow is but a thin mask for colossal conceit. He thinks that his particular misdemeanor is the most important happening in current history, and he spends all his waking moments contemplating it . . . or trying to make you contemplate it.

He is also lazy and cowardly. He doesn't want to face reality. He doesn't want to assume responsibilities or engage in action. And he finds a perfect escape in remorse. The wrongs of yesterday offer a wonderful alibi for dodging the duties of today.

And it goes without saying that he's utterly selfish. It's as selfish and anti-social to spend all your time repenting as it is to spend your time killing or stealing. In either case you're not a bit of good to society and you're blocking the path of progress.

If you've done something wrong, be sorry—

BUT DON'T STAY SORRY!

—o-o—

FIVE MINUTES of sincere repentance will cleanse your character and put you right with God as surely as 50 years of it. Then if you're truly sorry, it's up to you to PROVE it.

Prove it by getting busy.

Pay off that debt by performance. For remember, every time you sin you contract a debt. You waste your life. You betray trust. You two-time the whole decent human record.

You can't pay that debt by tears and prayers and handwritings. These only satisfy your own vanity. If you really want to square your record—make a new one. Muffle your moans . . . and get going!

Quilted Valances

Quilted valances to dress up your windows for the summer can be purchased by the yard. The popular width is nine inches and most of the valances are featured in plain materials. Used with a flowered chintz or linen, the trend is toward tie-backs which match the valance and white is regarded as more summery and more striking than the colors.

COOK BOOK

TOO MANY BOOKS SPOIL THE BROTH

BY VIRGINIA IRWIN

THUMBING through a battered magazine while waiting my turn to be tortured in a dentist's office the other day, I ran across a page with a hunk torn out of the lower right-hand corner. Above the torn piece, and obviously part of the advertisement that had intrigued some poor soul with a moaning molar, were the words in large type—"MEN FALL IN LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT." Here, I thought, is something that's worth looking into, so armed with the name of the magazine, the issue and page number, and with a new interest in life after the dentist had quieted my barking bicuspid, I hied myself to that font of all information, the Public Library.

Feeling confident that I was about to discover a secret that would change the course of my dreary life, I extracted the magazine I wanted from its place on the Library shelf, and in a quiet corner of the room turned to the page that was to tell me what it was that made men "fall in love at first sight."

It turned out to be stuffed gingerbread.

Slightly disappointed that I had not discovered some magic scent which when doused on would make me a femme fatale in five seconds, I nevertheless read the ad about men falling in love at first sight with stuffed gingerbread, copied down the recipe that was given, and decided to get myself a cookbook and spend more evenings over the cookstove and fewer at the movies.

The decision to get myself a cookbook led to the amazing discovery that in the Public Library, under the general head of "Cookery," there are 723 books listed. How many more there are on specific branches of the art, I didn't count, but the general subject index suggested that more could be found by looking in the cross-index under baking, canning, diet, desserts, menus, salads, sandwiches, sauces, or what do you have in mind?

With this wealth of wisdom only waiting to be tapped, it would seem that there is little excuse for any of us girls ever serving up a punk pudding or a lot of lumpy potatoes. There are even books on how to dramatize your cuisine, how to avoid serving the same thing twice in ten years, and how to hold your husband with a planned menu.

ONE ambitious tome called "365 Breakfast Dishes," has given me something of an inferiority complex because my repertoire of morning meals has never included anything besides ham and eggs, oatmeal, stewed prunes and grits and gravy. Other books that also made me feel slightly stupid were variously entitled "212 Ways to Prepare Potatoes," and "300 Ways to serve Eggs." But one that I found has given me new hope. It is entitled "Anyone Can Bake a Cake," and although I doubt if the author would have chosen that title if she had ever seen me wrestling with an egg-beater and a mixing bowl, I intend to spend next Sunday communing with the ingredients of a 13-egg angel cake with almond icing.

Judging from the publication dates of the books listed in the library's "Cookery" file, the writing of cookbooks seems to have got its start toward becoming a favorite indoor sport along about three generations ago, and in the last few years it has gained even new impetus. Now it is considered quite the smart thing to do if you have something of a social position and the reputation of always giving your guests a square meal to set your recipes down in a book and thus do posterity the favor of passing them along. In fact, even if you don't have social position or the reputation for serving square meals, you can write a cookbook anyway.

Just go around to your friends, ask them for their favorite recipes, and call your collection something like "St. Louis Table Talk" or "From Soup to Sherbet with a St. Louisan." The "native" touch is always good and you might strike it rich like Fannie Farmer did with her Boston Cooking School Cookbook. Fannie's Boston Cookbook is without a doubt the "Gone With The Wind" of all cookbooks and has sold more than 1,750,000 copies since 1896.

If you belong to some club or organization you might also get up a cookbook in the club's name, the proceeds from the book (if any) to go into the club treasury. In the library there are books of recipes from every up and coming club in the United States, from The Association for Preserving the Memory of Martha Washington to the Palm Strewers' Circle of the Kings Daughters of the Mount Morris Baptist Church.

But to get back to the subject of what has been written about cooking instead of what might be written, the magazine file at the library is almost as helpful as the book index. In looking over the cooking articles in the index to periodicals I discovered that in the last year the output was enormous. You can find an article on any angle of cooking. Right now, while giving myself a self-education in cooking, I am starting with an article entitled "The A B C's of Cookery"; within the year I hope to have graduated to the point where I can read the article on "How to Cook Sunday's Dinner on Saturday," and do it.

In a recent article an authority suggested "departing from routine and seeking "unaccustomed recipes" at this time of the year. Why this time of the year should call for something different than any other time, I, not being a cook, wouldn't know, but with that suggestion in mind I dug up some "unaccustomed recipes."

One is called "Hedgehog broiled with lotus in a ball" and the recipe reads:

"Thoroughly clean a young hedgehog. Wipe the inside with a damp cloth, but do not wash. Now mix up a glass of wine, an ounce of Chinese sauce, an onion, and some ginger, chopped fine, and stuff the hedgehog with this. Pack clay around the hedgehog to a thickness of about an inch over all and place on glowing embers. When the clay begins to crack and to turn black, the hedgehog is cooked. Break the clay casing with a hammer and the hedgehog will come away, leaving the spines and outer skin in the baked clay."

I mean to try this recipe as soon as I can locate a hedgehog and educate the management of my apartment to letting me build a campfire in the kitchen sink so I can have some glowing embers.

—o-o—

ANOTHER "unaccustomed recipe" is "Water Angels Cooked in Honey," and if you can find some "winkles," you're welcome to try it. Here it is:

"Allow to soak in water overnight some scallops, and winkles. Then place in the bottom of a bowl, adding two ounces of sugar, a small glass of honey, and a few flowers of cinnamon. Cook in a saucepan of rice."

The trouble with the above recipes is that hunting up the ingredients hardly justifies the finished product and that was my experience with the recipes in the cook book I once owned—one I got by subscribing to six magazines I didn't want. Besides, I am certain that good cooks, like heroes, are born, not made.

And if some research institute would only settle that point, it would make a lot of us girls who are punk cooks feel better, but it might also deprive the folks who write cookbooks of a lot of fun. Until the question is settled, though, if you haven't anything else to do, you might write another cookbook. There always seems to be room for one more.

Factors Which Determine New Skirt Lengths

ANYONE who is in a quandary over skirt lengths and is undecided as to whether those short evening skists and shorter daytime skirts were meant for her may find it advisable to go into seclusion while she checks up on her years and on her weight.

Age and pounds have much to do with the decisions in regard to skirt lengths. Short skirts are obviously a young fashion, but there's a limit to their appropriateness. This is why many of the designers are creating the short evening skirts only in youthful styles and piquant fabrics—the matrons won't be tempted to wear them.

Weight may be the determining factor regardless of years. Too many pounds will prompt the young girl to stick to floor length dancing frocks for at least another season while a slender figure may persuade the matron to wear a short dancing frock regardless of gray hair and grandchildren.

It Isn't Luck

By MARJORIE HILLIS

RECENTLY I went to one of those entertaining supper parties where the conversation was practically a debate. It was all about Luck, which half of the guests said was responsible for much of the success in the world and the other half said didn't exist.

My opinion fell somewhere between the two, which didn't keep me from being as violent as everybody else. I was willing to grant that luck might have something to do with whether you would succeed this year or year after next, but not with whether you would succeed at all.

I've known a lot of capable people who had a good many years of bad breaks, but they always profited by them in the end. And I've never known anyone who had permanent bad luck that couldn't be explained by his (or her) character, once you knew him well enough. If a person has real ability and is a hard worker and still doesn't get ahead, you invariably find that he doesn't get along with people or that he can't take it—and take it time after time, if necessary.

This hard-boiled point of view brought a barrage of reproof from a kind woman who sat opposite me. "What would you say," she asked, "to a family that I know that have had 28 operations in the last few years? They've had appendicitis and tonsils and mastoids and a lot

of others of all sorts and types. Isn't that luck?"

What could I say? Certainly not what I thought, which was that no family ought to have 28 operations in a few years, if at all. The best of us might have an occasional one, or an illness or accident—but not 28. It seems all too probable to me that it would take a lot of incorrect diet or dissipation or overwork or recklessness, or all of them, to run up a grand total like that.

They are, of course, the people who tell you that they always hold bad cards, which is certainly luck, but I suspect that they remember the bad hands better than the good ones. Just as a lot of people in need of jobs remember with self-pity the ones they looked for and didn't get, but not the ones they never got around to trying for. Luck is a badly overworked excuse for a lot of things it's not concerned with.

The law of averages sometimes seems to be delayed, I admit, but it usually gets to work in the end—a statement which caused one person to ask how I explained the people who keep on winning sweepstakes. The truth is that I never met one. In fact, it's possible that if I should win even one sweepstake myself, I'd start that day to believe in Luck!

I'VE JUST BEEN to see "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," the play imported from London about a doctor who was so interested in the reaction of criminals that he did a little personal research himself. He robbed a few houses at the beginning of the play, joined a gang and went in for burglary in a big way in the middle, and eventually murdered a man (a villain, of course, whom nobody would miss) in the last act, in order to get full data for the final chapter of his book. He took blood tests and blood-pressures and records of heart action all day and was supposed to be a charming fellow. You, in the audience, were expected to be heart and soul with him and get all wrought up when the police inspector came to do a little investigating (in a friendly way) at the end.

It all makes me feel that I'm pretty Victorian. For I find that

I like to have my heroes be honest and law-abiding. I can't really believe that the data Dr. Clitterhouse got made up for the damage he did. I can't help wondering about the blood-pressure of the people he robbed and the heart-action of the woman whose house he crawled into from the garage roof. Even the man that he killed didn't seem to be so much worse than the doctor himself.

Incidentally, I have an old-fashioned notion that this is no time to make light of law-breaking. Too many people are doing this in real life, and I, for one, don't find it very funny. Straight-laced though I sound, if I've got to read in the papers about sit-down strikes and moves against the laws and the Constitution, I at least want my heroes in books and plays to be good, law-abiding citizens.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Dorothy Coleman

THE flowers that bloom in the florists' shops, tra-la, may be a Sunday luxury to you, but day in and day out they're nothing but so much perishable merchandise to the wholesale dealers down on Commission Row. You ought to see them flourish a dozen talisman roses in pointing to their iceboxes, or yank a bunch of gladiolas head-first out of the tall banana baskets in which they are shipped up from Florida.

Al, from one of the downtown retail shops, took me to market with him early the other morning—to the 2700 block on La Salle street where all the wholesale flower and florists' equipment houses in St. Louis are located. St. Louis, incidentally, is the only city in the country in which the wholesale florists are congregated in one specific section. The district is within a few minutes of the trains for shipping "hot shots," on short notice.

The dealers open their shops at 6 a. m. and do business until p. m. Growers from around St. Louis bring in their flowers by automobile early in the day. The retail buyers market chiefly in the forenoon and wholesalers devote the afternoon to filling out-of-town orders. Since St. Louis is a distributing center for the South and West, some wholesalers ship as far as Texas and Colorado and even buck the Chicago dealers in the Illinois territory.

EACH WHOLESALER, while carrying a large variety of cut flowers, has come to specialize in a particular item, brought in by a grower who knows that line of cropping to the exclusion, perhaps, of others. For instance, one dealer may handle, always strictly on a commission basis, extra-fine lilies of the valley. When a retailer needs several hundred for a wedding bouquet he drives a bargain with that wholesale house. If he needs Japanese iris he may stop in at another market where he knows he will get first-rate flowers supplied by a reliable grower. Only one house on Commission Row handles orchids. They are shipped in from a greenhouse that grows only orchids and has a virtual monopoly. It would be foolish for another wholesaler to handle orchids from a grower of inferior flowers, even assuming they were available. So it doesn't matter at which florist you order your orchids. They all come from the same source.

One wholesaler specializes in rose bushes. Al and I poked our noses in his place of business, and behind the tables and tables of novelty pottery holders we found about a half-dozen girls at work in overalls. Some of them were tying up bushes by machine. Others were waxing plants with a mixture of glue and paraffin to keep them from drying out while on a department store counter, for instance. This dealer said he was the man who conceived the idea of the white Christmas tree. In the center of his workroom is a fiendish-looking machine with which they are sprayed.

Another dealer specializes in wire frames over which fancy floral pieces are made—everything from Masonic emblems to the scales of justice.

—o-o—

ACROSS THE STREET Al steered me into the house where you can buy any species of artificial wreaths, no matter how eccentric your taste. They are made on the spot by a staff of girls varying in number from 15 to 50, depending on what seasonal demand has to be met. The stock is large at present in anticipation of Memorial day trade.

Aside from these specialties the wholesalers handle about the same line of merchandise. Growers generally bring their flowers in to the same dealer four or five times a week. If a dealer doesn't get in any snapdragons, say, this morning, he may go next door and buy from his competitor.

All the wholesale shops display their goods in much the same way, on large tables about eight feet by five and about four feet off the floor. They have galvanized tops on which the trussed-up flowers are laid. No water, no iced air pipes. Only the roses have their heads done up in tissue paper. A few tall varieties stand in high pails. Flowers are generally cut tight, that is, before they have opened out completely. Thus they will not suffer by being on display without water for a few hours. After noon they go back into enormous ice chambers where they may be stored for several days and still be salable. Roses will last two days and gardenias, popularly regarded as the frailest of the frail, will last four.

On one table there may be several different rows of delphinium, carnations, representing a number of growers. Since the latter profit only by what they sell, not by what they bring in, it is necessary to keep the merchandise of one separate from that of another. Wholesalers can spot the product of a certain grower immediately by the

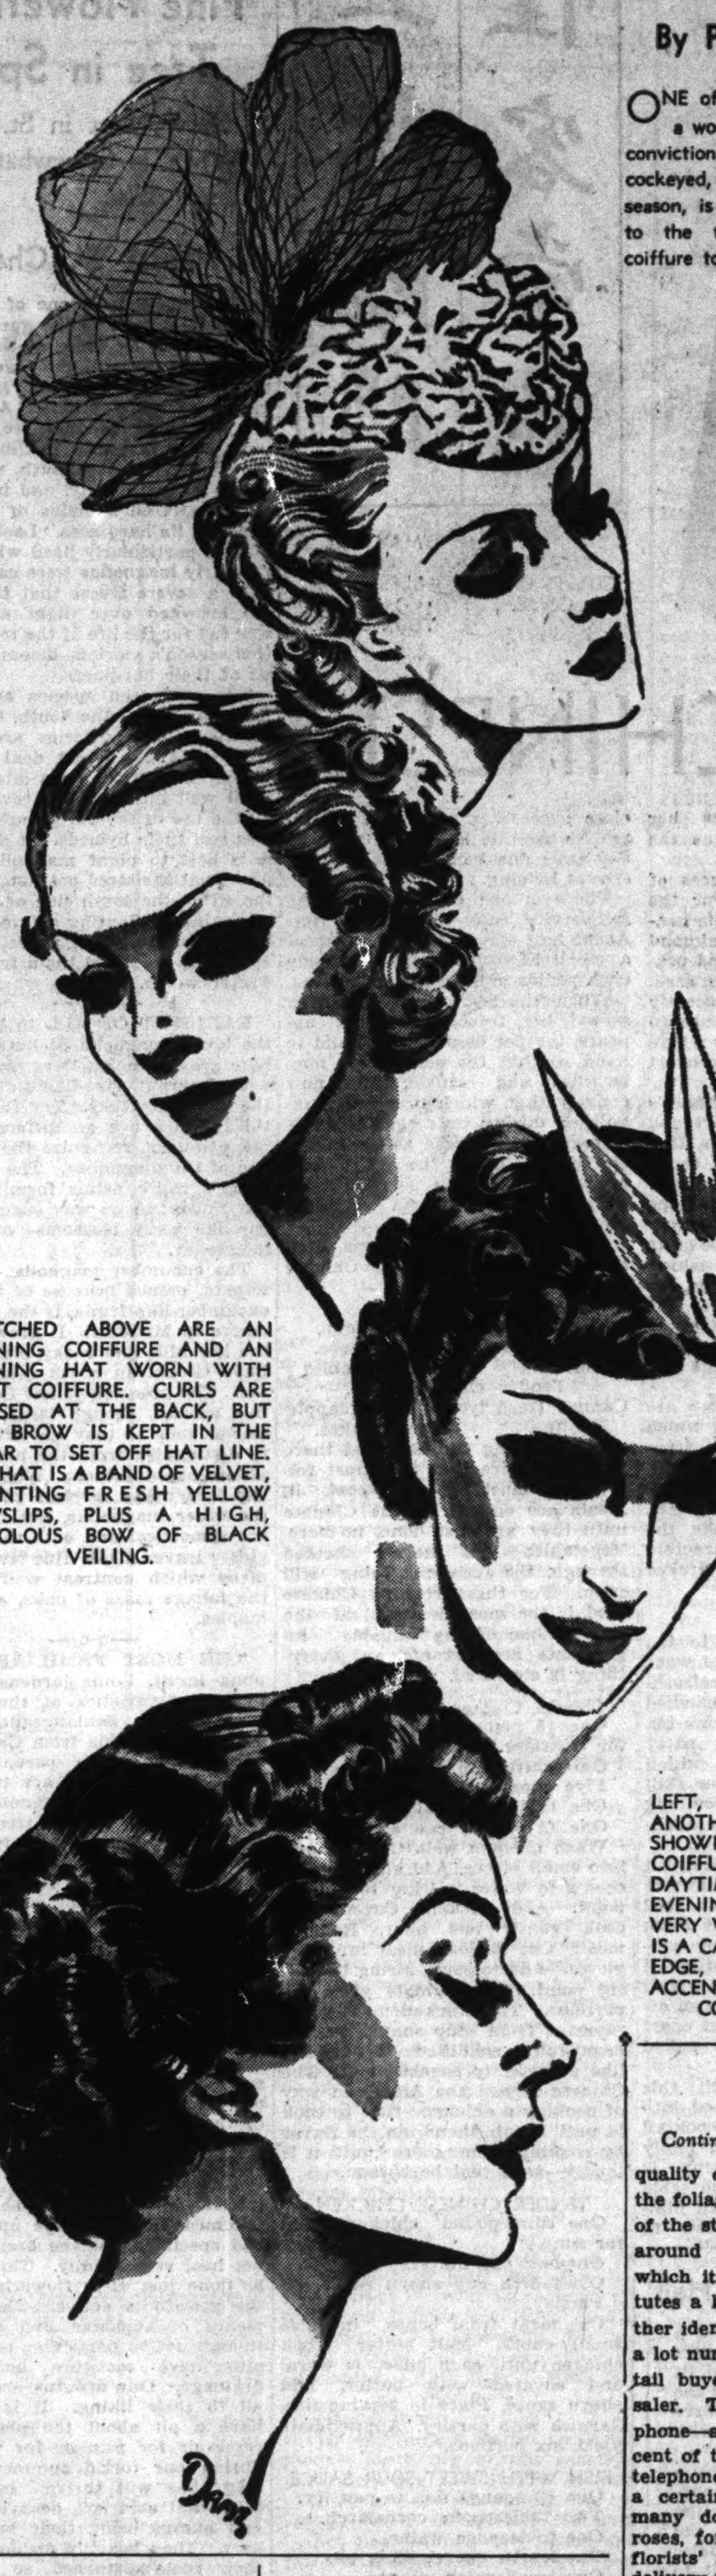
ONE of the reasons that many a woman never gets over the conviction that all new hats are cockeyed, with every succeeding season, is because she never goes to the trouble of fitting her coiffure to her hat.

THE woman with a vastly becoming hairdo is really sagacious to insist on hats that will go with the design. But most women can wear their hair in a dozen different and modish manners if they take any interest in the matter, and among them is one for even the maddest of hats, to be sure. Hairdressers are designers, just as much as are milliners, and the knowing woman will introduce the two for her own benefit.



SKETCHED ABOVE ARE AN EVENING COIFFURE AND AN EVENING HAT WORN WITH THAT COIFFURE. CURLS ARE MASSED AT THE BACK, BUT THE BROW IS KEPT IN THE CLEAR TO SET OFF HAT LINE. THE HAT IS A BAND OF VELVET, MOUNTING FRESH YELLOW COWSLIPS, PLUS A HIGH, FRIVOLOUS BOW OF BLACK VEILING.

Society Turns To Performing In Night Clubs

And Is Getting Paid for It, While the Professionals Moan.

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, April 24.

THE rash of "society" entertainers has just broken out here again with redoubled violence, like a plague of galloping German measles. A half-dozen of the snootier night clubs now boast warblers almost guaranteed Social Register, that oft-quoted tome which nobody reads and means nothing.

The bell-wether of them all, Eve Symington, lovely matron, mother of sons aged 11 and 9, daughter of Congressman Wadsworth and granddaughter of the revered John Hay, sings again in the uppity Sert Room of the Waldorf, at a salary now in four figures. She began her "career" in 1934, and has enjoyed uninterrupted success. She sings nicely, too.

Lawrence "Teeney" White has unleashed his baritone; Mrs. David Oliver Shoemaker thought up the professional name "Wanda Mara" and opened an engagement and her throat at the Club Ball. Still others are Cobina Wright and Lady Susanne Wilkins.

Why do you suppose so many expensive night spots hire these boys and girls from the right side of the New York Central tracks? With all due respect for what they have of talent and personality, the swarthy gents who own such gilded joints nourish flaming hopes that the society singers will pull better than their weight from the social circles in which they move. The good old bar-bill is the acid test of a cafe name—whether that name be Dotty Bra-strap from Broadway or Lottie Ice-face from Park avenue.

And so they trill away, with their little voices and personalities. Poor little rich girls—we all want to see them get along! But you should hear the language of fine professional entertainers who really have to live from such jobs! Still, maybe you shouldn't!

—o-o—

THE ABSOLUTE dramatic smash of the spring has been Maurice Evans' appearance in "Richard II"—and if we duly cherchez la femme in the matter, we find Margaret Webster, a dark, attractive young woman who was brought all the way from London to produce the Shakespearean tidbit on Broadway. Oddly enough, though she has been appearing in the British capital for a dozen years, she's New York born—though this is her first visit since the age of 3!

—o-o—

SAY, WILL YOU finish this piece for me, please? The town is sun-drenched and clear-eyed, and I know that outdoors the pigeons of St. Patrick's Cathedral are strutting fatter and sassier than ever, and the spring crop of dreamers are dozing on the stone benches of Bryant Park, and little girls are matching their voices against the thunder of the Elevated. In short, I want to take a walk. Can't do it? Oh, well, thanks anyway.

A GIRL ABOUT TOWN

quality of the flowers, by whether the foliage is stripped from the end of the stalks, by the color of string around them and the manner in which it is tied. The knot constitutes a kind of hall-mark. As further identification, all growers have a lot number, as familiar to the retail buyers as it is to the wholesaler. Thus if Al orders by telephone—and an estimated 40 per cent of the trade on the row is by telephone—all he has to do is call a certain dealer and ask for so many dozen of 25's 18-inch pink roses, for example. The wholesale florists' association has a fleet of delivery trucks which serves all the dealers on the row, but many buyers come with their own conveyances. The other morning trucks from as many as eight different retail flower shops were in the middle of the street, off which other traffic had the good sense to stay.

AS SCIENTIFIC as flower-cropping, on which the retail supply depends, has become, it still is a natural process which cannot be completely controlled. For instance, only one wholesaler on the row had gardenias for the last Christmas and New Year's trade. The burden of all the gardenia corsages and centerpieces in the city—and indeed in the district which these wholesalers serve—fell on him. He had them only because his smart grower had timed his cropping just right. Others didn't get blooms until around Jan. 10, about two weeks too late to catch the trade.

Gardenias always come in wired to keep the heavy heads from snapping off at the base. This, contrary to common opinion, does not shorten their life and is essential when the flower is to be worn. Camellias, for the same reason, are wired.

It looked a while back as if the Taylor-Garbo posies were going to develop into a vogue but the dealers are just as glad they didn't. They are too hard to handle. If you have ever tried to get a corsage of them from your florist you know how gloomy he is about the order. It usually can't be filled.

Stranger things than movies influence flower styles. Modern housing, for instance. As one wholesaler explained to Al and me, in the days for spacious rooms and high ceilings retailers would buy long-stemmed American Beauty roses. Customers wanted them for mammoth jardinieres to stand before pier-glasses or in the corner of a formal drawing room. But now with more and more people cramped up in apartments, the demand is for low bowls of small blossoms, and floppo goes the demand for long stems. It's a pity, too, our man added, because people don't realize they can't get any kind of head without a long stem. They think it's a waste of money, because it simply has not to be cut down to fit the tallest vase in the cupboard.

Flowers are almost the only industry in the 2700 block of La Salle. At one end of the street is a lunchroom supported chiefly by those engaged in the markets. At the other end is a retail flower shop. People in the neighborhood sometimes get the idea they can buy a bouquet on the row. They are always referred down the street to this little store. Above one of the larger markets there is a dance hall where three times a year growers, wholesalers and retailers get together for a shindig, with beer and sandwiches. And as far as we know (forgive us, folks, forgive us), no cards are passed around asking "Please Omit Flowers."

Linen Accents In Spring Wear

TRY to find one early summer costume that has not been influenced by the vogue of linen, and you have made a real discovery. Accessory departments are filled with linen accents ranging from bright little 'kerchiefs to complete gilets, blouses and wide-brimmed hats.

Novel shades are featured in the new linen accessories with the idea that every costume can be beautified by a little more color. There are various tones of red ranging from rust to raspberry while blue and yellow have as many variations as the dyers can think of.

Headbands and sashes, belts and scarfs, vestees and gloves, shoes and hats, and blouses and berets are among the sets which are recommended of solid colored or printed linens. Piques are next in order of numbers but are far behind the linens in early popularity.

Vogue of Buttons

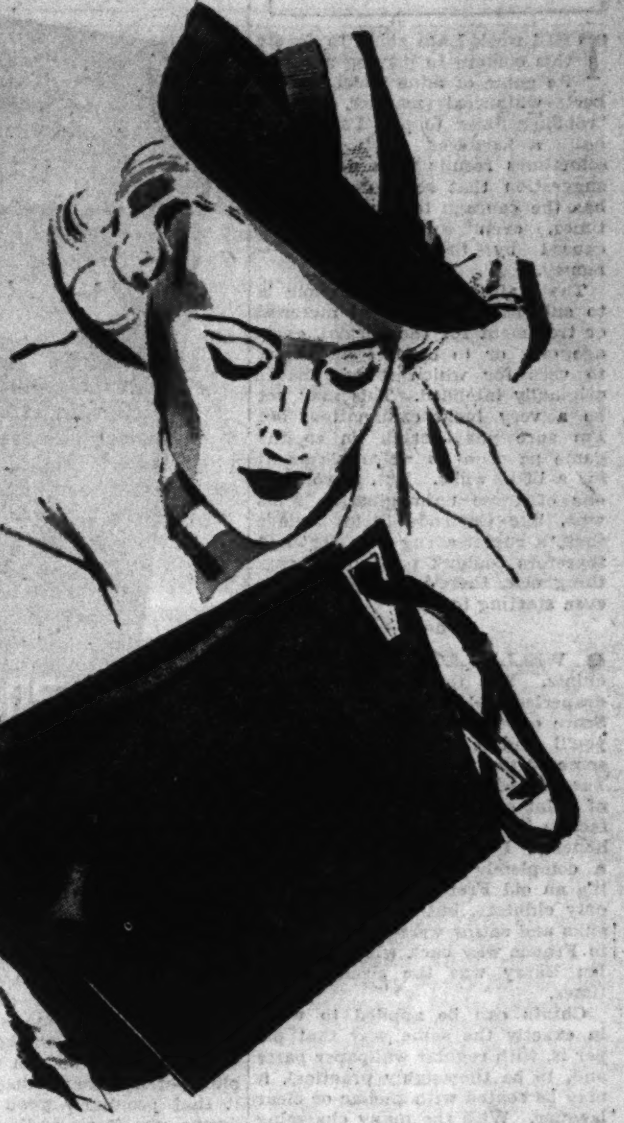
"BUTTON, button, who's got the button" is a game of fashion this season. Judging by the number of button-trimmed frocks on display in the shops every woman is indorsing the vogue in a big way. Rows of tiny white pearl buttons placed against each other offer the most popular method of adorning a frock. Linen dresses illustrate the trend as do dark colored chiffons.

One interesting dress of turquoise blue linen has two rows of buttons running horizontally around the blouse, each row finishing a wide tuck.

Money-Clip Bag

The money-clip bag is a unique accessory which is liked for dress-up occasions when a large bag seems out of place. This is made of satin, faille or soft kid cut in a square that is doubled over and held in place with a money clip adorned with initials.

Chic Accessories



SOMETHING NEW IN SHORTCUTS TO CHIC IS A SHOP WHICH SELLS HATS AND HANDBAGS ALONG WITH ITS FAMOUS SHOES. IT'S A WONDER THAT NO ONE EVER THOUGHT OF THIS STUNT BEFORE, IT IS SO SIMPLE AND SO HELPFUL. EVERYONE KNOWS THE DREARY TREK TO MATCH NAVY BLUES, FOR INSTANCE, AND THE MADDENING ELUSIVENESS OF GRAY AND BEIGE SHADES WHEN TUNING A PAIR OF SHOES TO A COSTUME.

MIXED COSTUMES TO BE POPULAR THIS SUMMER

ANY woman who has a flair for mixing her costumes and stirring up colorful ensembles from a skirt of one fabric, a blouse of a second and a jacket of a third will find plenty of ingredients with which to work during the coming summer. Scrambled costumes have lost none of their popularity—in fact, they seem to have gained new friends, especially for spectator sports wear so there is much opportunity for originality and striking effects.

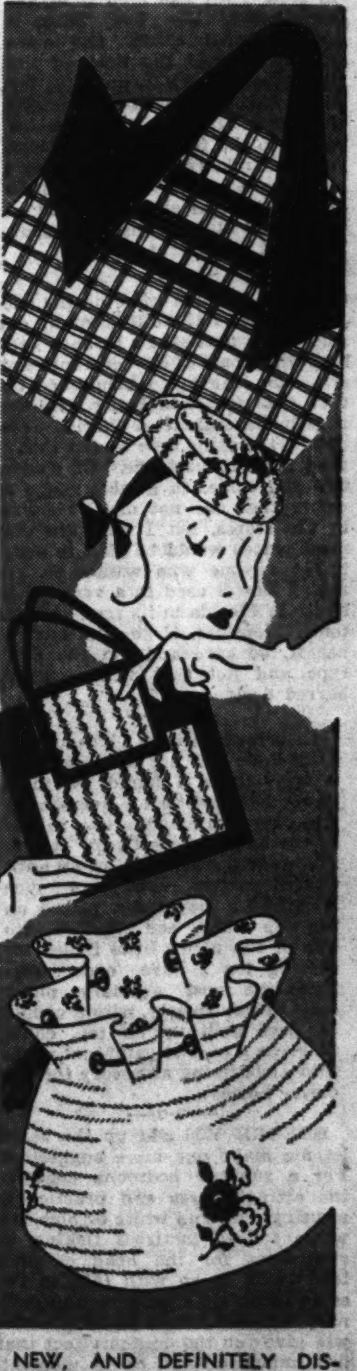
A skirt that is patterned in some unusual way may be the basis of one of these mix-your-own costumes or it may supply the subdued background for wild ideas introduced in blouse, scarf or coat. Perhaps the best possibility in the selection of the parts of such an ensemble is the pleated skirt which may be of a light weight flannel, a novelty suiting or a linen. The vogue of plaids continues into the summer so there are cotton and linen versions of the gaily patterned skirt as well as those of the light woolen and synthetic fabrics. Many of these skirts are pleated all the way around, the pleats stitched down part way and usually on the slant so that the umbrella effect is achieved.

Striped linen and pique skirts are the most exciting ones for summer wear because the color combinations are as bright as the brightest awning and the stripes often are equally as wide. Three colors such as yellow, blue and red are selected and the pleats arranged so that the third shade appears only when the wearer is walking. If the wearer wishes to be very bold in her color scheme she will choose a jacket which repeats the brightest shade and repeats the stripes in its trimming. A dark blue or a neutral coat will tone down the skirt to please more conservative wearers.

The interest in ribbed fabrics has brought promotion of bengaline for skirts and for entire summer suits. The skirts are considered most effective of dark shades worn in combination with white or pastel jackets. White and beige bengaline are featured also and may be matched with jackets if a contrast is not wanted. There also is a tweed-like fabric which is very light of weight and is available in the dark street shades as well as pastels. Novelty patterned silks, cottons and synthetics also are being used for separate skirts to combine with sports blouses or jackets.

While the jacket styles are more varied now than they have been for many seasons, the short, fitted style which fastens with double buttons at the waistline seems to be the classical favorite. Short, boxy coats that are hardly hip-length, boleros and knee-length swaggers, also offer possibilities in the assembling of costumes. Among blouse preferences, there is interest in the sports blouses of light mesh weaves to wear with separate skirts and packets. Most of these have V-necklines and short sleeves.

Straw Bags



NEW, AND DEFINITELY DISTINCTIVE, THE STRAW BAG IS FASHION'S FAVORITE FOR THE SUMMER MONTHS.

AMPICO, A STRAW FABRIC, IS COMBINED WITH CALF TO ACHIEVE SMARTNESS IN THE BAG SKETCHED AT THE TOP.

THE MANNISH STRAW BAG IN THE CENTER IS LINED AND TRIMMED WITH GROSGRAIN.

ANOTHER VERSION OF THE STRAW BAG IS THE POUCH MODEL DONE IN PANAMA. HAND-PAINTED FLOWERS ON THE STRAW CARRY OUT THE DESIGN OF THE PRINTED COTTON LINING.

LET ME SUGGEST

by

Josephine Walter

THIS week I am going to devote this column to playing a favorite game of mine which, in my best whimsical manner, I call "robbing Peter to pay Paul." It's quite a harmless pastime which sometimes results in a decorating suggestion that some daring soul has the courage to try and sometimes, even solves a problem caused by that "ole debbil"—money.

The main point of the game is to substitute an unusual material or treatment for the normal, average one, or to convert an object to uses for which it was never originally intended. This may not be a very lucid explanation, but I'm sure you'll catch on to the game as soon as we've played it for a little while. But, if you are one of those unimaginative souls who, like Gertrude Stein, believe that "a rug is a rug is a rug" and therefore couldn't possibly be anything else, there's no use of your even starting to play.

● WELL, LET'S START with chintz. You think it's meant for draperies and upholstery, do you? Score one for me. For right now you'll find it blossoming forth on some of the smartest spring walls. Yes, indeed, it's being used instead of paint or wallpaper and very effective it is, too. Of course, in all honesty, I must admit this isn't a completely new idea. In fact, it's an old French custom, for not only chintzes, but linens and even silks and satins were used on walls in France way back when Madame Du Barry was the siren of the times.

Chintz can be applied to walls in exactly the same way that paper is, with regular wallpaper paste and, to be thoroughly practical, it may be coated with shellac or clear lacquer. With the many charming and inexpensive chintzes available, it is now possible to have a "chintz room" at very little more cost than one done with wallpaper. Incidentally, I say "chintz room" advisedly for, when this material is used on the walls it is considered smartest to use this same fabric, in the same design and color for draperies, upholstery and even for head-boards and spreads of beds.

But I have not finished with the uses of chintz yet. And for this next suggestion I should either score two points or have my head examined. In fact, it really isn't a suggestion at all, for a widely-known art authority in New York has used it in her own home. She has taken a gaily printed chintz and completely covered the floor of her living room with it, much in the way carpeting would normally be used. It has been pasted down to the floor and then given innumerable coats of wax. Don't ask me what she's going to do about it when she gets tired of the whole idea; maybe she hasn't thought about that yet.

● AND WHILE we're on the subject of rugs, I'd like to clear up one suggestion that seems to have been bothering some of my constant readers. Not long ago I mentioned the fact that felt was being used for rugs by several clever Florida decorators, the same type of felt that is used for rug cushions. Of course, this felt comes in a wide range of colors that are not usually shown in the stores, but I am sure that most places would be glad to order it for anyone who wanted it. In fact, I saw it used in a very smart house in Florida in its regular beige tone. However, if you do want to use it, be sure and get the plain type and not that with a cross-barred design.

On a recent trip to Chicago (and I do hope I'm not sounding like a travelogue), I found a most clever and practical conversion of one object to another use, in one of the smart shops there. A regular swivel piano stool of an antiquated variety, with very nice legs, had a lazy susan placed on the top which converted it into one of the nicest little tables for serving tea I have ever seen. Even the most ordinary piano stool of this variety, with a couple of tiers built up on top, could be given a coat of paint and made into a charming accessory for the clever hostess.

BEFORE WE add up the score, let me make one more suggestion. For a summer bedroom, consider the attractiveness and practicality of using pink and white or blue and white striped mattress ticking as slip-covers for the head of your bed. And, to go with this, in the same spirit, try a bedspread of ordinary cotton mattress padding which will give you the quilted effect that is so much in vogue at the moment.

And now it's your turn.

THE WHOLE HALL IS FULL OF BLESSING AND JOY.

IF you hate Chinese food, this is not for you. But if you like it—if you sometimes slip into the little chop suey place around the corner — then the thought must have crossed your mind: Why couldn't I cook like this?

You can and quite easily. There is nothing mysterious about Chinese cooking. You can see for yourself that it is made out of the ordinary pork and chicken, fish and vegetables of your own market . . . plus, perhaps, something that gives it that peculiarly good taste that draws you back again and again to a Chinese restaurant.

In Honolulu, where I lived for a long time, are many young Chinese of the second generation. They wear American clothes with style, fill good professional jobs, hold college degrees and vote on election day. But when they come home to dinner at night, they sit down to a table where the food has been cooked in the Chinese way. And if you have the luck to be invited to dine with them, you realize there is an excellent reason why they cling to this one heritage.

One of my Chinese girl friends in Honolulu is named Constance. Probably she has a Chinese given name also, but I never heard it. I often used to sit in her white-tiled American kitchen to watch her prepare dinner. There was nothing queer about what she used or did. She merely put things together a little differently. But when they came to the table they tasted as if someone had made magic passes over them.

"I want to learn the tricks," I said to her one day, "will you let me buy the things and come here to cook them under your supervision?"

She was quite willing, so we went shopping. As an extravagant first gesture, we bought a tender young chicken of four or five pounds weight.

"You can't make good Chinese food out of poor quality meats and vegetables," she told me. "We don't do anything to conceal inferior taste or toughness."

At the American vegetable market we bought an ordinary assortment of celery, onions, green pepper, cauliflower, carrots and a turnip.

"Chinese use whatever vegetables are in the market," she told me. "It isn't what that matters, but what you do with what."

"I have shoyu sauce and Chinese tea at home," she went on. "The sauce is the one thing you must have to make Chinese cooking taste right. I notice it is being sold nowadays in all good American groceries. Sometimes it's labeled 'chop suey sauce,' but what's in a name?"

However, we did go into a Chinese grocery for I wanted to pick up a few specialties. I bought a can of abalone (that delicious shellfish, finer and stronger than clams, that has left its shells in all the curio shops of California). Also a can of bamboo shoots (they are rather tasteless but add atmosphere to a vegetable mixture). Then a can of fresh lychees. Once having tasted that strange delicious fruit who can resist it? (I had eaten the fruit fresh plucked from the trees that grow near Canton — the only place where the lychee is available in sufficient quantity to be commercially canned).

"Lychees make a wonderful addition to your fruit salad," Constance interpolated, for she knows her American cooking as well as the Chinese.

We also bought some pieces of fresh ginger root to flavor the cookery, and for dessert some candied ginger (to nibble), almond cakes, dried lychee "nuts" and peanut candy rolled in sesame seed. All of these things I saw recently in New York when I wandered into a little grocery at the corner where Mott street meets Pell in the heart of Chinatown.

Before I go on with Constance's cooking lesson, I want to give you some ideas on how to give a Chinese party, in case you get to be such a good cook you want to show off to your friends. This could be a luncheon or an informal supper party. But until you get to be quite expert, I wouldn't advise asking more than six or eight friends, for most Chinese cooking is of the short-order type and mustn't stand after it is prepared. (The cook has to be in the kitchen until the last minute).

Chinese dinner invitations are squares of red cardboard on which the black characters are written with a small brush in columns, reading from top to bottom, starting on the right and moving left. A clever person could make the English letters look like characters by making them of crossed strokes with a stub pen.

AND now we get back to the question of food! If you want to serve very light refreshments—almond cakes, candied fruits, lychee nuts and jasmine tea would do. However, this party started as an occasion on which you were going to show your skill in Chinese cooking, and so you may want to make it supper or luncheon.

On the table, when the guests sit down, are small plates of sweets (candied fruits), watermelon seed (nuts) and fresh fruit. The fresh fruit is cut into pieces and prepared for eating. Quite often it consists of sections of grapefruit which have been peeled, like an orange, and the sections taken apart intact. The white skin is pulled off by the person eating it.

By being generous with this grapefruit it could be turned into the equivalent of a fruit cocktail first course. But the meal really opens when a bowl of soup is placed in the middle of the table and everyone dips in to help himself. The other dishes follow in close succession. No dish is removed until it is empty, and at any time one can go back for a second helping.

There is one exception to the self-service rule—this is the rice. About half way through the meal a small bowlful is placed beside each person and refilled as desired.

When the last course has been served, hot, freshly made tea appears, the pot passed from hand to hand so that the small cups may be filled and refilled. And now conversation, which may have languished during the serious business of eating, is resumed as the guests sip the tea, nibble the cakes, and enjoy that feeling of well-being which comes after an excellent dinner.

The following menu is one often served in an American-Chinese home in Honolulu.

Grapefruit sections
Chicken and Abalone soup.
Fish with sweeet-sour sauce.
Rice Mixed Vegetables
Tender chicken meat.
Canned fresh lychee or Pineapple.
Hot tea. Almond cakes.

In preparing Chinese food there is one practice that you must follow—you must not over cook it. Meats are cooked by the Chinese until they are just done, no more. Vegetables are merely heated through, the centers being still crisp. For these reasons Chinese food is the most healthful in the world—none of the valuable ingredients are lost and yet everything is sterilized.

Chinese Chicken Seafood Soup.

One (3 pound) chicken cut up for fricassee.
One-fourth cup diced celery.
Five cups water.
One tablespoon salt.
One (1 pound) can abalone.

Wash chicken well. Cut gizzards into small pieces. Add gizzards and celery to water. Bring to boiling point. Add chicken. Cover and cook gently one hour. Remove meat. Cut abalone meat into fine pieces. Add to soup. Bring to boiling point. Approximate yield, six portions. The chicken meat when removed from soup shauld be just beautifully solidified throughout, like a perfectly poached egg. The Chinese regard the American way of cooking a chicken—first to cook ia until tough, then ruin the flavor by cooking some more until it is tender—as a real barbarism.

TENDER CHINESE CHICKEN

One three-pound chicken (used for soup.)
One-half cup butter.
One-fourth cup shoyu sauce.
Parsley.

Cut meat from bones, in nice small cubes. Melt butter. Cook chicken until each cube is warm and covered with butter. Add shoyu sauce. Place in serving dish. Garnish with parsley. Approximate yield, six portions.

FISH WITH SWEET-SOUR SAUCE

One (2 pound) fish to pan fry.
Two tablespoons cornstarch.
One tablespoon water.
One-fourth cup cooking oil.
One small onion, diced.
One carrot, shredded.
One turnip, shredded.
One cup vinegar.
One cup water.
Two-third cups sugar.
One-fourth cup shoyu sauce.

Clean fish well. Remove most of the tail and fins. If desired leave on the head. Rub well with a paste of one tablespoon cornstarch and the water. Place cooking oil in skillet. Fry fish three to five minutes or until crisp. Remove fish. Turn off all but two tablespoons fat. Add vegetables and fry for three minutes. Combine vinegar, water, sugar and shoyu sauce. Add a small amount of this mixture to the remaining tablespoon of cornstarch. Pour both mixtures over frying vegetables. Allow to boil up once. Turn over the fish. Serve at once. Approximate yield, six portions.

ALL TYPES OF TRAYS

By Patricia Hall

TRAYS, trays, literally thousands of them are showering the market today . . . big ones, little ones, all shapes, colors and sizes to meet every demand and fit into every budget. It wasn't so long ago that trays were practically non-existent (except for strictly utilitarian purposes), but this year's crop is better than ever before, with many new angles in decoration, as well as in service. A type can be found to accent any color scheme; when it comes to the question of utility the tray has been converted into an all-purpose affair which solves every problem in serving, whether a glass of wine and a biscuit, or a meal, complete!

This season finds the individual tray achieving popularity, and no wonder! It's so practical! One that struck us as being particularly clever in construction is made of chromium and is about six or seven inches long, providing just enough room for a cocktail glass and a liberal supply of snacks. Attractive, too, is the individual tray made of natural wood, splotched with bright colors . . . especially nice for the country or shore. A buffet supper becomes very simple when you provide each guest with a tray of good things and let him find a spot in the room that suits his fancy.

One of the most popular materials for trays, right now, is natural wood with hand-painted designs to carry through some original plan in decoration. Colors are vivid but harmonious.

As the tray increases in size, ranging from nine to 20 inches in diameter, it becomes more diversified in usage. Some trays have a space in the center for a wooden sauce bowl. The de luxe models are set on revolving bases so that they may be used for "lazy susans." Outstanding among the wooden trays is the horseshoe, white with a sky-blue border. The handles of this unique affair are stirrup shaped.

One of the most original trays of this season is a copy of the flower vendor's own, and is provided with a strap to slip over the shoulder. No fear of spilling one's tea or cocktail with such a safety device. This tray has three shelves, the middle one fitted out with four glass dishes for hors d'ouevres or sandwich fillings . . . very convenient as well as novel. It comes in a number of color combinations.

Speaking of large trays, the writer saw a giant canape server in blue and white that measures about 28x18 inches and holds everything that could be needed for a party. In the center there is a large board for cheese. This board is hollow, and, when inverted, can be used as a celery container. Around the board are three dishes to hold spreads or fillings, and a wooden sauce bowl. Containers for salt, pepper and mustard fit into one small section. With the aid of this tray you can serve just a bite—or a meal — with ease!

Glass and chromium are running wood a close race for popularity. One tray, shaped like a ship's wheel, and made of glass with chromium handles and trim, has a guard rail to prevent glasses from going overboard. Two narrow chromium rails close together on the top, keep the glasses in line. There is one small opening through which to slip the stems. Even more de luxe is the glass and chromium affair modeled after a ferris wheel. A dozen glasses and four dishes swing back and fourth in their holders but so secured that their contents are in no danger.

Storage is a problem when space is limited and you have a yen to express your originality through trays. One of the cleverest tricks to solve the problem is a tray base that takes up very little room but is so convenient. . . . no fumbling through stacks! Simply file the trays away, side by side, in a rack.

Once you become tray-conscious you will discover all sorts of new possibilities for the use of these first aids to serving. . . . out-of-doors especially, now that spring is here and summer just around the corner.

Bags that are made of leather grained to resemble lace are among the novelties of the season. They appear in black and white combinations, the effect being that of a covering of Spanish lace.

The Magnolia Fine Flowering Tree in Spring

It Grows Best in St. Louis When in Somewhat Sheltered Area.

By Harriet W. Chandler

THE magnolia is one of spring's choicest gifts to the garden and esteemed by some as the handsomest flowering tree we have, though not nearly as generally grown as many others. A reason for this may be that we always picture the magnolia in thinking of the gardens of the South, where it grows so luxuriantly, and in seeing only scattered samples of it here, question its hardiness. Last spring, after a particularly hard winter, all the early magnolias were caught by such a severe freeze that the flowers browned over night and fear was felt for the life of the trees. But this season's glorious bloom assures us of their hardiness.

The evergreen species are truly the treasures of the South, but most of the deciduous forms are hardy with us, and a great deal of fine bloom can be had from late March until well into May and even June by the use of several groups of species and their hybrids. It St. Louis it is best to plant magnolias in a somewhat sheltered position, such as the ell on the south side of a house or against a planting of evergreens, to bring out their greatest beauty as well as to shield them from cold winter winds.

EARLIEST OF ALL to bloom is the lovely magnolia Stellata, whose bare gray branches have been laden with fragrant, star-like flowers for the last two weeks. The flowers of this species are so different that many do not recognize the tree as one of the magnolias. The 12 to 16 shaggy white petals forming each flat flower, in no way suggests the cup-like waxy blossoms of other magnolias.

The cucumber magnolia, M. Acuminata, named because of its small cucumber-like fruits, is the only one native to Missouri. It grows along the low hills and rocky bluffs from Cape Girardeau south into Arkansas. The greenish-yellow flowers of this species, though large, are inconspicuous as they are often hard to distinguish from the new leaves which surround them. When blooming they make far less show than the other magnolias, but the trees are symetrical and with their large glossy leaves make fine lawn specimens which contrast well against the foliage mass of oaks, elms and maples.

THE MOST FAMILIAR magnolia in St. Louis gardens are the numerous varieties of the saucer magnolia, M. Soulangeana. These are exotic hybrids from China and Japan where their parents grow wild. Their flowers are the most showy of all the magnolias and, fortunately for us, the tree is perfectly hardy here. The large waxy flowers range in color from white to purple and bloom out before the leaves appear, giving the ashen gray bark a chance to show itself.

Speciosa blooms still later. The flowers are smaller but more profuse, the trees being literally covered with white shaped blossoms tinted rose at the base.

The Glauca magnolia is one of the latest to bloom and is very satisfactory here in St. Louis. This one is not as outstanding as many of the others, the smaller creamy white flowers opening every day or so among the glossy leaves.

—o-o—

THE MAGNOLIAS should be trimmed only to shape up a very bad specimen, for the branches do not heal very readily. This should be done just after flowering when the growth is active. They like plenty of sunshine and air and, though not so particular as to soil, must have moisture and good drainage. Our drouths are not at all to their liking. It is well to have a pit about the plant as a reservoir for rain or for watering during our torrid summers. The magnolias will thrive best in a somewhat acid soil, decayed leaves and humus being their best fertilizer. They heartily dislike having their roots disturbed, so the less transplanting the better. Move them if you must, in early spring when the roots are most active and will heal over rapidly if injured.

Magnolias are plants of wide characteristics; they may be shrubs or may take on the form of a tree, some showing bloom before the leaves develop and others after the trees are fully leafed out. The fragrance of the flowers varies. Some are delightfully sweet, others more pungent, while still others have no odor at all.

One fault of this family is that the withering flowers brown and hang on too long, taking away the general freshness of the other blossoms, but even so, the magnolias are one of the finest ornaments the garden can have.

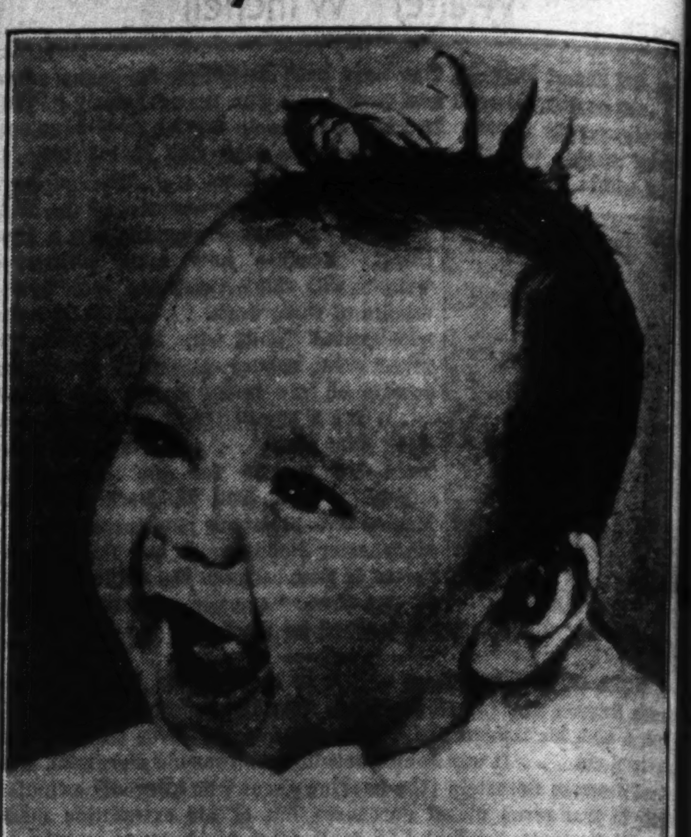
Mash sweet potatoes and season with salt and butter. Fill orange cases with the mashed sweet potatoes and top with a marshmallow. Bake in a 375-degree oven until the potatoes are thoroughly heated and the marshmallows toasted. Especially to serve with roast pork.

Baby Garments



By Margaret Suydam

WHEN you are in the first fine flutter of receiving beribboned bonnets, tiny zephyr sweaters and fluffy pink blankets, you don't often stop to think that in time each little garment will present a cleaning problem all its own. But by the time you are ready to leave the hospital's antiseptic halls with your own miniature contribution to the human race entirely in your hands, you are weighed down with the awful importance of germs and sterilization. The great outside is a vast universe of menacing bacteria waiting to snatch your treasure from you the first moment you relax the sterile standards of the hospital staff.

You arrive home in a frenzy of sanitation. You are all set to boil everything in the house, including any one who may suggest that you're taking the thing a bit too strenuously. However, as the child seems to grow and thrive in spite of your occasional imperfections, the bacteriological bogies lose their hold. But you are no sooner free of them than you are faced with such practical problems in textile chemistry as how to get liver soup out of a tiny sweater and what to do about the little spitter-upper's combination of regurgitated milk and spinach on a silk sacque. Though you're a veteran of many adult washings, the baby may still put you in a laundry quandary.

Diapers are the first and biggest problem. Boiled they must be, the doctors insist, or your poor baby may suffer red, chapped skin; so though, in the modern laundry, the boiler has been as extinct as the Dodo bird, you'll need a boiler now. That is, unless you've decided in favor of one of the commercial diaper services which knows all about the diaper situation and will take it right out of your hands, bringing you sterilized diapers wrapped in cellophane twice a week. Your baby doesn't even have to own any diapers of her own. The service will deliver your baby's favorite kind and a special white enamel container in which you'll find a small deodorizer and a large canvas bag. Your responsibilities are simplified. Diapers are rinsed and wrung out in clear water after using and dropped into this canvas bag. You needn't think of them again until the day the white uniformed driver comes to take them to the laundry and leaves a freshly sterilized supply. The weekly cost of the service depends upon the number of diapers you use and, in some cases, on the type of diaper supplied.

IF you prefer to launder your baby's own, it really isn't so much of a trick once you become organized, and whether they are washed "out" or "in," the covered container for used diapers is essential. The step-on refuse can adequately answers the purpose. Lifting the lid with the foot and dropping the diaper in, is an efficiency operation that saves the young mother's back. You'll want a new can dedicated to the baby's use, of course, and since delphinium blue has come into vogue, you're sure of finding a can of a color suitable for the nursery. Inset pails for the containers come in both galvanized and enamel ware (the latter costs a few cents more but some mothers prefer it because it seems more sanitary). The boiling process can be done in the pails, too. Or you may be interested in a utensil which a group of young mothers of my acquaintance have adopted and call a "non-boil-over combinet." It is a 10-quart enamel pail with a wide flared edge and deep fitting channel into which sets a rounded cover. This cover allows the water to boil and bubble under it without being forced up. If the water does boil out, there is still the deep channel and the flared edge to help prevent the overflow that puts out the gas flame, leaving a busy mother and helpless infant exposed to the dangers of escaping gas. Keep an eye on that flame always!

Baby schedules being what they are, you'll probably find that it is easier to do your laundry early in the morning. After the preliminary cold rinse and a washing in lukewarm water, when there are stains to be removed put the intimate little garments to boil for from 10 to 20 minutes in cold water and chipped mild white soap or soap flakes. (Take good care to use a mild soap. The baby's skin is very delicate and a strong soap is almost a sure irritant.)

THE first rinse after the hot wash should be a hot one. Cold water rinsing hardens soap in the mesh of the fabric and makes it more difficult to remove. Three or four rinses are advisable. The washing machine does this easily for you, if you have one. If you haven't, one of the vacuum-cup hand washers is a great help in sloshing the water through clothes in order to loosen the soap particles. Always lift clothes out of the rinse water before draining the latter off. Otherwise clothes act as a strainer, catching the soap that has just been loosened, the soap you're trying to get rid of. This is a wise precaution in all rinsing and is especially important in washing tiny woolens, the fine fibers of which are pockets for particles.

Drying in the sun is always preferable but when that isn't possible you can dry babies' clothes anywhere in the house that you like except in the baby's own room. The nursery, definitely, is not the place for such a performance. Anyone knows that clothes dry more rapidly outside the house on a windy day, but few people remember that their electric fan will serve the same purpose, indoors. Fan drying is quick drying without the evils of radiator drying. Don't use the radiator for drying baby clothes—particularly not if they're fashioned of silks, synthetic fibers and woolens. You will find it convenient to own at least a few of the thin, quick-drying diapers just in case your supply should run short some day. Remember, that there are paper ones.

With a baby in the house there are shirts and nightgowns to launder, daily; bands (if you use them); slips and dresses, sheets and pad and towels! You may have each in the singular if you're singularly lucky, but more than likely there will be two, of a kind, at least. A new mother, anticipating the "blessed event," seldom realizes what a deluge of soap and water she is in for.

Moulded Salads

THE approach of warmer weather stimulates an interest in moulded salads which may be used as the basis of a luncheon or supper party. Here is a suggestion:

Ham mousse is as delicious on a warm day as the name indicates. To prepare it soak one tablespoon of gelatin in one-fourth cup of cold water. Melt one and a half tablespoons of butter and add to it an equal amount of flour. Stir the two until well blended. Then add one cup of milk and seasoning which should include a little Worcestershire sauce. Cook mixture exclusive of gelatin over a hot fire until thickened, stirring constantly. Add the dissolved gelatine and cool. Then fold in two cups of chopped or minced ham, two tablespoons of chopped green pepper and one cup of cream. The mixture should be poured into a ring mould and placed in the refrigerator to chill.

NEW YORK, April 24.

THE news that Gene Fowler, the epic word painter and greatest of living connoisseurs of fatuities, is giving up his lease on Hollywood fame and coming East to live again, will frighten a number of persons, but most of all will cause dismay among collectors and amateurs of ribald ballad lore.

Few of Fowler's lyric devisings appear in printed form, and it is doubtful if Prof. George Lyman Kittredge, of Harvard, the foremost authority on the English ballad, is acquainted with many of them, but they circulate by the thousands of copies among newspapermen and business executives throughout the land, mimeographed and typed in duplicate and forwarded with brief executive memos: "Have you seen Fowler's latest?"

The two most recent folk studies from his typewriter are signed with the by-line "Ned Gymp" and entitled, respectively, "Evolution Comes to Tennessee" and "The Face on the Clover Club Floor," the latter being the stirring chronicle of an encounter between P. Bruno Nessbaum, a leading juvenile, and Director Igor Stufflefritz in a celebrated Hollywood gin palace.

FOWLER CAN dash off a ballad on the drop of the proverbial hat, cloistering himself in his office in the Twentieth Century-Fox executive building, with nothing but Nunnally Johnson and a half case of Old Isle of Sky Mountain Dew for inspiration, and come out a few hours later with an imperishable masterpiece ready for posterity and his own private mailing list.

New Yorkers with complete Fowler libraries include Stanley Walker and Irving Hoffman, and Prof. Kittredge would do well to get in touch with them. Fowler's first success as a balladier was achieved some years ago, when, while on the staff of "The Denver Post," working for Bonfils and Tammen, he was asked to address the Denver Medical Association. He did it in verse, and the resulting success was so tumultuous that he has been building folk poems of the American people ever since.

Other famous verses concern the Rev. J. Frank Norris, of Texas, and the California heiress who suffered a surgical setback. Fowler's friends are afraid that if he foresakes the inspiring atmosphere of Hollywood he will write no more ballads.

● THE SPORT of cockfighting, established in the American tradition many decades before George Washington maintained his own roosts of fighting birds, continues unabated in the vicinage of New York, despite legislation and the frowns of the fussy animalarians.

You'd be surprised at the names of important metropolitan figures and sportsmen nationally famous in other fields who carry on the traditions of the cockpit and keep on the pay rolls of their Long Island and Westchester estates expert trainers for the breeding of Yellow Pyles, White Doms and other approved strains of battling birds.

—o-o—

Only a fortnight ago the Nassau County police raided a seemingly deserted barn on Merrick road at Wantagh and hustled 50 or so enthusiasts off to court, where they paid nominal fines before hurrying elsewhere to continue their week-end main. What the police didn't know and what would have grieved the self-appointed censors who believe cockfighting to be cruel, was that the reason for the slight attendance at the raided pit was the staging of a much more important main over in Jersey the same night.

● EVERY SATURDAY night, fighting with conventional inch and a quarter gaffs, under the conventions of New York State cocking rules, there is a main or series of hack fights (single encounters) somewhere in Westchester, on Long Island or in the Oranges. Wealthy enthusiasts, with their trainers and birds, often make safari up to Troy, which is the acknowledged fighting center of the State. A patent portable fighting pit, with walls two feet high, that folds up like a bridge table, replaces the staked-up boards of tradition, but is about the only modern touch.

The time and place of a meeting are made known to the cocking fraternity by charts, mysterious symbols and word-of-mouth directions, and strangers have to be strongly vouched for by an established aficionado.

Since most of the money that changes hands at a main is in the form of side bets laid after each encounter begins, it is almost impossible to estimate how much may change hands, but some estimate of the sums potentially involved may be made from the report of John O'Reilly, an expert in the field, that at a recent meet he attended in Texas one of the judges, in addition to a Colt's frontier-model .45 on each hip, carried a woman's handbag, containing $100,000 cash, on a cord around his neck.

SHERMAN BILLINGSLEY last week bought $3000 worth of metal ash trays for the Stork, in a novel and fetching design, and remarked that they would all disappear within two days, but it was worth it for advertising. . . . They did, and it was.

"I'VE ALWAYS WANTED TO WRITE A BOOK, BUT I'VE BEEN MARRIED TO HENRY SO LONG, I'M AFRAID IT WOULD BE MORBID."

We could write a book about both dresses—and still be ecstatic over them. The great chic of the resigned wife arises from an utterly new arrangement of gathers meeting over a braided cord in the bodice. The cord emerges in back as a girdle, winding picturesquely round the waist again. Her interested listener wears this season's beloved sheer, one with endearing individuality due to pastel-hued flowers appliqued 'round V neck and straight on down the skirt which divides at the hem for little inverted kick-pleats.

THE LAST WORD—LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

THE only real writer in your Sunday section, whose stuff is fit for male consumption, is George Jean Nathan. He really has something to say and knows how to say it. Yet Sunday after Sunday goes by and there is no sign of him. Why don't you do something about it? A. J. K.

Sorry, but Mr. Nathan is independent, won't be rushed. We have printed everything of his that could be extracted from his agents; intend to keep on trying.

Dear Editor:

Why do you print trash like the Gypsy Rose Lee interview, puffing up a burlesque queen, when there are so many worthwhile women in the world who deserve the publicity. I'll bet that if a writer came into your office with a story about Maud Slye of the University of Chicago, who has spent her life fighting cancer, he would be turned down. It is people like you who have made actresses the idols of our young. MOTHER.

Interview with great Prof. Maud Slye appeared in Post-Dispatch Daily Magazine March 30, 1937.

Dear Editor:

Virginia Irwin writes some very interesting articles as long as she doesn't try to tell us all about love, marriage, etc. When she gets into that field she makes me very tired, because she is ignorant and her condescending view toward us poor, dull wives is that of a typical smart-aleck career woman. WIFE.

Dear Editor:

More power to Virginia Irwin, who has unmasked more false alarms in trousers than any other single agency in St. Louis. She knows what she is talking about. THREE SMART GIRLS.

Dear Editor:

Can't something be done with this Irwin woman who keeps trying to make life miserable for the men? I'm tired of my wife picking up the Sunday paper and saying, "Well, here's something that hits the nail right on the head —." Then she quotes from the crackpot opinions of this venomous dame. Is she a sourpuss old maid? Has she indigestion?

Help! HENPECKED HENRY.

Miss Irwin, no old maid, has no indigestion, swears she envies many a dull wife.

Dear Editor:

You did a great injustice to defenseless animals when you printed that story by Mary Cambridge telling how treacherous and unreliable cats are. Cats are the finest pets that any person—particularly a woman—can have. You must have some personal grudge against cats. CAT LOVER.

This is one of dozens of letters. Article referred to, "I Hate Cats." Still ready to print defense of kitty but so far no such article has appeared. Have no personal yen against cats, except the one that sings out back of our garage, each midnight.

Dear Editor:

I skip the Winchells, etc., in the front part of your magazine but the things on your home page are the best I have ever seen in any newspaper. I especially like the fine recipes and the gardening information. Keep it up. MRS. R.

Dear Editor:

Mr. Niemeyer's stories about the movie stars are always excellent but they are not always in your Sunday paper. Sometimes, far too many times, he is back on some other page with a very short and tiresome article. Why do you persist in doing this? JOAN.

We don't persist, at all. Mr. Niemeyer persists in having some time to enjoy his California ranch, eat ice-cream, play bridge with the movie crowd.

Dear Editor:

There seems to be no escape from Elsie Robinson. I read her braying column in the daily paper, stopped it and now I find her in the Sunday magazine. Why a paper as generally good as the Post-Dispatch would print this loud and vulgar column is beyond me. MERE MAN.

Mere Man must be voice of minority. Elsie Robinson's column was left out some weeks back. Result: telephone calls and letters, demanding that it be restored.

Dear Editor:

The only good things in your Sunday magazine are Girl About Town, Angelo Patri, Dr. Clendening and Lucius Beebe. The rest of it is flap-doodle. MRS. K.

Some Problems That Confront Older Persons

Many Are Inclined to Get Discontented and "Out of Sorts."

By

Logan Clendening, M. D.

IN her book called "Guiding Your Life" Dr. Josephine Jackson considers some of the problems which confront older people.

In middle age, when many of the responsibilities of life have been taken away, people are sometimes inclined to become discontented. They are "out of sorts" all day long. One woman said "I am not like myself any more." She felt sick all over. Every time she would complain she would be advised to go to a doctor. In the course of time she had X-rays of every part of her body, reports on examination of her blood and of her other excretions, tracings of her heart and respiration and blood pressure.

With all of them there was just a little something wrong because she was a middle-aged woman, but that wasn't what was the matter with her. Like Othello, her occupation was gone. Her children had grown up. Some changes had occurred in the glands all over her body; the sap wasn't flowing quite as rapidly.

For women of this kind, Dr. Jackson has words of advice: One is a balanced diet with a predominance of fruits and vegetables as time goes on. Second, don't let any nervous habit grow on you, such as "feeling your feelings" or noticing any little nervous sensations; they will soon be forgotton if you ignore them. Third, go on with the job of setting your children an example of an unselfish woman who is willing to meet life unafraid. In thinking of your families you will save yourself.

ANOTHER TYPE of experience, which is fundamentally the same thing, is a woman who writes as follows:

"I wonder if you could offer any advice to a woman of 48, mother of five grown children and grandmother of two babies?

"I am so lazy! I keep writing schedules for my work and plans for my garden, but I peter out before I do more than get my men folk off to work in the morning. I do my washing and ironing all through the week and accomplish little, just rousing to clear up and get dinner for their home coming at night."

Women like this are apt to get the idea that there is something physically the matter with them. Of course, it is well enough to have an examination to prove whether there is, but fundamentally the trouble is psychological. She should humor herself a little. It is perfectly natural, after a useful, busy life, that she should feel let down. Give in to it. Take some rest. A man of this type needs a hobby and so does a woman. In the course of time, the tides of life will flow back and a feeling of health will be restored.

Doctors are more and more coming to the realization that these cases must be treated psychologically. Even if there is some organic disease present, the primary treatment should be psychology.

Gooseberry Pie

Three cups gooseberries
One cup sugar
One and one-fourth cups water
Five tablespoons cornstarch
Two egg yolks
Five tablespoons sugar
One-half teaspoon lemon juice.

Add the water and one cup sugar to gooseberries. Cook until berries are soft; add cornstarch, moistened in a little water. Cook in double boiler until thick, stirring frequently. Add yolks of eggs, beaten slighty, with one tablespoon sugar. Cook for five minutes. Cool, pour into baked pastry shell. Cover with meringue made with egg whites, four tablespoons sugar and lemon juice. Brown in moderate oven 15 to 20 minutes. Makes one nine-inch pie.

Lemon Sauce

A lemon sauce adds to the appeal of many puddings and is quickly made according to the following recipe: One cup water, two tablespoons lemon juice, two tablespoons sugar and one teaspon corn starch. Mix the cornstarch and sugar with a little cold water then stir into the rest of the water and bring to the boiling point. Let the mixture boil five minutes and add the fruit juice. Cool before serving.

Baked Parsnips

Many persons who insist that they do not like parsnips are forced to change their opinion after tasting the baked variety. To prepare the vegetable wash and scape five of medium size, split lengthwise and steam until tender. Place in a baking dish and add melted butter, brown sugar to taste and a sprinkling of fine bread crumbs. Bake about 15 minutes.

graphs starting with a baby snapshot, a proclamation by the Mayor of Westbrook, Me., declaring a half-holiday when Vallee's first motion picture opened in nearby Portland, and a street sign for the Rue Vallee in Paris. It wasn't named after Rudy at all, but an admirer thought Mrs. Diven would like to have it anyhow and she certainly did.

Vallee's office has dark paneled walls and a thick rug. On his mahogany desk are a Florentine leather writing set, an onyx ink stand and a fantastic gilt telephone. "That was the telephone company's idea," says Mrs. Diven, icily. "Rudy thinks it's awfully theatrical." Nearby are a combination radio and phonograph, and a huge cabinet bar. There are three books on a small table—"Let's Get What We Want" and "Psychology of Achievement," both by Walter B. Pitkin, whom Rudy regards as a significant thinker, according to Mrs. Diven, and Max Beerbohm's "Zuleika Dobson" which someone told him would make a good radio skit. Behind Vallee's chair is a squat brass object which looks like a spittoon but is really a humidifier. His nose and throat are delicate, and he has to be careful to avoid hoarseness. It would disappoint thousands. In a little anteroom, opposite a bookshelf containing the complete Harvard Classics, stands a crimson washstand with chromium fittings. Mrs. Diven says that Rudy has a weakness for colored plumbing.

HE VISITS only rarely the office of the Rudy Vallee Units Corporation, which is at 515 Madison avenue in the suite occupied by Hyman Bushel, a shrewd ex-magistrate who handles Rudy's lawsuits and investments. Bushel is secretary-treasurer of the corporation. Lester D. Laden, a classmate of Rudy's at Yale, is his manager and booking agent. The two played together back in 1923 in an orchestra called Curt Peters and his Yale Collegians. Laden played the piano, Rudy the saxophone, and Peters the banjo. Peters' full name is Curtis Arnoux Peters, and he is better known today as a cartoonist who signs his work, Peter Arno. Among the units managed by the corporation are: A tap dancer, a mimic, a monologuist, a team of modernistic dancers, an eight-man eight-woman band, and a one-man band. Rudy received $15,400 for his services as president of the corporation in 1934.

He owns two homes, one in Beverly Hills which he bought during his marriage with Fay Webb and never occupied, the other a lodge on Lake Kezar in Maine. He likes to entertain at the lodge, and is an extremely solicitous host. A guest reported a couple of years ago that each visitor received a rule book which contained these admonitions: "Kindly put things back where you found them. Don't overeat, overdrink or over-exercise. Don't throw large pieces of paper or bulky things into the toilets. The supreme secret of vacationing is relaxation. Don't talk shop. At least twice a day, stretch. Do it in bed, or on the beach. Stretch as a cat does, but stretch. Try to take a siesta every afternoon and stay limp when you are awake whenever possible."

These remarkably explicit instructions bear out the theory that Rudy has had neither time nor inclination to cultivate a sense of humor. He is not above a bit of horseplay with his men, and he often smiles at gags in radio scripts, but he takes himself earnestly, almost grimly. "After all," he protested gravely in 1930, when he was generally regarded as Valentino incarnate, "Buddy Rogers does more damage to female hearts in one embrace with his heroine than I do in 20 broadcasts." Once a girl reporter called on him in his dressing room at the Brooklyn Paramount. Rudy finished giving some orders to his English valet and then sat down elegantly beside the girl on his cot. It collapsed promptly and both of them sprawled on the floor. Rudy did not manage a smile as they scrambled to their feet.

He has always ben like that. Even in his boyhood pictures he looks as if he were about to burst into something soulful like To Be Your Slave Is What I Crave. Musically he started out on the drums and progressed to the clarinet. He had several of these in his early 'teens, but he sold them all to silverplate a saxophone, which had become his passionate and lasting love. He jerked sodas in his father's drugstore in Westbrook, but he gave that up because "there was little romance in waiting on customers who were slow in making up their minds and were cross and disagreeable at times," as he points out in his autobiography, "Vagabond Dreams Come True," a volume which, he feels, contains "a lot of common-sense philosophy that has appealed to thousands of people." For a couple of months he served at the Naval Training School at Newport, Rhode Island, but he was discharged when it was learned he was only 15 years old.

JUDY STARR . . . OFTEN HEARD ON VALLEE'S PROGRAM.

The next few months he cranked a motion picture machine in Westbrook's only theater. He cranked it so carefully that the manager, W. C. Benson, gave him a letter of recommendation which he preserves fondly: "This is to certify that Hubert Vallee has worked for me in the capacity of assistant operator and has performed his duties in a thoroughly satisfactory manner. I consider him qualified for a like position in any theater."

—o-o—

RUDY was already corresponding with recognized musicians on the more academic aspect of saxophone technique by the time he entered the University of Maine. He stayed one year, joining the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, whose ring he still wears. He transferred to Yale because he wanted greater opportunity for engagements with dance orchestras. He majored in Spanish, passed all his courses but had to drop back a year because he spent nine months playing in London. He was graduated in 1927 and was so proud of the achievement that his publishers had a hard time dissuading him from reproducing the diploma in his autobiography. He embarked on the more public phase of his career when he and his seven-man orchestra opened at the Heigh-Ho Club, 35 East Fifty-third street, in February, 1928. He sang occasional choruses, using a megaphone to amplify his voice which was and still is weak. There were almost nightly broadcasts from the club because in those days radio stations had a hard time filling schedules, and soon thousands of homes became conscious, in one way or another, of the Vallee voice. Not until his fan mail started pouring in did he realize his crooning could be a tangible asset. As late as Aug. 2, 1927, he had written to a prominent orchestra leader in applying for a job as a saxophonist: "I sing a bit in places where close contact between the guests and your men happens."

Even his most uncompromising critics grant he has been generous with friends from early days. Three of the original seven Connecticut Yankees are still with him. Most of the others have gone on to better jobs. One of them contracted a serious illness five years or so ago. He has been in a hospital ever since, but Rudy is still paying him his salary of $75 a week.

When Richard Himber left him to establish his own orchestra office, Rudy gave him $1500 to get started. A few months later, when things weren't going so well, he gave him another $1000. "He'd never take it back," says Himber. "When he thinks someone can make good, he wants his judgment justified. That's all he's interested in."

Years ago, while he was still at Yale, Rudy used to play the saxophone occasionally in Sleepy Hall's orchestra, then especially popular at college dances. Once he had a chance for a New York night club job and he asked Hall for a letter of recommendation. "Sorry, Rudy," said Hall, "you're swell for college work, but you wouldn't go in New York." Rudy didn't get the letter, but today Sleepy Hall's orchestra is one of those managed by the Vallee Corporation.

His friends think he isn't likely to try marriage again for some time. Neither of his previous ventures proved particularly successful. The first was in 1928, with Mrs. Leonia Cauchois McCoy, a coffee heiress, and it lasted three months. The second, with Fay Webb, lasted from 1931 to last year, but most of that time was given over to bombastic court events. The last name to be linked with his is that of Judy Stewart, a show girl, who was nearly fired from her show in Boston last year for cutting a performance to spend the week-end at the Vallee lodge in Maine.

No new developments have been reported in recent months.

He sees a lot of his family, and both his father, one of Maine's more enthusiastic Elks, and his sister, who is married and teaches piano back in Westbrook, visit him frequently. His brother, William, who does some writing for radio and magazines, used to live with him, but a few months ago he took an apartment of his own. He and Rudy are good friends, but Rudy doesn't think he works hard enough.

Rudy's life is saddened by only one thing: Although he has anglicized the pronunciation of his name to Valley, he is distressed every time he sees it printed without an accent aigue over the first e. It really should be that way, but Rudy finds it written correctly so rarely that he has just about given up hope. He is still scrupulous about it himself, however.

Paradise Tarts

Six apples
Three-fourths cup sugar
Two cups water
One-fourth cup red cinnamon candies
One tablespoon lemon juice
Four tablespoons orange juice
One cup heavy cream, whipped.

Wash, pare and core apples. Combine sugar, water and cinnamon candies in saucepan; add apples and simmer until tender, turning often and being careful to keep them whole. Remove apples and add fruit juices. Boil to a thick syrup. Cut apples in half crosswise and place in baked tart shells. Cut side down. Pour one tablespoon syrup over each apple. Garnish with whipped cream. Makes 12 tarts.

Wallpaper Unity

In preparing a room which is cut up with several windows and door openings, a better effect of unity will be obtained if the ceiling is papered the same as the side walls. Choose a small patterned paper such as a dot or leaf design in a cheerful color scheme and adopt the allover theme. The room will look larger and be more pleasing than if the ceiling contrasted in design and color with the side walls.

Trial And Error

By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD, April 24.

MILTON BERLE of comic renown makes his screen bow in a protracted and difficult scene of "New Faces of 1937." He has a long speech to make, and Jerome Cowan and Patricia Wilder and Parkyakarkus also have speeches, all of them have to be perfectly timed.

It is Berle's first day on the set. This is the office of a penniless promotion enterprise. The phone rings, and Berle, Cowan and Patricia each seize an instrument and as one voice say, "Hello." Parkyakarkus, lounging idly, says: "You need a bass."

There follows rapid-fire talk. The caller is a collection agency, and there is business of passing the buck, Wilder to Cowan to Berle. If it isn't fast it isn't funny.

By the fourth take the buck gets passed as far as Berle, who leaps in with this: "This hecklin's got to stop. Remember—but I didn't."

And that's the cue for another trial, from the beginning. Parkyakarkus, meanwhile, has changed his line to "You need a baritone," so there'll be no mistaking the musical implication. Finally, after, I think, eight attempts, the scene is perfect.

But the camera has run out of film!

Watched Ann Sothern and Richard Lane rehearse a hectic chase scene for "There Goes My Girl." Lane's the managing editor, Ann his star reporter who wants to quit and marry Gene Raymond. Lane has had thugs kidnap Ann and she, after clawing and scratching her way clear, has come to Lane's office for vengeance.

'Round and 'round his desk they go, he arguing while fleeing. It is a very spirited scene, but the highlight—to me—came when Ann, simulating mounting rage, shrieked at Lane: "Contract! Contract! Is there anything in my contract that gives you the right of KIDNIPPING?"

Yes, they took that one over, too.

● SHIRLEY TEMPLE, Queen of the Moppets, will be 8 years old on April 23. She makes three movies a year, indorses commercial products, and she rakes in an income variously estimated from $500,000 to nearly a million a year.

Shirley is tops in box-office popularity among all the movie stars. Other producers know that Darryl Zanuck of Twentieth Century has that prize package neatly sewed up, but—

Hollywood is looking for another Shirley. Just any little girl will do—any little girl who can take the collective heart of the movie fans and do what Shirley did with it.

—o-o—

With Shirley rapidly outgrowing the moppet class, the quest is keener than ever. Hollywood wants another little girl to whom it can pay a fortune, to whom advertisers will gladly pay another fortune for her name. (Shirley reputedly paid her income tax with proceeds of "tie-ups" with little girls' clothing, books, dolls, jewelry, gloves, a pen-and-pencil set —in all about two dozen articles.)

—o-o—

● SHIRLEY WAS only three when she started, inconspicuously, in comedy shorts. She was making $50 a week, and $75 when she made her first feature, "Stand Up and Cheer." The studio lent her to Paramount for $1000 a week for "Little Miss Marker." Then Mrs. Temple demanded the "big money."

There are potential Temples in Hollywood now, making $50 to $75, or little more.

On Shirley's home lot, in "One Mile From Heaven," appears Joan Carol, 5, blue-eyed blonde. She sings, dances, rattles off her lines like a veteran. She's already had two contracts, with Mary Pickford-Jesse Lasky and with B. P. Schulberg, but they had no work for her. Her first real role will tell the tale.

At R-K-O they talk about Derry Deane, not quite 5, who sings, dances, plays the violin. From Detroit, she conducted the baby orchestra at the San Diego Exposition, was spotted there for "New Faces of 1937." In the same film is Patsy Lee Parsons, brunette, almost 6, from Parkersburg, W. Va. Sings, dances, recites.

EMANUEL COHEN has Nancy Clancy, 4, from Bridgeport, Conn. She's the baby star of "Midnight Madonna." ("I saw Shirley on purpose one day," she says. "Dwove by her yard and she was playing, she was!" Now she wants to see Mae West "on purpose"—meaning in person.)

Hal Roach has used "Baby Patsy"—Patty Doris Dittemore May from Gosport, Ind.—in only one picture, but he's training her. She's just 3—the age at which Shirley started. You'll see her in "Our Gang" comedies.

Any of these, or none, may ascend the Temple throne in the future. But if they do, it'll be by quick popular demand. Juanita Quigley (Metro's Baby Jane), and Sybil Jason, Warnerite, apparently have no pretensions. Audiences may think they're "adorable," but they don't, with one large voice, insist on more.

That's what it takes to tell a producer he has "another Temple."

MARGO

BUDDING TALENT of the STAGE

BY

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN

TO THE follower of things theatrical who is just a bit surfeited with reading the industriously regular critical testimonials to the virtuosity of our solidly established actors and actresses, a consideration of some of the newer young talents in our theater may provide, with the due accompaniment of a pre-season mint julep or two, a measure of welcome refreshment. So much of the writing on the theater devotes itself to a re-celebration of the past glories of present histrionic oldsters of both sexes that it seems to have little time or space left in which to look down the road and shout, "Look, the rest of the parade is coming!" Its predominant principle is to follow the elephants and, in the following, to overlook those other items in the parade which, while not bulking so large in the immediate vision, promise some color to parades in the coming years.

In a survey of these fresh young talents one fact emerges and that fact is that, while there is considerable evidence of promise in some of the young women, there is much less definitely to be discovered in the young men. The reason is more or less obvious. The average young woman who enters the theater with the ambition to be an actress is pretty generally very sincere and serious about it. It is her single aim to develop her resources and finally to amount to something. But with the average young man it is different.

There are exceptions, to be sure, but the majority of these young men seem to view the stage as a soft way to make a living and as unction to personal vanity rather than as a serious and sober career. There is also a second point. The average young actress comes to the theater with something of an education, whereas the average young actor comes with little or nothing. An education, true enough, is not necessarily essential to a sound acting career, but it isn't a bad thing to have in the background. If it isn't of value once the curtain goes up, it is certainly of some value before —and in many ways.

LET us take a look, first, at the more promising new girls disclosed during the season. Perhaps topping the list is Katherine Locke, who, upon her appearance in Arthur Kober's "Having Wonderful Time," set all the critical boys to sucha loud whooping up of her gifts that the poor girl confessed afterwards she lost four pounds out of sheer bedazzlement and the coincidental inability to eat. Just how much credit must go to Marc Connelly, her director, I have no means of knowing, although I suspect it is a great deal.

Nevertheless, this Locke girl indicates in herself many of the tones of a valuable acting instrument. Not especially good-looking — though far from unpersonable — she has that peculiar blend of sensitivity and soft-smoke audience permeation that one seldom discovers in our stage young women and, in addition, she is fortunate in possessing a highly agreeable voice which doesn't give out the impression of being less her own than some diction teacher's as is frequently the case. There is also in her that air of seeming humility and withdrawn grace which never fails to win an audience. With proper handling, she should make a name for herself.

Helen Trenholme, who has appeared in quick succession under Gilbert Miller's wing in "Victoria Regina," "The Country Wife" and, most recently, "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," in addition to considerable comeliness reveals an unusually charming stage comportment and a speaking voice that, besides being clear, unforced and natural, has in it that odd little touch of breathless eagerness that is often so captivating to the audience ear. She seems, too, to have a definite stage surety which she is able adroitly and winningly to conceal in a kind of quasi-incertitude and hesitation.

In the ill-fated "Plumes in the Dust," under Arthur Hopkins' direction, there was a very young Italian girl, Amelia Romano, who made a subsequent appearance in a negligible role in "Marching Song." Although it is an old theatrical saying that it is next to impossible for any actor or actress to be a complete failure in any death-bed scene and although it was such a scene that the girl acted in the Hopkins exhibit, she played it, along with one or two others, with such compelling effect and such tender beauty that her audience was moved as nothing or no one else in the play even remotely contrived to move it. In the case of such youngsters, it is always impossible to make sound predictions; so many of them, after a first-rate beginning, quickly peter out. But there seems to be something to this particular youngster.

Louise Platt, who a season ago promised in "A Room in Red and White" to amount to something, sadly disappointed everyone this year in "Spring Dance" and "Promise." She is apparently suffering from Katharine Hepburn poisoning which, considering Miss Hepburn's acting as revealed by the stage, is by way of being a fairly mortal dose.

The Mexican girl, Margo, who came to happy notice last season in "Winterset," gave renewed evidence this year in "The Masque of Kings" of an emotional equipment and vein of flame uncommon in our younger women players.

SO much for the girls. Now for the newcomers among the boys. In "Johnny Johnson," a young man named Russel Collins gave a fairly good account of himself and disclosed, together with a likable stage personality, a potential sense of both comedy and dramatic acting that may some day develop into something worth-while. Another young Group Theater actor, Jules Garfield, seen in both "Johnny Johnson" and "Having Wonderful Time," similarly appears to have some ability in both comedy and dramatic acting. In the direction of polite juvenile roles, the screen actor, Philip Reed, displayed in "Reflected Glory" a sufficient measure of looks, immaculate trousers, physical ease, hair polish and speaking grace. Most of theater reviewers on the dailies did not condescend to so much as mention him, doubtless because of their prejudice against movie actors in general, which wasn't as it should be if we hope to encourage polite comedy acting on the part of Americans and not sit back and just import it, when needed, from England. Reed, true enough, is no great shakes—most certainly not thus far—but, movie actor or not, he at least deserves his chance.

A minor actor named Frederick Tozere, of whom I had never before heard, struck me in the New York W P A production of "It Can't Happen Here" as having some possibilities for future secondary dramatic roles. He has a firm stage presence; he reads quite well; he has a nice sense of timing; and, unless his performance in this one play was a fluke, he seems to be able to make himself felt on the stage. There was also a minor actor of whom I had never heard in the dreadful dish of hash called "In the Bag"—his name Charles La Torre—who showed symptoms of a talent for comedy character acting. It may be that these boys have been at it in the sticks for a long time; I wouldn't know about that. I had not seen them on the New York stage before this season and they seemed fairly good to me.

But all these boys even at their best do not suggest the promise of some of the new girls. And, of course, neither the boys nor the girls will eventually succeed in getting very far unless they are fortunate enough to find good roles in good plays, which isn't any too easy.

BEAUTY PREPAREDNESS .·.

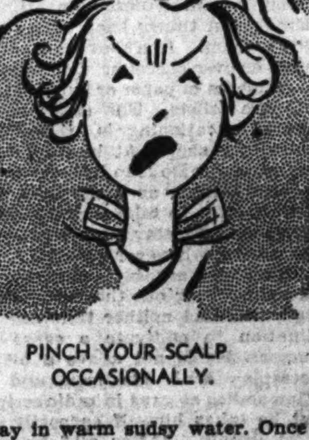
By Alice Wade Robinson

LET'S talk today about Beauty Preparedness. Spring has made us eager for warm days in the sun. There's the rub! Have you thrown off winter's scars as you've discarded winter togs? Are you unflinchingly ready to pass muster—beauteously speaking — alike with admirer and rival? If you aren't, it's time to begin. Take hair as a starting point:

Hair, so doctor's say, is ordinarily as healthy as the person it adorns. To the trained eye hair betrays many patient's ills: nervousness, worry, dietary faults, insomnia. And, the primary cause of illness removed, hair reflects the return of mental ease and physical well-being. But even a healthy head of hair needs care.

Blondes should shampoo their hair once a week. Brunettes may allow 10 days to two weeks between shampoos. Most redheads follow the blondes' example. Since hair and nails are of similar physical structure, hair benefits from the polishing by friction—just as nails do. Brushing gives that polish; it burnishes, cleanses, encourages hair elasticity.

You certainly would not think of going to bed with a dirty face. Make it equally unthinkable to toss your day-soiled hair upon the pillow. Give your hair its try for beauty—but with a clean brush. So, after each third stroke (of the one hundred strokes which you should give your hair each day) cleanse the brush on a towel or with cleansing tissues.



PINCH YOUR SCALP OCCASIONALLY.

Wash brush and comb every day in warm sudsy water. Once a week give both a sterlizing bath—or every day if you have dandruff—in a formalin solution: a teaspoonful of formalin to a pint of water. Lastly, brush hair not scalp. Brush the scalp gently to exercise it, if you like, but do not brush so vigorously that you scratch or irritate it.

But speaking of the scalp reminds me—pinch it occasionally. A few well dotted pinches every night will do the scalp a world of good.

Try it now with thumb and forefinger. Any luck? Were you able to grasp a sizeable bit between those two fingers? If you were—our congratulations! You must have a good crop of hair—let's hope it's fresh, shining, becomingly coiffed. You're in a fair way to defeating old age too; pinching is an excellent preventive of baldness and hoariness. A good thing to remember to do.

The movies have doubtless done much to encourage American women to try for attractive hair. There's scarcely a cinema actress whose hair-do has not started some sort of hair style vogue.

But of all film stars, I know of none whose hair so expresses her personality as does Claudett Colbert's. Her hair's alive. It's vibrant, mercurial in its flashing response to high lights. It seems magically to reflect her moods. It's as fascinating to watch as is the play of emotions across her face. Notice Miss Colbert's hair the next time you see her on the screen. You'll see then what I mean. You may come away—I hope you do —resolute to make, not the most, but the best of the hair you have.

I shan't mix you up on shampooing. You have your own hair-laundering practices. But do not rub bar soap on your hair. Make your own shampoo lotion; or use one of the prepared kinds: a soapless oil, or a tar, olive oil, coconut oil or castile liquid shampoo. Let me remind you to rinse, rinse, rinse until each lurking soap sud has gone down drain. Dry your hair quickly—in the sun or through friction with warmed linen towels. That's all.

All in all, I can't promise you a halo if you're as good as gold in caring for your hair. But I can promise its simulation.

Habits Grow Upon Children With Rapidity

Parents Are Advised to Watch for Changes in Juveniles.

By Angelo Patri

HAVE you looked at the children lately? How long ago did you take time to look intently at them and really see them? Six weeks? Six years? When? Children grow steadily and silently. The changes come so slowly and so unobtrusively that there is a different child in the house before you are aware.

Habits grow upon children swiftly. You hadn't noticed that Ronny's manners were so bad until he failed to greet your guest last evening and humiliated you by his boorish behavior. You hadn't noticed that twitch in Caroline's face until the teacher mentioned it and said that it had been there for some time. The crib must have shrunk, or something, for you hadn't noticed that the baby had outgrown it and was making a fuss every bedtime now, because he wanted a bed like a big boy's bed. "Funny how children change overnight."

They don't. They change over a period of days and weeks and months. We don't see them change. We keep seeing them as we saw them at first, helpless little things in their mother's arms. Worse than that, we keep right on treating them as if they were still the helpless infants of our first acquaintance instead of children, youths, young people in need of outlets for personal feelings, tastes and desires.

ONE GIRL of 18 is still getting the $1 a month allowance that her father gave her when she entered sixth grade in elementary school, though she is a senior high school girl ready for college. Father has not noticed that daughter has been growing.

Another girl in her 20's is not allowed to receive the boys in her home because father and mother have not realized that daughter has grown into a young woman with a young woman's interest, needs and desires.

There is a boy whose arms stick out of his sleeves like broom handles, whose legs stretch far beyond the short expanse of his knickers. He hates to be seen and begs for longies, but father and mother see him as the little boy in rompers, not as the fledgling, half feathered.

—o-o—

THERE IS a little boy and a little girl in their early teens who never have been away from home for a single day since they were born into it. They never have gone anywhere without father or mother beside them. They are longing to go with the Scouts and the Campfires, longing to go to camp as other boys and girls do, but father and mother see their babies still, not the eager youngsters rarin' to go on their own.

If this did not injure the children, mar their growth and strain their affection for home and parents, it would not matter. But it does all this and much more. It breeds rebellion, and that leads to mental illness, bad behavior, sad mistakes.

Try to keep pace with the growth of the children and see them more as they are rather than as the dream children of long ago. It is hard to part with a clinging child, but it is much harder to have to face a rebellious, angry, broken-hearted child. Let the children grow up even though every gain tugs at your heart strings. By letting them go you keep them. That is the only way you ever will be able to keep them.

Garment Decorations

Flowers that once were considered the favorites haven't much chance for popularity this year because so many oddities and unusual blossoms are decorating frocks, hats and coats. Violets, for example, must be white to be sufficiently unusual to attract much attention. Tiger lilies, water lilies, tulips and poppies are among the springtime leaders, while apple blossoms are a fad of the moment.

CALLING ALL DOGS

By Albert Payson Terhune

FOR the third time I learn of a dog which disproves a statement of mine, made earlier in this series. I said:

"A dog, tied to a post, winds himself up by moving always in the same direction. Did you ever see a dog with sense enough to reverse that motion and unwind himself? No? Neither did I."

Mrs. H. M. R. of Rockville, Ind., writes me:

"My Llewellyn setter winds his chain around the post in the back yard. When he finds help is not forthcoming, he retraces his path around the post. I have watched from a window and seen him do it so many times. Is this an unusual feat?"

Yes, it IS an "unusual feat." In my somewhat long and careful study of dogs, I never have seen it performed? Perhaps I know less about dog nature than I pretend to. (Sometimes I begin to fear this may be true.) Or perhaps, out of millions of readers, it is not unnatural that three of them should own such accomplished dogs.

Still, I maintain that of the many hundred dogs owned by myself and by acquaintances of mine, never have I known of one which could reason out such a problem.

—o-o—

SUPPOSE a schoolchild has learned only a few rudiments of French, and has learned them very incompletely because he has not been taught well enough or long enough. Suppose his teacher should rattle off a string of fast-spoken French sentences to him, and expect him to answer just as fluently. Would you call the child sullenly obstinate and cranky, for failing to reply?

You think, perhaps, that you have taught your dog what a certain command means. You give him that command at a time when he doesn't expect to hear it, or when he is excited or busy. Or you voice it in a tone which confuses him. He does not obey.

So you call him cranky and obstinate, or brand him as a fool. Many canines have an odd knowledge of their owner's opinion of them. Your dog sees you are angry at him, disappointed in him, that you have a contempt for his supposed lack of intelligence.

This doesn't help matters. It wouldn't help your child in mastering French if he knew his teacher had that same idea about him.

Make very certain the fault is the dog's, not yours, before condemning him. Start all over, along a saner and kindlier line, to teach him the command's meaning.

Summer Hammock

If you are looking ahead to lazy summer days, there's a tempting type of hammock which has appeared in the shops. It is a folding swing which can be set up anywhere from the porch to the river bank. A metal framework holds the hammock sturdily and permits as much motion as though it were fastened to the old oak trees. The hammock itself is made of a canvas to withstand hard usage.

Black Silk Coat

The black silk coat, mentioned several months ago as a probable style revival, has come to town. A smartly dressed young woman wore a reefer type while dining in a hotel restaurant a few nights ago. It was made of black grosgrain and her square pillbox was of matching fabric. Two gardenias, one on either coat lapel, were striking accents, indicating that the wearer has been studying accessory trends.

Perfume

Tiny bottles of perfume which may be purchased with pin money are dressed up as handsomely as the expensive versions. Newcomers that illustrate the trend have novelty stoppers and caps designed to represent the scents. One is shaped like a white gardenia, another is lilac in color and in shape while an oriental flair is suggested by an enameled top shaped like a pagoda.

SOAPY WATER DOESN'T WORK
It takes more than a pail of soapy water to properly clean a rug.
You can't get rid of the dirt that's deep down in the fibres and you can't rinse out all of the soapy suds.
The caustic action of the soap and alkaline weakens the fibres causing a "dry rot," streaks the surface and attracts dirt.
For a nominal sum a master carpet cleaner will thoroughly clean and renew the bright color and design of your floor coverings.

ver King, 28 Years Old, es Like Country Gentle-n, Rex Back Occasionally.

By H. H. Niemeyer

HOLLYWOOD, April 24.

VERY now and then you hear something about some one-time movie star, long out of r with the fans, who is stag- a more or less hopeless come- by playing as an extra. But at abou' those dumb heroes the silent days who thrilled the ids and the old folks alike with eir acting which at times ed more human—frequently was, too— than that of the o-legged stars? Where are Rin-Tin and Tillie, the cat who to fish for gold fish with her , and Silver King and Rex who billed as "King of wild es" and who was so tame t he would eat out of any- y's hand, and Tom Mix's fa- us Tony?

Well, as every boy and girl cus- er of the cinemas of 20 years knows Rin-Tin-Tin went to his reward a long time ago and llie just disappeared from the dios one night and was never en, on or off the screen, from t time to this. There have been actors, or actresses, since but er one who could really play part.

The horses, though, the greatest tors of them all, are, for the most rt, still alive and, at ripe old es, alive and kicking.

How did we happen to get start- on this checking up on the one e four-footed favorites? It hap- ned like this. Over on the Colum- a studio lot the other day we re watching Richard Dix mak- a picture called "Once a Hero." The story concerns "Toby," a horse hich Dix rides. "Toby," incidental- is played by a young pinto, new screen work, called Dice. Dix es his money and "Toby" is sold own the river to become a work orse for a Japanese gardener. ong about Reel Eight there is grand reunion.

E talked the matter over with Dix—Dice, a three-year-old, being too young to remember e old timers—and Richard got so terested in finding out about hat had happened to the Tobys in al life that work on the picture actically came to a standstill. He d the idea that, since the life of e average horse is about 16 or 18 ars, all of the old timers must ave gone the way of all horse- esh, good or bad, long since. But rancis Walker, who plays a cow- y in "Once a Hero" and who ains animals for the films, cut with the statement that most of e veterans are still alive.

Silver King, he pointed out, is w 28 and is owned by a Los ngeles physician who bought him st to retire him to a Santa Moni- ranch. Silver King, by the way, as no unknown from the sticks hen he sprung into fame as the of the late Fred Thompson's rly Westerns. Thompson bought m in Ireland where the animal d been a famous hunter.

"The reason the star horses of pictures have lived so long," id Walker, "is because they had tle work to do and received the ry best of care. Silver King was first equine star to have a tand-in' who did all of the dan- rous work like leaping off high ffs and things like that. As a atter of fact he had three. Count d Ranger, the first two, have en dead for years but Silver King enjoying the life of Riley on r. Atkins' ranch. The third 'stand- was a fine hors. named Weath- vane who vent totally blind. He still alive and is being tenderly red for an another ranch."

ND Tony, the famous dark bay who made Tom Mix a celebrity of the screen and circus, is still live at 25. Tom still owns him but s retired the animal who is tak- g things easy on the range. Tony mes of no fancy stock. He was tched to a Hollywood milk-wagon hen Mix saw him and bought him r $50. But he had super-intelli- ence.

Rex, the "King of Wild Horses" one of the old timers who still orks in the films occasionally. Past 20 years of age, he is pretty spry and shows real excitement whenever he sees a camera point- g his way.

Another over-20-year-old veteran who refuses to let any four-legged Robert Taylor push him out of the melight is Silver, Buck Jones' cele- rated roping horse. Buck still des him in pictures but has a tand-in" for the dangerous se- ences.

So, if you have wondered what ecame of Tony and the rest of m here is your answer. Were re no lady stars, no actresses, ong the famous horses of the ovies? Perhaps, but the records n't show any. The famous ones all Taylors and Gables and rol Flynns.

Philadelphia Orchestra at Auditorium

THE Philadelphia Orchestra, now making a 13,000-mile tour of the United States and Canada, will present a program at the Auditorium Opera House tomorrow night, under auspices of the Civic Music League. The principal selection is Beethoven's Symphony No. 7, in A Major.

Eugene Ormandy, formerly with the Minneapolis Symphony, will conduct. The orchestra carries two conductors with it, Ormandy and Jose Iturbi, noted Spanish pianist, and its occasional head is Leopold Stokowski, who held the baton at its concert here last spring, but who has since acted mainly in a supervisory capacity.

The first half of the program includes two Bach arrangements, Prelude and Fugue in F minor, and the chorale, "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," and the Beethoven symphony. Both arrangements were made by Lucien Cailliet, clarinetist and bass clarinetist with the orchestra and an authority on Bach.

After the intermission, the orchestra will play Three Poems on Traditional Aramaic and Hebraic Themes by Harl McDonald and Stravinsky's "Fire Bird" Suite. McDonald's Three Poems will have their first presentation in St. Louis.

McDonald, professor of composition and director of the choral organizations at the University of Pennsylvania, has written many symphonic selections for the Philadelphia Orchestra, among them its musical signature used on weekly radio programs, and has directed vocal choruses in their appearances with the orchestra.

His Three Poems were first presented in Philadelphia at concerts last Dec. 18 and 19, with Ormandy conducting. McDonald was represented on a St. Louis Symphony program in the past season by the "Rhumba" from his "Rhumba" Symphony.

The Beethoven Seventh Symphony was last played in St. Louis on the opening programs of the St. Louis orchestra for the 1935-36 season. Considered by the composer as one of his very best creations and highly personal in its character, it dates from 1813. Selections from the "Fire Bird" Suite have long been popular with St. Louis orchestra patrons.

THE LAMASERY OF SHANGRI-LA, AS PICTURED IN FRANK CAPRA'S ROADSHOW FILM, "LOST HORIZON," AT THE AMERICAN

Winchell and Bernie in Joint Success

By Colvin McPherson

THE top musical of many moons is in town. Not since "Broadway Melody of 1936" has there been such an all-round batch of amusement as "Wake Up and Live," which competes with April and baseball at the Fox Theater.

Here is no mere novelty, with Walter Winchell and Ben Bernie written around a popular title. Here is no mere flash in the broadcast, but as slick a musical comedy as Hollywood has sent out. And since "Wake Up and Live" comes from the studio that produced "One in a Million," "On the Avenue," "Sing, Baby Sing" and like entertainments, it is beginning to seem that one Darryl F. Zanuck, formerly of Wahoo, Neb. (no kidding!) is Florenz Ziegfeld's successor as showman. The Zanuck musicals, directed by Sidney Lanfield, have what it takes.

Winchell and Bernie appear as themselves in "Wake Up and Live," or at least as they seem to be in the public eye, a pair of feuding radio headliners. By an accident in the control room of a broadcasting chain, a timid lad, Jack Haley, sings his own solo to Bernie's orchestral accompaniment, becomes a sensation but is unknown to everybody, most of all to himself. The Winchell - Bernie face - slapping settles down to a talent hunt, a race to find the "Phantom Troubadour," with Haley himself, a guide in Radio Center, yelling "Yoicks!" It's a good situation to begin with and gets funnier as it's followed through, right up to the finish.

Meanwhile, the picture patrons are permitted to snoop around Radio Center, seeing and hearing a great deal without being bothered. Music, comedy, private conversation, everything of the sort. Sharing in the events are Patsy Kelly as Winchell's "Girl Friday" and Haley's sister, Walter Catlett as a rascally agent, Ned Sparks as Winchell's keyhole assistant, Alice Faye as a radio singer who first tumbles to the secret, Grace Bradley as Haley's former vaudeville partner.

In the finale, doing a Spanish dance and tripping all over her train, is that immensely comic Joan Davis who has helped make several Class B pictures tolerable recently. Her sequence is what used to be called a panic, but probably now would be called a civil war. Specialties keep coming on and they don't get in each other's way. The Condos Brothers, the Brewster Twins, Leah Ray, and dabs of comedy by George Givot, Etienne Girardot and Barnett Parker.

Haley has most of the success. Whether appearing to suffer from "mike fright" at his first audition, whether taking the oath to live up to his guide's uniform, selling Winchell gags to Bernie, hitch-hiking or crooning, he steps forward for orchids.

Songs of the show, "There's a Lull in My Life," "Never In a Million Years," "Ooh, but I'm Happy" and "Wake Up and Live" are already becoming successes on the radio. A final production number that puts all the colossal affairs of recent date into gathering dusk brings "Wake Up and Live" to its joyful conclusion. In fact, this-here show, as Mr. Bernie might say, is such a stunner that it permits no critic's complaint. It is such a musical as to make radicals forget their causes and conservatives forget the radicals.

For those who have time for two shows, the Fox serves "Clarence." Booth Tarkington's comedy of years ago has been modernized, but shows plainly that the country's sense of humor does change over the years. Roscoe Karns plays the ex-soldier who knows a little bit about everything and a great deal about beetles.

Personal Property.

"THE MAN IN POSSESSION" in which Robert Montgomery and Irene Purcell appeared in 1931, has been remembered for six years as a shining comedy experience of the early talkie era. In fact, Montgomery has never been shown off to more genial advantage. It is under these handicaps that the new generation of Jean Harlow and Robert Taylor appears in the same play, at Loew's, under the title of "Personal Property."

Keeping as close to the original as possible, "Personal Property" is also enjoyable. Perhaps it does not have the luster of the Montgomery-Purcell romance (Miss Purcell is now in a play in New York, in case you ask), but it possesses the marked advantage of having more pungent lines than are written by quaking dialoguists today, as they look out the corners of their eyes at censorship. Things have gotten by in "Personal Property," clever things that make no difference in morals but do pep up the film.

Against an English setting, the skeleton idea is to have the black sheep of the family, a nice black sheep with curly hair, run off with his brother's fiancee. Rather, like Mary's little sheep, he follows her home one day and stays over night, by convenience of some legal legerdemain. Next evening he plays butler as the girl has his family in for dinner. Good, strong humor and W. S. Van Dyke's direction keeps it.

Taylor is not as well suited to the role as the irresponsible Mr. Montgomery but works diligently at it. Miss Harlow, varying back toward platinum hair—perhaps it's blondette now, but at least it's the most changeable thing in her screen character—is a different type of girl from Miss Purcell, but authentic. She keeps her manners when necessary, explodes at the right moments, mellows with romance to Taylor and P. S., marries the guy.

Loew's program introduces a new Mickey Mouse character, a tiny elephant on whom Pluto plays a mean trick. A 20-minute short subject, "Servant of the People," presents some of the situations which faced the framers of the Constitution. Interesting enough for its length, it suggests that some studio might do a public service and make much money by filming a feature picture based on the same material, sometime when the Supreme Court question is settled and there isn't an election on.

The Woman I Love.

PAUL MUNI, whose Academy prize talents have been pretty well exploited lately, will probably want to hide out for a private blush or two as his latest film, "The Woman I Love," gets around the country. His role, of a French aviator in the World War, is so colorless that almost anybody could have played it.

Since he keeps the beard he wore as Louis Pasteur and will wear as Emile Zola, the reaction of most moviegoers to the part, I think, will be to recall Louis Pasteur and to wonder what that old fellow is doing fooling around with airplanes. Muni, however, is supposed to be young enough to be the husband of Miriam Hopkins and to become very disturbed when Louis Hayward starts making love to her.

Only one question burns from the first to the last reel and it is the old one, "How shall we tell your husband?" What happens to France in its tangle with Germany seems of little consequence and the air scenes are filmed with the lassitude of a transcontinental hop. In and around the air base there is drinking, jesting and singing of "Madelon" to the accompaniment of a tinny piano. It has never occurred to me before, but perhaps that was Germany's reason for going next door—to quiet the noise.

The American sector of the conflict is revealed in "23½ Hours Leave," the other Ambassador take-a-chance. It has some of the boys make a bet about a loud-mouthed Sergeant eating breakfast with the General. Our hero, of course, puts himself over with the General's daughter, outwits the other doughboys and when the General dines at dawn, dines with him.

Thunder in the City.

EDWARD G. ROBINSON has taken a flyer in British films and at the Missouri we see him promoting a big stock scheme right under the noses of the lions on the Nelson column. The idea is that something extraordinary should happen if a big American promoter, like Robinson, tried to apply his methods in the sedate British Isles. Robert Sherwood, the eminent and clever American playwright, helped write the screen play so it crackles a little now and then but makes no great noise in the film world.

"Secret Valley" shows Richard Arlen as an honest rancher with a mortgage about to spring at him. A little girl from the East goes to Reno to divorce her racketeer husband, boards at the Arlen ranch and lifts the mortgage. Another reversal of form is found at the Missouri this week in the Popeye cartoon. Popeye gives Bluto the spinach, in order that Bluto will batter him up and send him to the hospital, where Olive Oyl is nurse.

The St. Louis Theater, out of the first-running, plays "Swing High, Swing Low" and "Sea Devils."

Harry Lange Re-Engaged

Harry Lange has been re-engaged for the sixth consecutive year as master of ceremonies of the free entertainment at Forest Park Highlands for the season beginning May 9. He and his "Commanders" will present three different offerings nightly, with a change of program every Sunday afternoon.

Goodness Fills The Hearts on Old Broadway

New Comedies Insist Human Nature Is Not All Vile—"Penny Wise" the Latest.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 24.

THIS spirit of rich good fellowship persists in the theater.

Begun with the fabulously successful "You Can't Take It With You," the theme has coursed through the whole season, enriching "Having Wonderful Time" and "Excursion." Now it finds further and even more abundant expression in "Penny Wise," a newly arrived comedy by Jean Ferguson Black.

This new play isn't as substantial dramatically as any of its predecessors, but it is equally fervent in its insistence that all people are essentially good, and random traces of evil in some of us are, perhaps, more stabilizing than harmful.

Here we have the household of Gordon (no surnames are used), a dramatist as irresistible as a musical comedy tenor. Snugly married to Penny, Gordon yet likes to dally now and then, in the course of which pursuits he has won the undying palship of Tina and Martha. These two relinquished him to Penny upon discovery of her fathomless charm and understanding and, in fact, appoint themselves as vigilantes of a sort to safeguard him against further mischief.

These two ex-sweethearts arrive at Gordon's Connecticut cottage determined to break up a budding romance with Katherine, a play-reader with whom he is planning a summer in Brittany. (Gordon always proposes Brittany to his lighter loves.) No sooner have they set their campaign than who should arrive but Katherine herself, unexpectedly in charge of Penny.

At this point the farcical possibilities of Miss Black's story suggest a great lot of slamming doors and negligeed ladies in full flight about the house, but there is, alas, none of that. Only talk. And more talk.

THE strategem of Tina and Martha is upset somewhat by the announcement of Katherine, who appears to have a little sense, that she doesn't see that Penny has any more right to Gordon than she has. She is willing to listen to reason, of course, but unless Tina and Martha can offer better arguments than "it isn't cricket," well, she'll be off to Brittany with Gordon.

But nothing like that happens. In a third act that really allows the comedy promise of the play to fulfill itself, Penny solves the problem in her own way—nothing original, but in a manner that is winning and persuasive. Penny, it develops, isn't such an idiot as everybody believes, and constant practice in keeping Gordon chained to her own hearth has equipped her to fight against all invaders. Gordon is pleased to remain steadfast.

"Penny wise" is the sort of comedy that frequently come to Broadway when evenings grow warm. It imposes no tax at all on the thought processes, and you can or cannot believe it with equal comfort to yourself. This author is uncommonly lucky in having her title role played by Linda Watkins, a bright comedienne who explores the character for humorous points the author has apparently overlooked.

The other girls of the chaotic household also profit by knowing personations. There is the pert Irene Purcell making the most of Tina, and Mildred Wall's special type of drollery gives delightful sparkle to Martha. Nancy Sheridan makes a lovely and ingratiating Katherine.

Passion Play Film Is Set for May 16

"GOLGOTHA," French-made motion picture based on the Passion Play theme, will be shown at the Shubert Theater, to be reopened for that purpose, the week of May 16, with two performances daily.

The film was made in French Morocco with Robert le Vigan as the Messiah, Jean Gabin as Pilate and Harry Baur as Herod. Others in the cast are Charles Granval, Andre Bacque, Hubert Preller, Lucas Gridoux, Van Daele, Edwige Feuillere and Juliette Verneuil.

The version to be shown here has English dialogue. It was directed by Julien Duvivier and has a musical score by Jacques Ibert. Principal scenes are the triumphal entry of Jesus into Jerusalem, the turmoil in the market-place when Christ drives the merchants from the Temple, the throngs clamoring to Pilate and the sequences dealing with the Crucifixion. Settings reproduce many of the famous structures of Jerusalem.

Coronation Broadcast Set For 3 a. m.

Network Schedules for Covering Ceremony More Complete Than BBC's.

MORE coronation broadcasts have been scheduled by the American networks than by the British Broadcasting Corporation. The NBC alone has broadcast and will put on the air a total of more than 60 programs from England devoted to various aspects of the coronation, which will be the first ever covered by radio, as that of the late George V, 26 years ago, came before broadcasting had materialized.

In addition, there are daily short wave broadcasts by the powerful American auxiliary stations and by the British transmitters at Daventry.

The main coronation broadcast on Wednesday, May 12, will begin at 3 a. m. St. Louis time on all the networks, and is planned to cover every detail of the ceremony, starting when Queen Mary leaves Marlborough House.

The approximate times of principal happenings in the ceremonies are the departure of King George and Queen Mary from Buckingham Palace at 3:30 a. m., their arrival at Westminster Abbey at 4 a. m., the beginning of the two-hour coronation service at 4:15 a. m., the departure of the King and Queen from the Abbey, their arrival at Buckingham Palace and their appearance on the palace balcony at about 8:20 a. m.

It will be the first time a British King, only a few hours after his coronation, has addressed his people in every part of the empire by radio. That part of the ceremonies will come at 1 p. m. The King is to speak into a special microphone in Buckingham Palace, as his father talked to the empire in his Christmas day messages.

It will be the first time that Prime Ministers of the dominions and representatives of other units of the empire can participate from their home lands. They will talk just before the King's address, in a 40-minute program from India, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, with others, including Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, speaking from London.

Wins Opera Role

HELEN TRAUBEL, THE ST. LOUIS SOPRANO AND NBC NETWORK CONCERTS STAR, WHO WILL MAKE HER DEBUT IN THE METROPOLITAN OPERA SPRING SEASON ON MAY 12 IN THE PRINCIPAL FEMININE ROLE IN WALTER DAMROSCH'S OPERA, 'THE MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY.'

STUDIO GOSSIP

ON May 23, James Melton's Saturday Night Party will drop its name and move to the 8 to 9 o'clock period on KSD and the WEAF net. The cast of the show is to remain intact. . . . Tony Wons, once widely known for his Scrapbook and House by the Side of the Road programs, is expected back on a network in October. He has been ill for more than a year, but his condition has improved sufficiently to warrant his physician in approving his broadcasting again.

Because of the sudden illness of J. Anthony Smythe, who plays "Father Barbour," he will be out of KSD's One Man's Family cast for at least a month. He is in a California hospital, but his condition is not regarded as serious. . . .

Bob Hope has been signed as comedian on the Shep Fields programs, starting May 9. There are reports that Frank Parker, the tenor, will leave the Fields show to succeed Lily Pons in Andre Kostelanetz' concerts. . . . George Raft, the movie actor, is being considered for a radio revue. . . . Efforts to entice William Hart from retirement to play the lead in a series based on the life of Jesse James appear to have failed.

William S. Paley, president of the CBS, has engaged Alexander

Chemical Tests Being Made in Case of Brothers Who Succumbed After Meal.

An inquest begun yesterday to determine the cause of the deaths last Friday of Willard Eugene Thurman, 8 years old, and his brother, Bobby Don, 6, who showed symptoms of poisoning, will be continued Tuesday. A chemical analysis of the viscera is being made by pathologists.

Their father, Harry Thurman, a mechanic, who also had been ill at his home, 2241 Woodson road, Overland, left his bed to testify tearfully. Mrs. Thurman, who had controlled her emotions with difficulty, broke down when she shoow her head negatively in answer to a question as to whether she had other children.

Testimony of the parents was that Willard had become ill Tuesday night and was taken to St. Mary's Hospital. He was removed to Isolation Hospital Thursday night when a rash was thought to indicate scarlet fever. He died there at 1:10 a. m. Friday. His brother died about seven hours later at St. Louis Children's Hospital, where he was taken when he was stricken Thursday morning. Their father became ill early Friday.

Lists Dishes Served.

Mrs. Thurman told of the food eaten by the children and other members of the family, going into detail as to dishes served at dinner Tuesday evening. The meal consisted of butter beans, fried bacon, mashed potatoes, lettuce and a dessert of gelatine and bananas. Willard did not eat bacon, she said, and she ate none of the dessert. She experienced some discomfort after the meal, she said. However, five guests suffered no ill effects.

As another possible source of poisoning, Mrs. Thurman related that the younger boy and his father had eaten bologna sausage but she was unable to recall whether the older child had done so. At the Overland School Tuesday, Willard had two bottles of chocolate milk and Bobby, who did not attend school, had had a bottle aat home. The father said he usually drank chocolate mil kat lunch.

Others Not Made Ill.

Mrs. B. F. DeClue of Bonne Terre, Mo., one of the guests Tuesday evening, testified the dinner had not made her or other guests ill. The others were her husband, Mr .and Mrs. Theodore DeClue and Mrs. Frank DeClue ,all of Bonne Terre.

Dr. J. D. Stoelzle, 12 North Central avenue, Clayton, who was called to the Thurman home, had reported the symptoms indicated arsenic or mercury poisoning.

An investigation to determine whether contaminated food caused the deaths, with a view to protecting others from illness which might result fro meating food from the same source, was begun by Dr. Theodore R. Meyer, health commissioner of St. Louis County.

WALSH AND M'MENAMY REMOVED AS EXECUTORS

Consent to Probate Court's Action in Estate of Mrs. Catherine Molloy.

Alphonse J. Walsh and Malcolm McMenamy, officers of the John McMenamy Investment & Real Estate Co., which is seeking reorganization in bankruptcy, were removed as executors of the $8000 estate of Mrs. Catherine Molloy yesterday by Probate Judge Glendy B. Arnold. The Court appointed her son, John P. Molloy, assistant warden of the City Jail, as administrator.

Walsh and McMenamy consented to their removal, filing statements which said they had been ill for several months and unable to manage the estate properly. Both are under bond on embezzlement charges.

The petition for removal of Walsh and McMenamy as executors was filed by Mrs. Molloy's son, who alleged they could not serve properly because the estate's funds were invested in their real estate companies.

FIGHTERS with CRAYON and BRUSH in SPAIN'S CIVIL WAR

Posters Used by the Loyalist Government to Bolster Morale and Impart Information.

NEW YORK.

THE intimate role played by the creative artist in modern society is shown again by the extensive use of pictorial craftsmanship in the Spanish civil war. To rally the fighting spirit, to bolster both civilian and military morale, and to give instructions in health and defense, both sides in the conflict are laying down a veritable barrage of vividly colored and graphically drawn posters. The finest artistic talents of Spain have been enlisted for the purpose.

A collection of handbills and posters used by the loyalist side has just been received by the New York offices of the North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy. These broadsides, issued by the Alliance of Anti-Fascist Intellectuals in Madrid and by the Council of Defense in Barcelona, are being prepared for exhibition in major cities of this country.

Boldness and vigor, both in conception and execution, are the chief characteristics of the posters. The artists have simplified their subjects, have ruled out all extraneous detail, and have made admirable use of mass and color. Their figures are not pretty or idealized, but realistic. Entirely absent are the chorus-man doughboys and movie-star Red Cross nurses so frequently seen in American and British war posters of two decades ago. The influence of the modernist school in art is plain in every design.

The posters reproduced on this page represent some of the varied phases of the Government propaganda effort. At the upper left, a woman member of the militia is depicted with the legend, "Be on guard against Fascism." The letters "U. G. T." on her head-dress stand for Union General de Trabajadores, the General Workers' Union. A militiaman is shown at upper right, his hand outspread in protective ges-

Manhattan's Night Clubs Go COMPLETLY MAD

NEW YORK.

THE weirdest season in the history of the most famous night club belt in the world is drawing to a close with the impresarios of New York-after-dark busy counting the floods of gold that seemingly followed every new innovation. All the old entertainment standards were dumped in convenient alleys as the gay white way, giddy enough in its moments of repression, shattered the remaining restrictions of depression years.

Looking from the topmost platform of the 102-story Empire State Building the "dawn patrol" area stretches away to the north, a ribbon of yellow light extending along Fifty-second street and down Broadway like an inverted "L." Far to the south there is another pool of incandescence—the night clubs of Greenwich Village. These are the night life centers of the city since Harlem has come truckin' down to Broadway.

More money passes through the garish rooms of the two districts than in any similar concentration of resorts on the face of the globe. There are many places where a meal runs to $5—without liquor that is—and others where an evening's entertainment for two averages $25 and often plenty more.

To draw this kind of money from the still reluctant pockets of the night club habitue or curiosity seeker proprietors are trending more and more to the unusual in entertainment. The theory works out like the case of the spinster school teacher who got a terrific thrill out of her first glass of wine. Repeated doses accustomed her to wine and she started on cocktails. From there she progressed until she was sluicing her throat with raw alcohol.

It used to be enough to throw together a collection of orthodox singers and dancers, put them before a band and call the concoction a floor show. Some of the more elaborate places tossed in a line of chorus girls, but that was as far as anybody went. The patrons at first were enthusiastic—then apathetic. After all, quoth the jaded customers, one could hear singing just as good on the radio and Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers could be seen dancing on the screen of a neighborhood theater for 35 cents.

The revenues began to dwindle and the night club operators—shrewd fellows capable of talking the fez off a Turkish rug merchant—made experimental changes. For instance the strip-tease. There was a good old standby. But strip-teasing had become so common every burlesque show had it. So Mario, who runs the peppermint-striped Club Mirador, gave the old undraping a new twist. He found an acrobatic little girl named Alma Bray and taught her to undress while swinging above the heads of his patrons—on a flying trapeze.

Alma created a sensation—to put it mildly. She hung by her feet or her hands, as the case might be, and coyly dropped her brassiere before the breathless onlookers. Of course Alma stopped at the irreducible minimum. There was a big cop who saw to that.

MISS BRAY did all right for a while—she's still doing it—but Mario read a book. It was Sacher-Masoch's "Venus in Furs" and it gave Mario an idea. He had read somewhere that there was a solitary strip-tease artiste in Canada. Mario made plans to import the Canadian stripper, drape her in $10,000 worth of furs and have her do a de luxe strip under the soft lights. He brought her here by plane, dressed her in silver fox and the audience gasped the night Jacqueline Joyce let slide a luxurious cape to reveal the superb chassis.

Other night club operators shuddered with envy. In Greenwich Village astute Jimmy Kelly loudly announced that the strip-tease was as dead as the Cambodian ape man and said he would replace it by an as yet unnamed stunt. Mary Barton, who came from below the Mason-Dixon line with a Southern exposure act, was the subject. She merely threw the entire strip-tease business into reverse, starting in the almost nude and ending up completely clothed. The customers yelled viva Jimmy.

But that wasn't the last word on strip-tease. The vivas reached the ears of the operators of El Toreador, a Spanish night club, and they cabled Havana for some undress artistes, pronto. Three darkly Latin young ladies arrived in due time and now the Spanish colony can gaze upon the unadorned flesh of three luscious young compatriots.

So much for strip tease. The Terrace Restaurant of the Hotel New Yorker took counsel and decided that undressing within its sacrosanct confines would never do. A few blocks away, while the directors pondered, the crowds were pouring into Madison Square Garden and a great light shone upon them. If boxing, they argued, could draw 18,000 to the Garden how potent must be its box office power.

The patrons of this swank nightery, prepared for almost anything, were startled to find a boxing ring covering part of the dance floor one night. Young amateurs from the A. A. U. trotted out in the pink of condition and put on some of the best fighting seen in town. Debutantes leaped to their feet with excited screams of "knock him out," "kill him" and other phrases appropriate to the weaker sex. After the boxing, dancing was resumed and the satisfied management hinted they would bring in a troupe of lady wrestlers later on.

Meanwhile, their roving eyes alighted on Nelson's Boxing Cats. This act had played at the Steel Pier in Atlantic City for a long time, but had never been used by night clubs. At the appointed hour the feline fisticuffs began and met the warm response only the new seems sure to evoke these days.

Then the throbbing rhythms of voodoo began pulsing through the night life centers. From darkest Haiti came a group of weird dancers. They called themselves the Yanego VooDoo dancers and their gyrations were like nothing New York had ever seen before. They have been at Le Mirage (the name of the restaurant, unfortunately not the check) for three months and apparently some never tire of their strange writhings.

The Harlem Uproar House took up the voodoo strain. It hired a sinuous Negro euphoniously named Congo Bongo and set him to doing a wild, often sensuous dance, mostly solo, but sometimes with a partner. Congo Bongo's dance isn't much to look at in the early show, but as the night fritters away toward morning his native blood gets the best of him and the dance floor fairly sizzles.

ANOTHER expensive night club, the Versailles, wavered between voodoo and animals and finally chose the later. The star of its show is a balancing dog named "Spotty." Using the fingers of his master, Paul Sydell, Spotty goes through a remarkable repertoire.

Restaurant Mayan—another fashionable rendezvous—stole a march on its competitors by retaining David Sturgis, an astrologer. Sturgis' strong forte is reading style suggestions from the stars and he is by way of becoming a society favorite.

The Hotel Piccadilly promptly hired Marka, the palmist. A student of Shinto priests Marka claims to be able to tell all by reading palms.

The Row That Followed a College President's Refusal to Be Baptized Again

But While Dr. Henry Noble Sherwood Stands Pat, the Pastors Who Control the College Funds Are Withholding Much Needed Revenue.

Dr. Henry Noble Sherwood, President of Georgetown (Ky.) College

By F. A. BEHYMER

Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

GEORGETOWN, Kentucky.

THE students of Georgetown College, as they go about their work and play, are troubled. Funds which have been contributed to the college, and which are greatly needed, are withheld. Dr. Henry Noble Sherwood, the president, is under fire over a thing that the students call silly. It is charged that he has not been properly baptized. The charge is made by a group of "stiff-necked pastors," so designated by Carlisle McCandless of Owensboro, editor of The Georgetonian, college paper. They are making public spectacles of themselves, he says as "a quarrelling, haggling group of narrow-minded fanatics." In a "clarion call" to the Baptists of Kentucky he says "the time has come for the awakening of a consciousness of the wrong that is being done Georgetown. The time has come for militant action in its behalf. The students of Georgetown are ready. Are you fighting for us, or against us?"

The Baptist laymen of Kentucky have answered the call. They have organized the Lay Baptist Association of Kentucky to fight the "stiff-necked pastors" and make them surrender the withheld college funds and are reaffirming the sovereignty of individual Baptist churches which they declare has been usurped by the preacher-controlled General Association of Baptists in Kentucky and are asking the 400,000 Baptists of the State to stand with them in the fight.

The "stiff-necked pastors," led by the Rev. J. W. Porter of Lexington, are breathing defiance and standing by their guns, demanding that Dr. Sherwood get himself baptized in the Baptist way or get out. Dr. Sherwood says he has been baptized once and he is not going to be baptized again and he is not going to get out unless the board of trustees of the college, under pressure from the preachers, puts him out, which is not considered likely.

With the issues clearly drawn the Battle of the Baptists rages on the Kentucky front, with Dr. Porter and his cohorts, veterans of many a bitter doctrinal campaign, battering at the gates of Georgetown College, defended by Dr. Sherwood and the students and laymen and some ministers who do not care to be classified with the "stiff-necks." Back of the front line attack on Dr. Sherwood is the greater conflict, gathering volume as the days pass, between the old and the new in Baptist theology, between the fundamentalism of the preachers and the liberalism of the laymen, which the preachers call modernism, shuddering as they speak the word.

When Georgetown College, founded in 1829, with a present year-by-year enrollment of about 500 co-educational students, needed a president in September, 1934, the trustees named Dr. Sherwood on the score of his educational and administrative record. He had been a member of the faculty of the University of Louisville and director of its summer school since 1927 and before that was State Superintendent of Education for Indiana. The question of his baptism as bearing upon his standing as a Baptist received consideration. A committee of five members of the college board was named to interview him. He gave them the history of his baptism. It was true that he had been baptized as a Campbellite, but he was an ordained Baptist minister and had served as pastor of two Baptist churches in Wisconsin, after which he returned to the Baptist Church in Franklin, Ind., later transferring to Louisville and being admitted to membership in the Highland Baptist Church there. The members of the committee were satisfied and so reported to the trustees, who elected him unanimously, except that there was one blank ballot. After he became president of the college he was accepted as a member of the Georgetown Baptist Church.

Preachers not members of the Board of Trustees, horrified at the idea of a college president who had had only alien baptism, began a campaign which presently broke into full cry. At the meeting of the General Association of Kentucky Baptists in November of that year it was one of the major matters considered.

THE association is composed of ministerial and lay "messengers," mostly ministerial from the individual Baptist churches but having no authority over them or over the educational and other denominational institutions. With Dr. Porter leading the onslaught, it was charged that Dr. Sherwood was not, properly speaking, a Baptist, since he had been baptized in the Campbellite Church. Resolutions were adopted calling upon the State Board of Missions to impound contributions from the churches for the college unless Dr. Sherwood was rebaptized or resigned.

On the question of baptism opponents of the action contended then and have contended since that under Baptist principles and usages only one body has to be satisfied and that is the church that elects a person to membership. Dr. Sherwood had been elected to membership in a Baptist church and it was held that there was no higher authority to question it. On the question of the funds which the Board of Missions proceeded to impound, at the instigation of the General Association, it was contended that the contributions had been designated for the college by the givers, and that when the State Board of Missions withheld these funds it was guilty, as now declared by the Laymen's Association, of "a plain breach of trust, indefensible either in law or morals."

Under the attack Dr. Sherwood, enjoying the confidence and support of the trustees, kept tranquil, but the impounding of the contributions was a severe blow, as the college was passing through a period of financial difficulty. There were times when, for want of the withheld funds, the members of the faculty could not be paid. Efforts to have the money released were without success. It was too bad that the teachers could not be paid but that was not as bad as having a man at the head of the college who had not been properly baptized. He could get the money if he would have himself rebaptized or resign, but he refused to do either and the trustees and faculty members and students supported him in his refusal.

Historic Giddings Hall which dominates the campus.

Dr. J. W. Porter of Lexington, leader of the opposition to Georgetown College.

Dr. Sherwood's administration, in addition to the financial strain to which it was subjected by the withholding of the contributions, was beset by the constant disapproval of those who thought that he needed more baptism. Finding that they were making little progress in that, they were on the alert to find other causes of complaint. Teachers felt their academic freedom threatened.

It was a situation that was widely recognized as inimical to the college. Even in the General Association that was recognized. Dr. Porter and his followers, finding themselves making no progress toward the unseating of Dr. Sherwood, brought about the appointment of a committee, composed of members of the association and members of the Kentucky Baptist Education Society and the Baptist Education Society of Kentucky, which have direct relations with the college, to try to settle the controversy.

The committee, reporting to the Board of Trustees, recommended the agreeable dissolution of the Kentucky Baptist Education Society and simplification of the procedure of electing trustees, and urging the trustees to make known "whether they propose to conduct the institution as independent of the wishes and support of the General Association of Baptists in Kentucky, or whether it shall represent the doctrines and policy of Kentucky Baptists as expressed by the General Association of Baptists in Kentucky."

No decision on the report was reached by the Board of Trustees prior to the ensuing meeting of the General Association. The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees reported to the General Association the progress that had been made and proceeded: "We feel that Kentucky Baptists will rejoice in the many favorable conditions of the college at the present time, and take this opportunity to report them to you."

The leaders of the opposition did not care to rejoice over the many favorable conditions of the college, and the reading of the report was stopped by an objection at that point, but the full report was later printed and circulated. The favorable conditions related to improving the financial situation, the religious activities that were being promoted, a gain of 35 per cent in enrollment, new departments in instruction and establishment of a health service.

Continued harassment by the leaders of the General Association through last year provoked the editorial call in the Georgetonian last November for Kentucky Baptists to rally to the defense of the college.

The first response to the call came the following week, when resolutions were adopted by all the leading organisations of Georgetown—the Chamber of Commerce, the Women's Association, the Woman's Club, the Rotary Club, the Parent-Teacher Association, the American Legion and others—indorsing Dr. Sherwood and urging his retention as president. These were published in the Georgetown News under the caption: "Georgetown Wants and Needs Sherwood."

THE next thing that happened was an uprising of Baptist laymen which culminated from the organisation, simultaneously with the Georgetown agitation, of the Committee of Kentucky Baptist Laymen, formed to defend Georgetown College and its president from attacks made within the Baptist denomination, with M. B. McChesney of Frankfort as chairman, and Thomas C. Fisher of Louisville as secretary. The committee, at a meeting in Louisville, issued a call for a meeting at the Kentucky Hotel in Louisville on December 28, "to take steps to protect and preserve Georgetown College and to recover money unwarrantedly withheld which has been given and designated for the college."

The meeting was held, attended by more than 100 of the leading Baptist laymen of the state, and the committee was expanded into the Association of Lay Baptists of Kentucky, with a membership to consist of men and women members of Baptist churches of the state "who are not on the payroll of any church, association, board or other ancillary body of the denomination." Lee Kirkpatrick of Paris was elected president and Farris Sampson of Louisville, secretary.

Mr. McChesney, who presided at the meeting, reported that a petition for the release of the impounded funds, sent to the General Association, had been ignored at its November meeting, and outlined the situation, which he said involved the question whether the General Association should be permitted to set itself up as an ecclesiastical hierarchy and undertake to dictate to boards and other organizations over which it has no control.

Unless the impounded funds are released, he said, Baptists throughout the state should be asked to send their contributions direct to the college. "If all remedies fail," he said, "as a last resort a court of equity might be asked to release the impounded funds."

He hoped the Board of Trustees of the college would stand firm and not be stampeded at the behest of a group "whose conduct indicates that they are more interested in hair-splitting doctrinal questions than they are in Christian education."

IN THE articles of association the objects and purposes of the organization are stated to be "to promote and maintain the wholesomeness of the Christian spirit in the Baptist denomination in Kentucky; to hearten, encourage and evoke the highest available spiritual and moral leadership in the denomination; to protect, preserve in peace and perpetuate Georgetown College as a Baptist educational institution; to promote and guard Christian education in general; and constantly and courageously to assert the primacy of moral and spiritual consideration in all our organized Baptist councils."

The administration of President Sherwood was indorsed and the motives and methods of his opponents were impugned in a resolution calling upon all Kentucky Baptists "to rise to a higher moral and spiritual level in all their living and in all their thinking; to rededicate themselves to high service in the loving spirit of Christ and to reject unworthy counsel or leadership; to think constructively and in terms of peace instead of divisiveness; and to demand a high and unquestionable moral and spiritual quality in all our leadership and in all our organization work."

The next battle in the war will be when the Board of Trustees meets in June to decide whether Dr. Sherwood shall be reappointed. The laymen will memorialize the Baptists of the State and expect to bring to bear upon the trustees the influence of the liberal element of the churches who do not want the president removed. Dr. Porter says it is not expected that Dr. Sherwood will have himself baptized again, because that would be interpreted as prompted only by his desire to hold the presidency. The alternative upon which his opponent will press in his removal.

Dr. Sherwood, sitting tight, does not take to heart his personal fortunes involved in the fight, but he is troubled over the strife between the old and the new in theology and education. "Here we are," he says, "in the great struggle of on-going civilization, trying to lead our students in the search for truth and the attainment of fine manhood and womanhood, and we have to beat down the resistance of a reactionary group of church politicians who are heedless of the humanities, assert their opinions as final and authoritative, and are bound to rule or ruin." With a tired sigh he said: "They say I am a gentleman and a scholar and an administrator, but not a Baptist!"

THE GOOD KING'S DECISION

THE CHARACTERS

KING NEPTUNE—The ruler of the seas.
HIPPERTY HOP—A frog who is homesick for Hickory Hollow.
WILLIE WEB-FOOT—A duck who is also homesick.

King Neptune is puzzled. Here, before him, stand two strange creatures from Hickory Hollow who have abused his hospitality. Some time ago they were found on the beach by Commodore Shell-Back and changed into salt water breathers and brought to him. And Neptune, learning that they were from a strange inland country, thought that he would be doing a great favor by giving them the run of his court. He was even going to do them the added favor of changing their legs into fish tails, so they would be able to move about more easily. Then suddenly the strangers ran away. The good King could never understand this, nor could he understand why they joined the wild sailor crew in Davy Jones' Locker, or why they turned Tempest loose—Tempest, the monster who causes the storms on the oceans. But now he has them once more before him. And we see Hipperty and Willie trying to explain as

THE PLAY BEGINS

HIPPERTY HOP—We didn't want our legs changed into fish tails. I had a fish tail when I was a tadpole, and I like having legs much better.

WILLIE WEB-FOOT—That's why we ran away. And then Davy Jones caught us and made us join his crew.

HIPPERTY HOP—And when we saw you put Tempest in that cave, we thought you were making him get out of your ocean. We thought if we used the same door we could get back to Hickory Hollow.

KING NEPTUNE—Hm-m-m. So you wanted to go home? I see it all now. Well, Commodore Shell-Back is standing guard over Tempest now. (Then he calls for Wiggle Waggle and a large fish swims up to Neptune. Neptune whispers to the fish and the fish swims over to Hipperty and Willie.)

WILLIE WAGGLE—My King has decided to send you home. Get on my back. I will take you up to the beach. (And Hipperty and Willie thank the kind King. And getting on the big fish's back, they joyfully start for dear old Hickory Hollow.)

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

High Lights on Unusual Personalities

JEFF DAVIS
MILDRED HALL

KING of the HOBOES

THE hoboes' convention, concluded here last week, roused enough curiosity to give citizens a chance to reach their own conclusions. Presumably St. Louis knows what distinguishes 'boes from such less lted gentlemen of the road as vags, mps and loafs; fuzzy tails, ring s and gandy dancers; bindlestiffs, s and boolies. If not, the distinction is this: Hoboes are willing to rk; the others won't or can't. They fer from sedentary citizens ("home ards," they call them) by having a eater capacity to get bored and a ser capacity to sit still. But they ll work, and many of them have a aft; most have several.

But it simply isn't possible to understand about hoboes without forming a clearer picture of Jeff Davis than he's ever found time to form about himself. Davis was just "coronated" Jeff I, King (for life) of the Hoboes of the World. He claims 1,145,000 subjects in the United States, England, Canada and Germany. Considering His Majesty's bookkeeping methods it would be too much to expect this census to be accurate, but there are probably enough subjects in his four principalities to outnumber the populations claimed by Zog of Albania, Jikme of Bhutan or Ghazi of Iraq. Liechtenstein, Luxembourg and Monaco together never had even a third as many subjects as Jeff lists. So even if his census is hopelessly muddled, his claims aren't a great deal sillier than those of a good many bona fide royalties.

Jeff will be 56 in August and has been King (though not for life) for about 25 years. When his nondescript gray cap is pulled down over his bald pate and only the hairs of his sideburns reveal how gray he's getting, he looks considerably younger. His face has an air of mixed skepticism, benevolence and sharpness that is hard to analyze. His narrowed, fast blinking eyes crinkle merrily at the corners. His thin lips and sharp chin have a Cockney look to them, but a rich patter of pungent 100 per cent American pours through them continually. His talk is a medley of every American patois—a high pitched stacatto that is indescribably picturesque. "Pitcherskew," Jeff would say. He's a short man. His clothes are baggy and overstuffed with cards and papers. In his tie he wears a stickpin—a gold pick and shovel set with a small white diamond. He says he found the gold while prospecting in Alaska and bought the diamond in the market at Kimberley. Jeff has been around.

His father was Joseph E. Davis, a tipsy reporter who once worked on a St. Louis morning paper. He died last month, aged 90. His mother, Maria, still lives at Cincinnati. They were divorced years ago and Jeff ran away at the age of 10, after three years of schooling. But he still considers his birthplace, Cincinnati, his home port. In 1900 he married there a girl he met beside a fountain in Washington Park and they have a couple of rooms ($9 a month) in the Camp Washington industrial district, which Mrs. Davis occupies pretty regularly, Jeff on occasion. They have two children in their thirties and two grandchildren.

Jeff has a hard time explaining why he has always been a hobo. Presumably the habit grew on him, evolving from a mixed up boyhood, and an oversized heart. He began life on his own as a newsboy in the Bowery and sacrificed this opportunity to become a water boy in Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show. He says he was 13 when he accompanied the show to England for the Diamond Jubilee, but must have lost track of his years there, for the jubilee was in '97, the year Jeff was 16. He jumped the show in London, became the protege and valet of a wealthy tea merchant named Wilkinson and traveled with him to France, Spain and Australia. Jeff doesn't remember Wilkinson's first name, although that worthy man paid his passage from Melbourne to San Francisco when Jeff got homesick.

Only one thing about Jeff is dead certain. He is one of the most talented press agents of his age. Names and place names jump out of him with the jerky inconsequence of quotations from a ticker. But that he isn't a fake is attested by bushels of letters from distinguished men and volumes of newspaper clippings, all looking as though they'd been preserved on the pavement of a transcontinental highway or in the interior of a potato peeler.

He began his, so to speak, consecutive career, as a Socialist book seller in Chicago. Always, apparently, he regarded himself as a hobo. He was early drawn to the cause of James Eads How, the "millionaire hobo." Or, if one prefers to accept Jeff's word, he told How, a member of a prominent St. Louis family, what the word hobo really means. It's a hard story to dig out, but one thing is certain. Jeff isn't a Socialist now. He inveighs against "radicalism" of any kind, says he wants nothing more than the rights of liberty guaranteed by the Constitution.

It was on this issue that Jeff parted company with How at the national hobo convention at New Orleans in 1913. How wanted the hoboes to become Socialists and Jeff got him thrown out of the convention for it. Jeff has been King ever since, the regal title presumably being a spit in the teeth of all radicals, and a typical hyperbole.

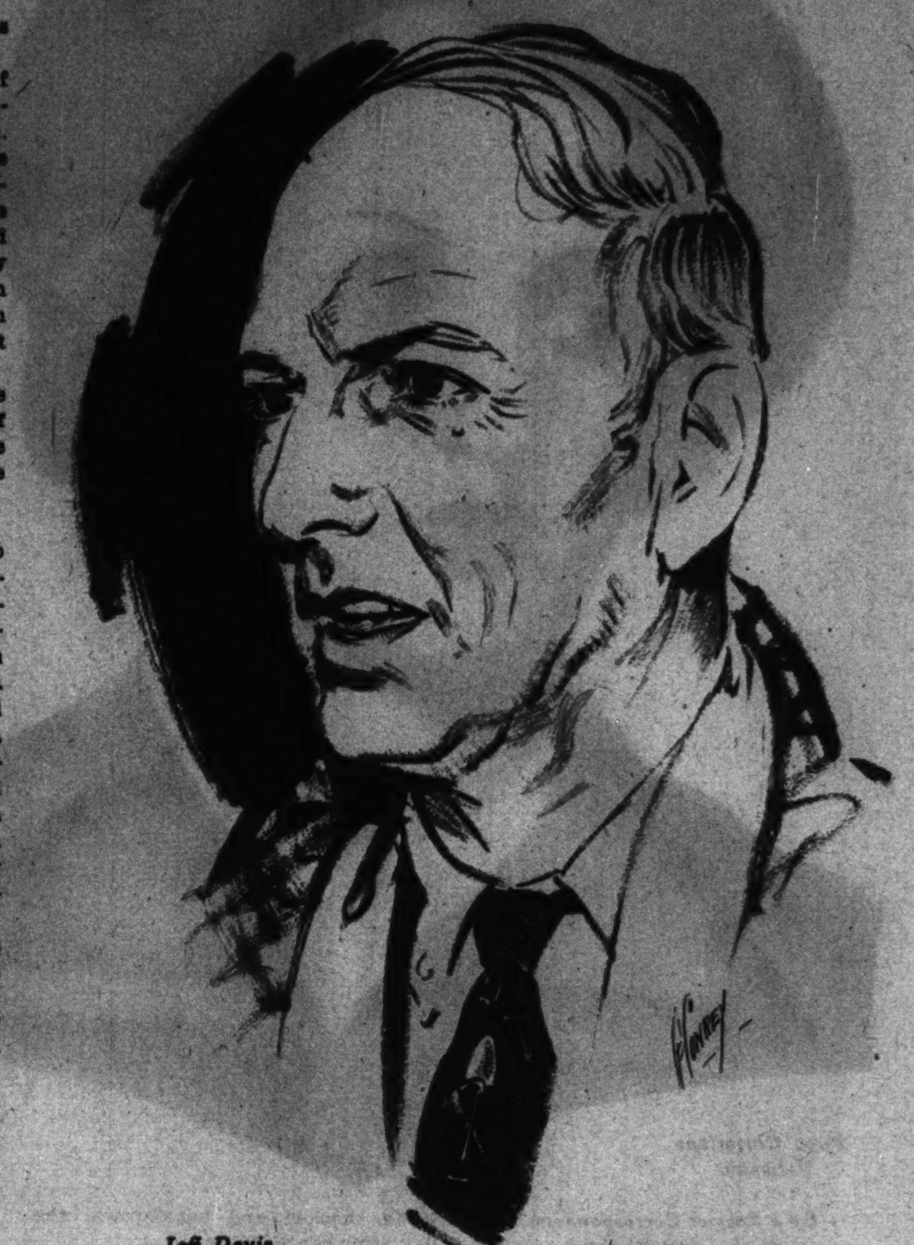
Whatever Jeff's philosophy boils down to, it is inevitably outside the pale of Socialism, or any other accepted political dogma. Socialism is too logical for Jeff or any hobo, and that's the gist of it. Hoboes aren't crusaders in the ordinary sense. They don't want any enemies. It would be hard to imagine a more inconsistent mortal than Jeff is. Therein lies his essentially human charm.

During the war Jeff was about the most successful salesman for Liberty Bonds the Government had. The King of the Hoboes consorted in those days with such people as Judge Elbert Gary, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt Jr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman. He had stumped the country for President Wilson on the "He kept us out of the war" issue, and afterwards he proceeded to sell a cool $9,000,000 worth of Liberty Bonds.

"I'd hardly of believed it me-self," Jeff says, talking with the high pitched accents of a pneumatic drill. "Gee, it was like Aladdin rubbin' his lamp, on'y I beat him in the first round, see. I soitenny mixed with the high nobbynobs. I tell ya. But I didn't forget me own bunch. Dat's what I done it fer. Fer me own 'boes. When I was workin' fer da Governmment all the big plutes played ball with me. See. Why, I bet I've done a billion smackers worth of business for the Government." And if the figure is a little too high, Jeff does have letters to prove that the substance of what he says is true.

In those days Jeff wrote columns of autobiography for the New York papers, telling of his life among the rich. Unquestionably his best story is the one describing how he suddenly became envious of his associates in the Liberty Bond campaigns and decided to try out the life they enjoyed by hocking his stickpin and renting an apartment on Riverside drive. "Even de pups in da leevators laughed at me," he says.

After the Liberty Bond drives were over and the Armistice signed Jeff says he was deserted by the plutes. He couldn't even get a place to see the homecoming parade from.



Jeff Davis.

AFTER the war Jeff decided to cash in on his triumphs by going into vaudeville. He was taken on as a monologuist at Hammerstein's Theater and afterwards got an engagement on Keith's circuit. For a time he was making $350 a week and between 1915 and 1919 there was a year when he made six or seven thousand smackers, just walking out on the stage and talking the patter which is second nature to him. But when he sided with the chorus girls in their attempt to form a union, his own manager fired him.

Making a good salary, says Jeff, is not in any way contradictory to the principles of a hobo. Many of the 'boes have made good. The Hoboes of America (incorporated 1908, registered United States Patent Office) try to make it easier for square pegs to find the holes for which the Lord intended them — without rubbing off their edges. If there isn't a hole for every man, the hoboes still have a place for him. Hence, any man or woman who has ever been sick or hungry in a strange town is eligible for membership. There are several thousand girl hoboes, and Jeff will vouch for the morals of every one of them. As for the men, Jeff's letterhead is cluttered with distinguished names, some of them, like Harry Hopkins, Charles Chaplin and Warden "E." Lawes, simply friends of Jeff's who were flattered to be accepted as honorary members; others genuine ex-hoboes. An example of the latter is Harry Latz of New York. Jeff once gave Latz his last dollar when Latz was sick in a hobo jungle in some God-forgotten town. The next time Jeff saw him, Latz was proprietor of a chain of big hotels and put the King up in a royal suite that ordinarily costs several hundred a week. But Latz's case isn't quite typical, for his emergence from the kingdom occurred when he inherited $4,000,000 and decided it was time to settle down.

The Hoboes of America are decidedly "choosy" about their membership. One-Eye Connolly, "General" Jacob Coxey and George Arliss are Sir Knights of the Road, in fact Arliss is a Supreme Knight. But Mayor William McNair of Pittsburgh was kicked out last year because he was "actin' too much like a fool, see. You know, da May'r uh Pittsboigh." The standards are utterly democratic. Members of Parliament, prize fighters and actors find their names scrawled on the union's dirty rolls beside the humblest vagabonds.

BUT the standards of conduct are high — probably considerably higher in practice than the ethical standards of any respectable professional association. The hoboes are utterly contemptuous of tramps and bums, hate uncleanliness and despise moral dishonesty. They are generous to a degree, however, and no sick or aged bum goes hungry while they have a few cents in their pockets to buy him a meal.

Jeff has an inexhaustible store of examples to prove this. He tells of a Negro member of his organization. This poor fellow was lynched trying to shield a white stranger who had killed a man in self-defense. Frequently the hoboes have saved their fellows from conviction on criminal charges, when their own lawyers—and they "retain" 29 of them—said it would be impossible.

Jeff is also proud of the amount of legislation that has been passed recently, years after it was suggested by the hoboes. The principles of the Federal Home Loans, the maximum hours provision of N R A, the work relief scheme, the Civilian Conservation Camps, the practice of leniency to first offenders, the substitution of training schools for reformatories and the building of United States highways, were suggested by the hoboes at their annual conventions before the war, Jeff says. Whether or not the hoboes had anything to do with it, this much is true: The plans were all called "visionary" and "Utopian" when they were issued. They have all been enacted since.

Last year they boycotted California wines and threatened to bring suit against the Sheriff of Los Angeles when transients were stopped at the State border. Now they are trying to get the Supreme Court to declare vagrancy laws unconstitutional. "Dey declare ever't'ing else unconstitutional, see," Jeff says. "Now why can't dey read dis Constitution, see. Here I'll show you. The Fourteen Amendment, see what it says, here." And he quotes it. "Now we don't care if they put in 15 members or on'y have six. But these here vag laws ain't constitutional and we want 'em to say so. See."

Jeff gets thoroughly worked up on

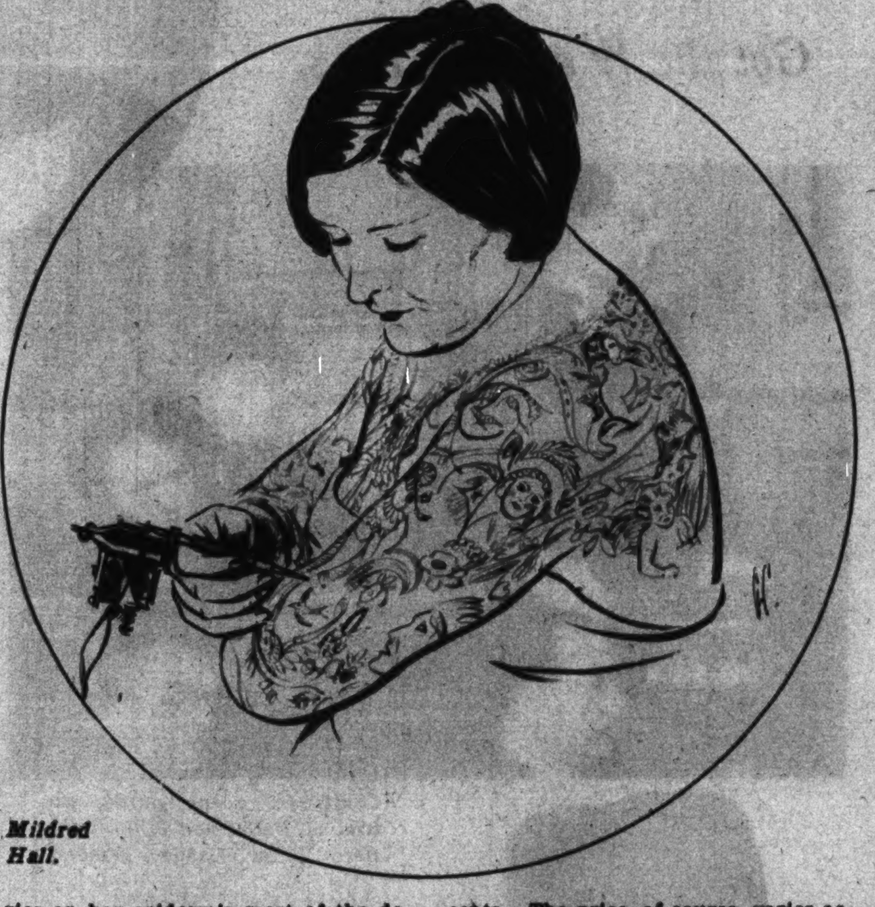
LADY TATTOOIST

NEW YORK.

MILDRED HALL had been doing delicate pieces of embroidery since childhood, about 15 years ago, when Tommy Lee, expert tattooist, noticed her skill and told her she ought to make a first-class tattoo artist. That was six years ago. Now she is the only woman tattoo artist in this city and she is making a fair living at it.

Lee, who made her his partner, injured his hand soon after they opened their place of business back of a Bowery barber shop. As a result of the injury, he works on the sidewalk as a "prospect puller-in" while Miss Hall does the needling.

A sign in her window proclaims her as the only woman plying the ink and needle trade on the Bowery. That means, she asserts, that she is the only one in the city, the industry being confined practically to this one famous old street near the water front. Although Miss Hall is a veritable perambulating gallery of pictures, she is modest about admitting that it would be quite easy for her to join a circus in the role of "tattooed lady." Nevertheless, Miss Hall can appear in a high-necked, long-sleeved dress and not a bit of inked skin is in view.



Mildred Hall.

Her skin was unmarked until she went into the business. Now she carries on her epidermis most of the designs and figures that are in the display of samples on the wall. The average size of "a piece of art" is two by three inches. It will be done in three colors, practically painlessly, for 75 cents. The price, of course, varies according to size, intricacy of design and number of colors. "Blanket designs," such as entwined flags of all nations, full-rigged ships, and writhing dragons more fearful than Fafnir, may cost as much as $100.

The equipment for applying either anchor or battleship is just the same. It consists of pots of black, white, green, yellow, red, blue and purple inks, a jar of vaseline, bottles of antiseptic, sterile cloths, two electric needles. The first is the outline needle, which has a single sharp point and penetrates to the depth of two layers of skin. The other needle, the shader, has a brush-like end which fills in the outline of the design. The skill of the operator, interpreted as having a light hand, lies in the speed with which the work is done with minimum flow of blood.

When the customer choose a pattern from those on display, Miss Hall gets out its corresponding celluloid stencil. She goes over the stencil lightly with a black chalk and then applies it to the spot to be adorned. The body now has the chalk outline of the design. This she then goes over with her two needles dipped in the proper inks, and in about 10 minutes a small design is finished. It dries almost instantly.

"Pain? No, it doesn't hurt much," says Miss Hall. "Each prick feels like a fly bite and after the first few jabs the skin gets used to it and you don't feel it at all. And there is no danger because I always sterilize the places where the blood flows. Even the inks are safe because they are not poisonous as they are made from vegetable matter."

All kinds of people come in to be tattooed—not just sailors and soldiers. The white collar class waits in line for their turn, along with truck drivers and longshoremen. Women usually go in for beauty spots and permanent eyebrows. Some lovesick lassies, sure of the lasting quality of their affections, order a heart design with the name or the initials of the loved one in the middle. They usually ask to have these placed on hip, or thigh. One girl even wanted her sweetheart's picture on her shoulder. Miss Hall's skill in drawing helped considerably with this order for she first had to chalk the likeness on the shoulder before tattooing it.

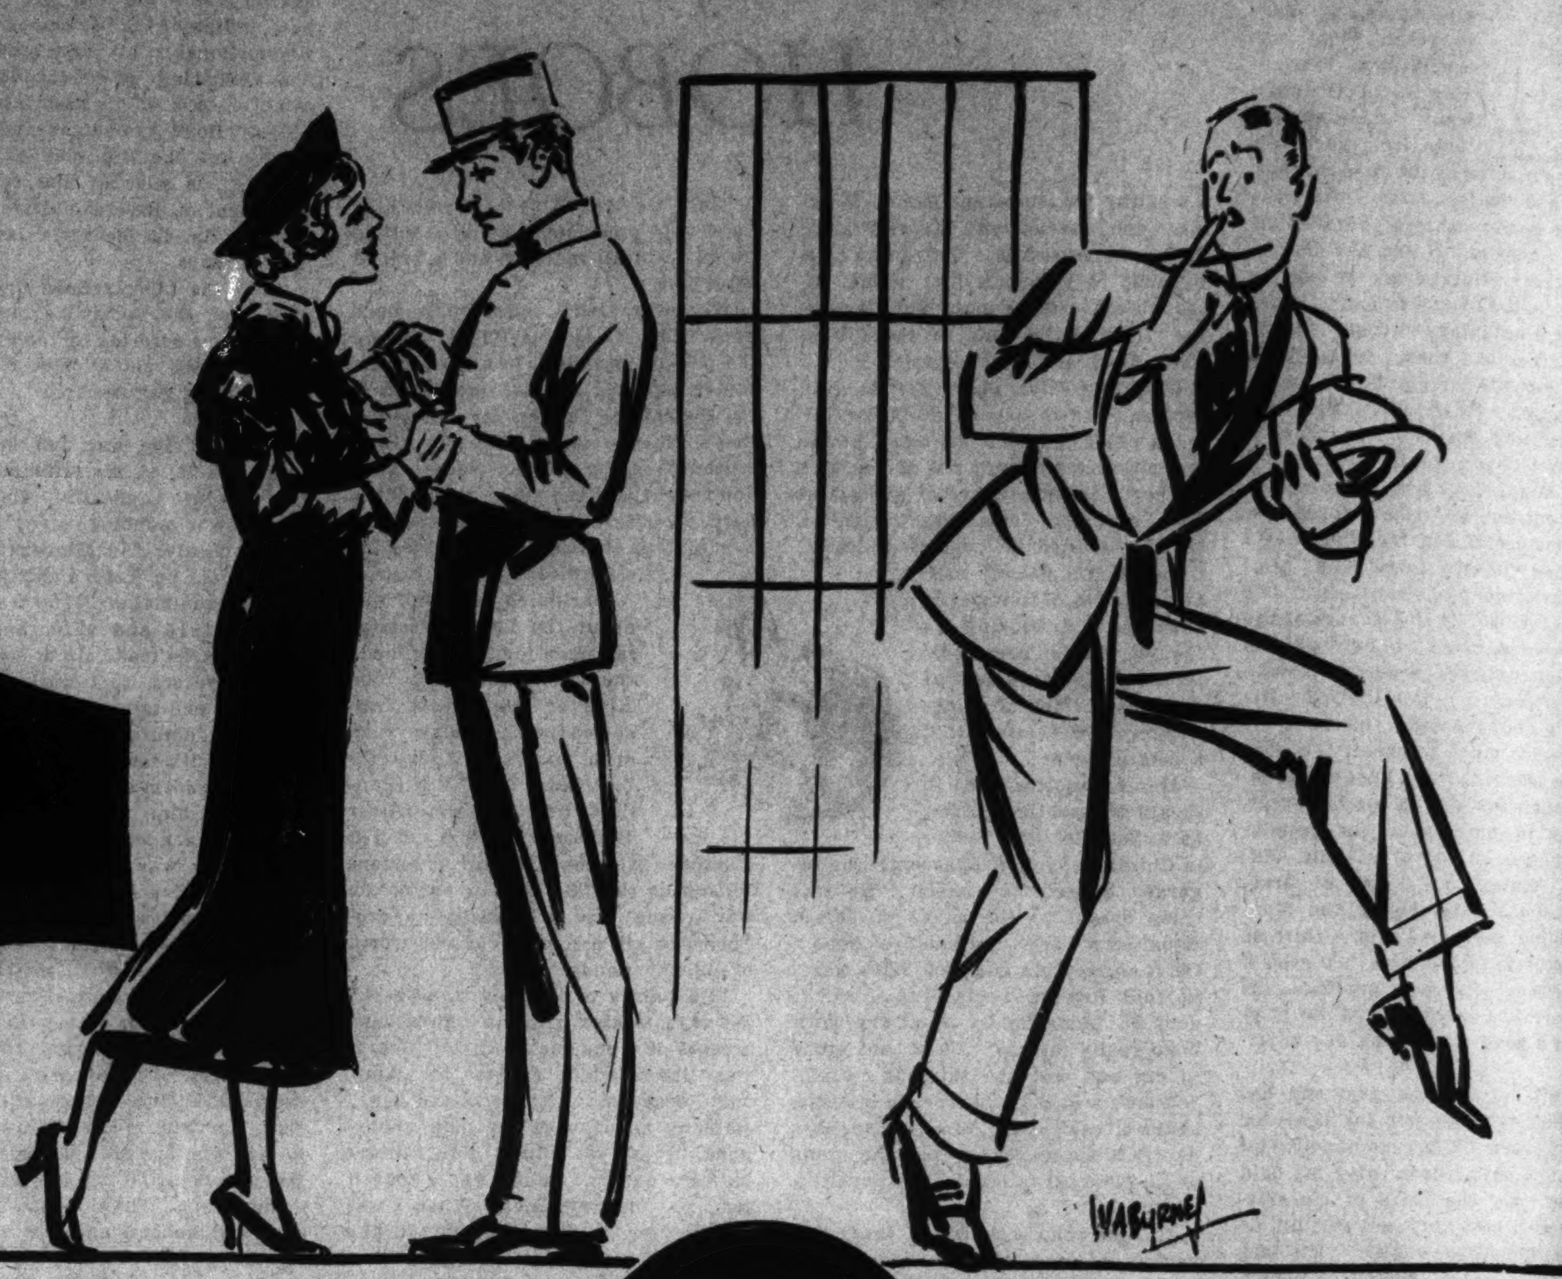
"A heart design is almost everybody's choice the first time they have any work done," she points out. "After that they go in for fancier pieces. When I see an Italian boy come in, I'm practically certain he'll want a religious design with crosses and angels or something with the word 'mother' in it. Sailors almost always pick something connected with the sea like a ship, an anchor or a sailor girl. And soldiers want horses or guns."

SHE is never surprised, though, at any request. Recently a man came in with three other men and announced they were his two witnesses and a notary public. They were to insure that his will was put on his chest in a legal manner. Miss Hall inscribed the document across his chest. The testator and his witnesses affixed their signatures in pencil. Then each in turn laid his right hand on the hilt of the needle and was sworn by the notary as Miss Hall traced over the penciling. All quite legal, as the lawyer said, when he came in to have an Indian chief tattooed on his forearm.

There are quite a few interesting quirks about the trade. For instance, women are easier to tattoo than men, Miss Hall explains, because they have thinner skin that punctures more easily. Another little known fact about the needle game is that some skins won't "take" certain colors. This means that the ink, instead of staining the skin, is absorbed into the system. Black is the best color to use because it "takes" quicker and lasts longer. The best places to tattoo are the arms, legs and back. The chest, knees, and other less fleshy parts of the body where the bones are near the surface lack the reserve cushion of fat to absorb the pain.

How Pretty Mme. Pelissier Charmed Her Husband Out of Jail

Mme. Christiane Pelissier.



She Started by Renting a De Luxe Cell as a Rendezvous and Finally Got the Warden's Keys.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PARIS, France.

THE theme song of this little comedy might have been Richard Lovelace's ditty about stone walls nor iron bars. The prison they failed to make for Charles Pelissier is that little jail called the Souriciere (mouse trap) which sits beside the Palais de Justice and is used for the detention of prisoners during the period of their trial. Lovelace's lines reading:

> If I have freedom in my love,
> And in my soul am free,
> Angels alone, that soar above,
> Enjoy such liberty—

apply perfectly to Charles Pelissier, for whom the stone walls of La Souriciere and the jail's antique iron bars did not a prison make. In fact, the more one thinks about it, the more one is inclined to think that Pelissier's story, which has run in the news columns of all the Paris papers for several weeks past, is about the best available free translation into French of Richard Lovelace's "To Althea."

Charles Pelissier, also known as "Alexandre II" in memory of the late Alexandre Stavisky, was a rising young stock broker, a handsome chap with a becoming mustache and accommodating morals. He became a mysterious figure on the Bourse owing to his consistent losses and the gaiety with which he bore them. The accounts Pelissier handled had an uncanny way of turning sour. The slightest action on the market was enough to wipe out his clients, and they were so invariably unlucky that it was a little hard for them to understand how their broker managed not only to keep up his spirits, but also an expensive establishment and a very costly social life. The fact that 1935, the year this became most generally apparent, was a poor year on the Bourse didn't quite serve to kill off the suspicions that Pelissier had earned. His activities were investigated. The investigators satisfied themselves that Pelissier was swindling his customers. And on June 3, 1935, the young broker was taken into custody. He was formally charged with embezzlement and fraudulent speculation and locked up in the Santee jail.

The date wasn't a conspicuous landmark in the history of the Bourse, where such incidents, if not exactly frequent, are at least not by any means unprecedented. But June 3 happened to be a very important day in the life of Charles Pelissier. For it was the day after his marriage to Mlle. Christiane Marat. His bride was a very pretty girl, just 24. He had met her in the course of business, for she had previously been employed by a fellow broker. Christiane, the daughter of a respectable small merchant, was as spicy a wit as she was pretty. She looked as if she knew her way around, but her husband knew how much of a blow to her his arrest must be. He was pretty well miffed himself. A promising career chopped off, unjustly, it seemed to him, just when things were looking up. . . . A pretty blonde bride shocked and heartbroken the day after her wedding. . . .

Charles Pelissier was thoroughly upset. He flung himself down on the unsympathetic cot of his cell, looking as if all the martyrs in the calendar of saints couldn't equal his torment. For some minutes he didn't even notice that the cell had another occupant. But after he had taken time to savor the bitterness of his lot, staring bleakly at the floor and biting his lip, his dreary reverie was suddenly broken by a slap on the shoulder and a merry hello. He looked up and saw his cellmate, a young man named Sandilaer.

"Hello," Pelissier answered savagely. A less amiable conversationalist would have been rebuffed by his tone. Not Sandilaer. The young man was delighted to find someone to talk to. His short term for being caught passing rubber checks was nearly up. He was hungry for company and he didn't propose to allow his cellmate to spoil his own good disposition.

Jail isn't so bad, Sandilaer began argumentatively. You don't have anything to worry about. You get a good rest. And if you've got a little money saved up outside, it'll buy you anything you want in the way of cheer.

"Now, here's a tip," the cheerful forger said, after listening to Pelissier's tragic autobiography. "If you'd like to see your woman once in a while, just tell her to talk to Vallet, the warden at La Souriciere. Tell her to ask about cell No. 10."

PELISSIER was interested. "You think he'd fix things up for me?" he asked, seeing a ray of hope for the first time that day.

"Sure," said Sandilaer. "Why I've been seeing my girl friend once a week ever since my trial started. He grinned. "You've no idea how it cheers you up." Pelissier felt a little more cheerful already.

"I'll do it," he murmured. And Sandilaer grinned.

So when Mme. Pelissier came tearfully to the grille of the visitor's room the next afternoon, her husband whispered the tip to her and they both went away feeling better when the guard shouted "Time's up." Christiane went to call on the warden of La Souriciere the next day.

Now Lionel Vallet isn't the sort of jailer who's likely to be terrified by a wooden pistol, but as Mme. Pelissier's conversation with him proved, there are other ways of touching the heart of a Parisian jailer—this one at any rate. A beautiful young woman wearing an expensive fur looks more menacing than a blue steel pistol to a man of 44 who, like Lionel Vallet, has three war scars and wears the ribbons of the Orient Medal, the Croix de Guerre and the Medaille Militaire in his button hole. Vallet had only had the job of warden since the previous summer and wasn't hardened to all its rigors.

So when Mme. Pelissier shyly explained her errand Vallet, who had no difficulty understanding the situation, tried to put her at her ease as quickly as possible. Cell No. 10 is a luxury much in demand, he said. The rent is 1000 francs ($44.60) for a night and 500 francs a night if reserved for several nights. Mme. Pelissier promptly snapped open her handbag and arranged to take the room as frequently as possible during the time of her husband's trial. Oh, it isn't necessary to wait for the trial, Vallet explained.

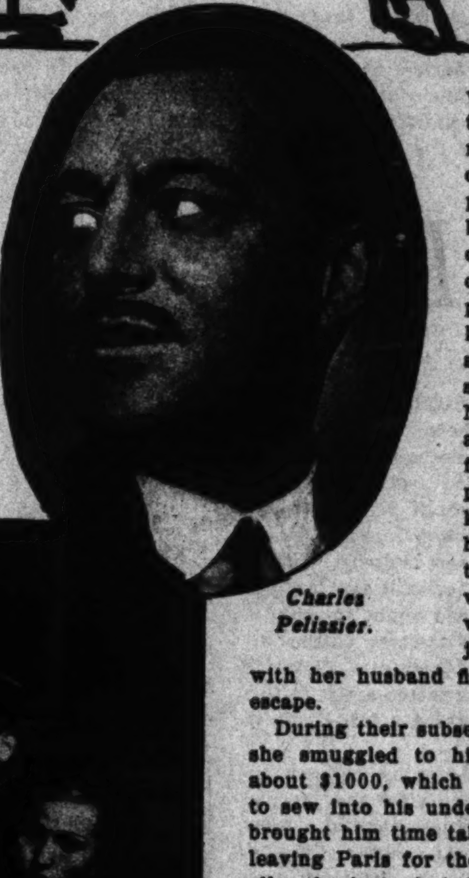
Lionel Vallet, the Warden of the "Mouse Trap."

All that is necessary is a transfer order signed by the warden at La Souriciere which was himself. He'd be glad to accomodate M. Pelissier the following week—if Madame wishes.

So about a week after his arrest, Charles Pelissier was driven to the little jail beside the Palais de Justice in a patrol wagon and promptly deposited in cell No. 10 by the warden himself. The cell was simply furnished, an overstuffed sofa, a couple of straight chairs and a table. But on the table was laid a simple supper, far more tatsy than the ordinary fare served up in Paris jails, and a bottle of vin ordinaire. When one considers the prices charged for such luxuries in certain American jails—Welfare Island during the Tammany Hall regime in New York, for instance—one can see that Warden Vallet was a very reasonable man. Thoughtful and charitable, too, in the best French tradition.

From that time on, the Pelissiers had regular fortnightly reunions in cell No. 10 at La Souriciere and the broker got over his desperate bad humor. But Mme. Pelissier wasn't entirely satisfied with the arrangement. She had noticed the first night that the iron door of cell No. 10 was never locked after she came in. It was left open for her to make her departure before morning, so that there would be no embarrassment for Madame when the jailer came to bring Pelissier his breakfast. Subsequently she noticed also that an old-fashioned iron postern that opened off the aisle through which she reached the cell was the only barrier between the rendezvous cell and the street. It was apparently little used and always unguarded. So one evening Christiane took a couple of keys with her, first covering them with a heavy coat of wax, and on her way out stopped at the postern and made a careful wax impression of the lock. She took the impression to her cousin, Marcel Guichard, the next day.



Charles Pelissier.

Now Guichard, a humble little clerk who wore spectacles and ordinarily wouldn't have considered participating in a jail break in a hundred years, was an old admirer of his pretty cousin. He had loved her, at a safe distance, ever since childhood. No favor she could ask was too much for him. He happily accepted the key, and agreed to have a copy made that day. Meanwhile Christiane went to the Santee jail and discussed with her husband final plans for his escape.

During their subsequent rendezvous she smuggled to him sums totaling about $1000, which she directed him to sew into his underwear. She also brought him time tables for all trains leaving Paris for the border and finally, the last of their series of meetings at La Souriciere, she handed him a false passport and a key.

That meeting took place on the afternoon of October 2, 1935, and was the sixth they had enjoyed since Pelissier's incarceration. When Mme. Pelissier came to the jail she carried a tightly wrapped parcel containing a gray business suit. She and her husband had lunch, enjoyed a last embrace, and then Pelissier put on the suit, took the key and the money, and slipped out the door, leaving his wife behind. He found the postern gate without difficulty. But at this point the plan almost fell through. The key wouldn't turn in the rusty old lock. He returned to the cell in dismay.

BUT Christiane wasn't licked yet. She handed her husband a knife from the supper table, and together they forced the lock. The gate swung open. And just as Charles was about to slip through, Vallet appeared behind him. The jailer was too late. Pelissier slammed the heavy gate in his face and disappeared in the midday crowd outside. Vallet was frantic. He rushed after his prisoner, found it impossible to spot him in the crowd, and came back. Mme. Pelissier was still waiting there.

In all the annals of jail breaks there is probably no accomplice more persevering and talented than little Mme. Pelissier. She realized at once that Vallet was on the spot. If he called the police, he would have more explaining to do than she. So she did her best to persuade him that her husband wasn't really trying to escape. Charles wouldn't do a dirty trick of that sort, she protested. He just went out for a breath of free air. And he needed some money so he had slipped around the corner to the bank, the Credit Lyonnaise. That was all. Why he'd be back in 10 minutes, she said in the most persuasive tone she could muster; at most, in an hour or so. Vallet, poor soul, believed her. There didn't seem to be anything else he could do. If Mme. Pelissier was lying, there wasn't any point in going around to the Credit Lyonnaise to check up.

But Vallet was disconsolate. He muttered an oath and locked Mme. Pelissier up in the cell her husband had just deserted. This time he didn't neglect to lock the door.

By 5 o'clock Vallet was at his wit's end. It was obvious now that Pelissier wouldn't be back and that he had been tricked all the way round. He notified the police. Mme. Pelissier was taken out of cell No. 10 and Vallet was locked up in her stead. But the police couldn't, of course, turn her loose. They took her to headquarters and subjected her to a severe evening of cross-questioning. She couldn't tell them where her husband had gone. She had carefully instructed him to keep his exact plans to himself. Hence the time tables.

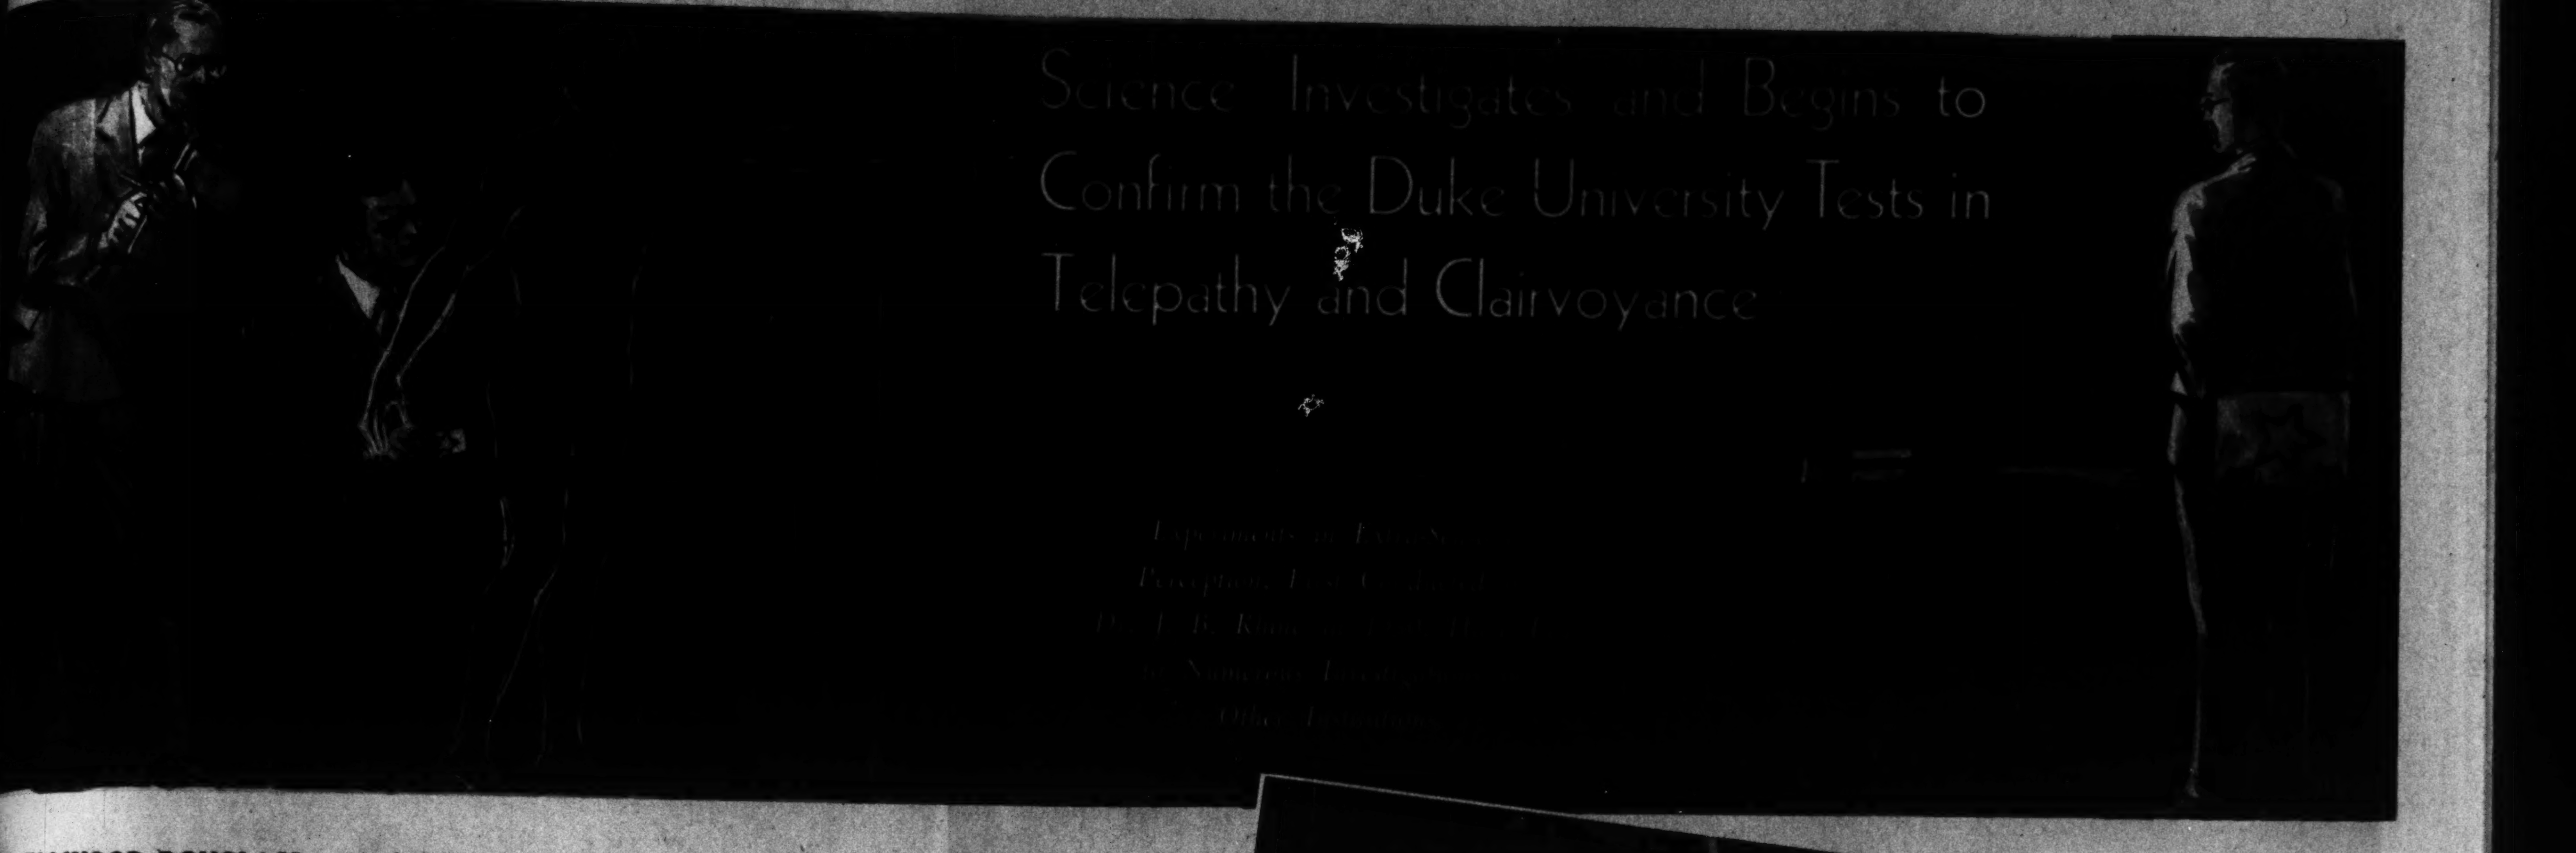
As it happened, he had chosen Belgium for his retreat. By the time the detectives had finished with Mme. Pelissier, her husband was sleeping peacefully in a good hotel in Brussels.

COUSIN MARCEL GUICHARD wasn't that sort. The next morning he was horrified to see what had happened. He rushed to police headquarters as soon as he had finished the article. He succeeded in implicating himself in 10 minutes, and wasn't a bit successful in his perfervid attempts to persuade the police that his beloved cousin had nothing to do with the escape.

So Christiane, Vallet and Guichard were all locked up, and a couple of weeks later Pelissier himself was picked up by the Brussels police and extradited back to France. He has remained in prison ever since, except for the last few weeks, during which he has been called on to testify in the trial of his wife, her cousin and the friendly jailer. He has not been tried, in fact his trial date has not yet been fixed.

The trial of the others was held in March in Judge Lapeyre's criminal court. Vallet's attorneys tried desperately to prove that the jailer had succumbed to Mme. Pelissier's charms, which were prominently flaunted in court, and that this was the first occasion when he had lapsed in his duties. They were unsuccessful. Sandilaer was brought in to testify. Christiane was permitted to give him the lie in her most persuasive way. And finally Vallet was brought to admit that he had received a bribe to admit Mme. Pelissier to her husband's cell. "Only 200 francs, though," he protested.

Paris enjoyed the trial immensely, as only Paris can. It was one of the pleasantest little scandals the papers have dished up up in a long time and it was the kind that best suits the French taste. It ended as everyone expected it would. Christiane was completely exonerated. Her little cousin likewise. And Vallet, who had already been held in jail for 17 months, was condemned to serve 14. Since he already had served a longer term than that, he was, of course, turned loose, too.



Science Investigates and Begins to Confirm the Duke University Tests in Telepathy and Clairvoyance

Experiments in Extra-Sensory Perception First Conducted by Dr. J. B. Rhine at Duke [illegible] by Numerous Investigators [illegible]
Other Institutions

By ELLWOOD DOUGLASS
Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

Professor William McDougall.

THE small, neat monkey wrench which Dr. J. B. Rhine of Duke University tossed into the closed machine of standard mental science three years ago, and which the eminent machinists proposed to annihilate in short order, seems instead to have grown into a full-size crowbar. Give him his fulcrum and he may not "move the world," as Archimedes said—but he shows signs at the moment of upsetting a Gilbraltar of skepticism into a sea of doubt against doubt.

Dr. Rhine didn't call it a monkey wrench, though psychologists recognized those possibilities at a glance. His name for it was "extra-sensory perception"—perception by means other than the senses. The nearest equivalent in common speech is "second sight," comprising both telepathy, the perception of an idea in another's mind without aid of known means of communication, and clairvoyance, perception of an object without recourse to the known senses.

It wasn't even a monkey wrench when Dr. Rhine began, back in 1930. It was a tiny, tiny wedge. It consisted merely of card guessing, naming the symbol on a card without looking at it, and guessing right a little more consistently than luck would account for. But Dr. Rhine and his associates at Durham, North Carolina, plugged away at their card tricks for three years without saying a word about it. They subjected the guessers to stricter and stricter trials. In one test of telepathy, they separated the "mind reader" and the person whose mind she "read" by 250 miles.

When Dr. Rhine published his book, "Extra-Sensory Perception," he was able to cite 85,000 guesses under the strictest conditions with hits averaging 7.1 in 25 instead of the normal chance expectation of five in 25. More than five might be made once in a while by luck, of course, but the probability of keeping it up grew less and less as the number of trials increased. On that total score, Dr. Rhine computed, the odds against "accident," "chance" or "luck" could be expressed only by a literally inconceivable figure—a one and 820 zeros. It was a pretty hefty monkey wrench.

"Looks like something," commented workers in his own and other sciences; "but maybe not what he thinks it is; more likely some unsuspected factor in the condition of the experiment.

"Can anyone else get the same results—especially anyone who doesn't want to get them? Why only those symbols—why not cards with colors, and why not something besides cards? And what about the effect of selection on his chance expectation? What about his mathematics?"

This month half a dozen others are reporting confirmation. The trials run to 500,000, with the symbol cards, with color cards and with entirely different devices. Critical search for "unsuspected factors" is reported, with rigorous measures to rule them out. There are a variety of exhaustive controls. One study was begun candidly to find out what was wrong in the original conditions. One of the collaborators is a professor of mathematics. And the publication in which they appear is the first number of a new quarterly, the Journal of Parapsychology, to be published at Duke University under editorship of Dr. Rhine and Professor William McDougall, with purposes indicated in its editorial introduction as follows:

"Parapsychology is a word that comes to us from Germany, where for some dozen years it has been used to denote the stricter inquiries into obscure and questionable forms of mental activity. We think it may well be adopted into the English language to designate the more strictly experimental part of the whole field implied by psychical research as now pretty generally understood. It is these strictly laboratory studies which most need the atmosphere and conditions to be found only in the universities; and it is these which the universities can most properly promote, leaving the extra-academic groups the still important task of collecting and recording all such reports of phenomena apparently expressive of unusual mental powers as occur spontaneously, obscure warnings and premonitions, veridical phantasms of the living and the dead, and other sporadic manifestations of mysterious origins.

"We do not claim that any sharp line can be drawn marking off the field of parapsychology within the larger, vaguer province of psychical research. Rather we anticipate that the stricter experimental methods will gradually invade other parts of the province, annexing them to their own more special field, until possibly the two shall coincide. . . .

"It is our intention to admit to this journal only contributions that properly fall into the narrower sphere implied by its title; that is to say, reports of experimental studies in the stricter sense and discussions of methods and interpretations of such work.

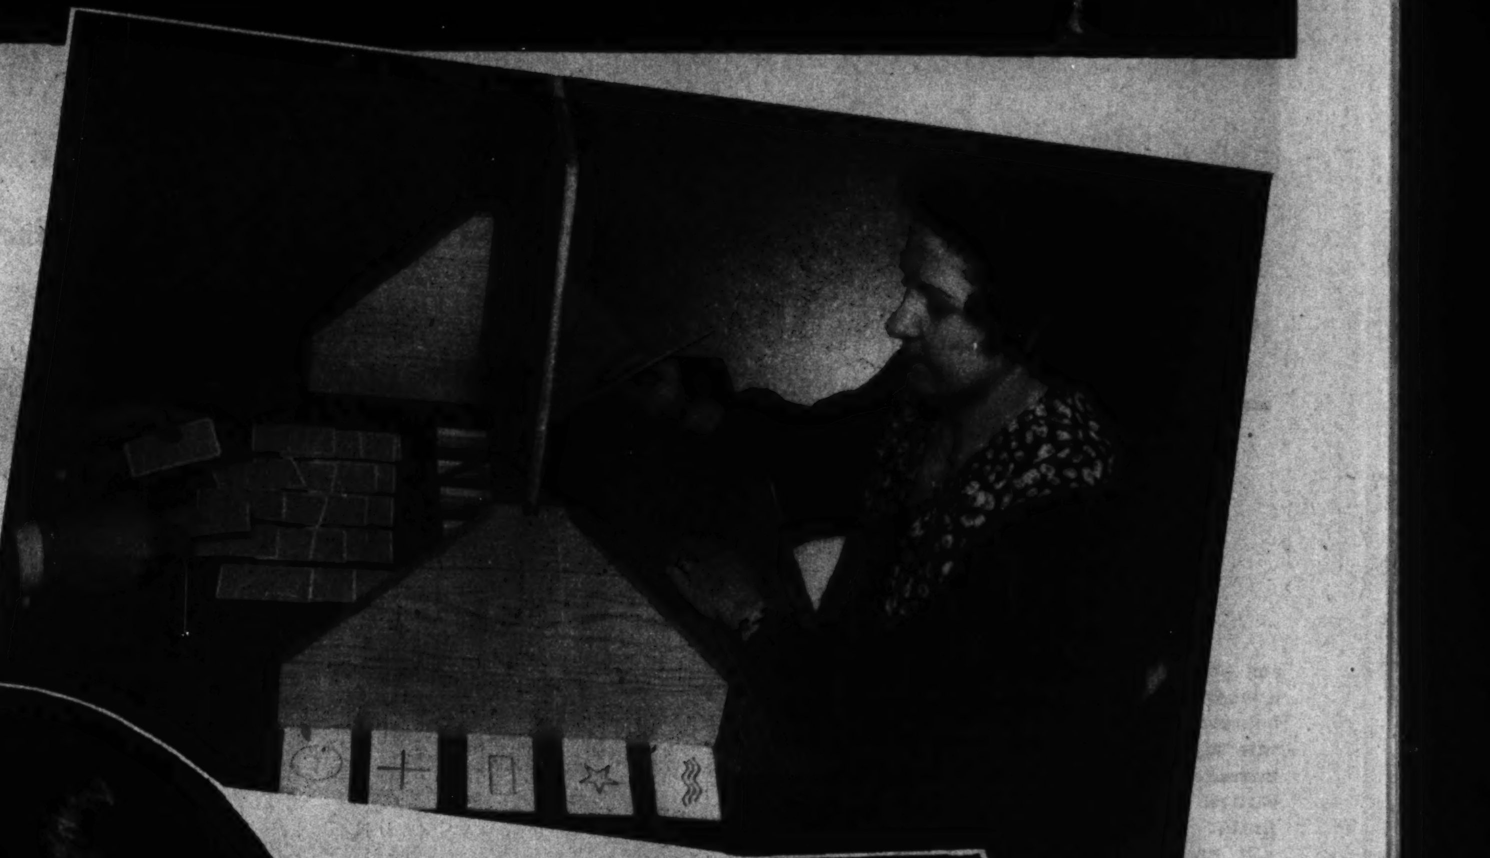
"Since the publication in 1934 of the first full report of the work done on extra-sensory perception in the psychological department of Duke University, there has been a considerable extension of active interest in parapsychological research. Repetition with and without variations has been undertaken in more than a dozen universities; and, in addition, several extra-academic groups have reported experiments that seem deserving of a place in our pages.

"The need for multiple repetitions by different observers of all experiments yielding positive results is far greater in this field than in others, and for two reasons: First, to provide against the peculiarly great risks of bona-fide error and self-deception; secondly, to carry conviction of the objectivity of reports and validity of conclusions to the naturally and properly skeptical public which this journal seeks to serve.

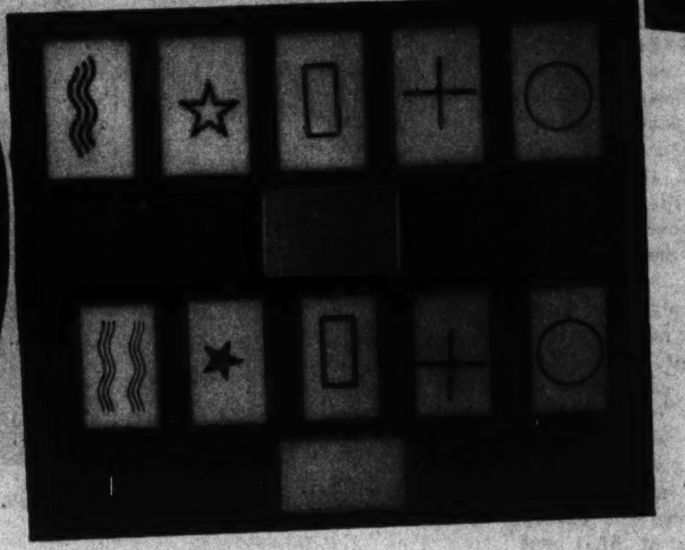
"WE ARE acutely aware of the heavy responsibility towards the public which we are undertaking. . . . We shall do our best to maintain a high critical standard, to guard against errors of all kinds, and to protect our readers against lack of good faith on the part of any contributor."

The faculty—if, as Dr. Rhine and all his contributors are inclined to believe, it is a faculty—seemed just as rudimentary and elusive in this new work as it appeared in the original experiments. It was apt to peter out whenever a guesser was subjected to prolonged and monotonous test. It amounted only to what the gamblers call percentage—a trivial factor in any one trial, measureable only on infinite repetition. It might be of use to a player at poker at baccarat (where it could be suicidal), but hardly in any other field of everyday affairs. The only practical effect attributed to it in the journal was that it might invalidate some minute psychological measurements, experimentally determined, by means of unconscious telepathic communication from the experimenter to the person under study.

But clearly, if a telepathic or clairvoyant faculty occurred in a common or obvious or practically effective form, it would not now be the object of skepticism or the subject of painstaking search. And as Professor Gardner Murphy of Columbia University commented, pointing an analogy with Dr. Rhine's first reports: "Our modern civilization is depending more and more upon a power which a few centuries ago amused those who studied the action of amber upon silk. The phenomena were bizarre, but obviously of no theoretical or practical importance. . . ."



Dr. J. B. Rhine.



A screened touch matching test. This illustrates the method used at Columbia University. The subject points to a key card in one of the five boxes, thus indicating which one she thinks contains a card like the top card in the pack held by the experimenter behind the screen.

Cards used in the Duke University tests.

A screened open matching test. This method was one of those used at Tarkio College. In one set of tests the key cards were visible, while in another they were invisible and in unknown order.

At Tarkio College, Tarkio, Missouri, Professor W. L. George and a senior psychology student, J. L. Woodruff, attempted to determine the effect of varied conditions on E S P—"extra-sensory perception." Their tests were of clairvoyance; that is, the subject tried to guess the order of cards unknown to anyone. The cards used were Dr. Rhine's E S P packs of 25 marked with five symbols, plus, star, circle, rectangle, wavy lines, with chance expectation of five hits in 25.

Students with five symbol cards face up before them attempted to match them from a pack of 25 face down and unseen; tried it with the five key cards also face down; attempted to call each of the 25 cards of a pack unseen, and ran each of the three types of tests with the cards hidden from them also by screen.

Three students scored materially above the chance five in 25, and screening materially lowered the scores of two of them, though it did not reduce them to chance five. The third, however, scored higher with the screen, as though the sight of the cards were actually a distraction.

Scores in the two sorts of tests where students concentrated on the symbols, looking at key cards or orally naming the cards of the pack, ran consistently higher than in blind matching, where the student might consider similarity without directly concentrating on the symbols themselves. Possibly, comments the journal report, that was only because blind matching seemed the more difficult, for such inner nuances of approach have been demonstrated to have marked effect on scores.

Rewards on alternate weeks failed to bring about any difference in comparison of weekly scores, but that month as a whole ran unusually high, an indication, perhaps, of an indirect effect through stimulation of general interest. The total score of all the students tested was to be explained by chance only against odds which they figured at 10^{166} to 1.

BUT they did not rely on theoretical figures alone. They ran three series of empirical controls. On one run of 3000, on which the score had averaged 6.52, they simply checked each set of 25 calls against the preceding pack of 25 cards. The tally was 4.96, or in .04 of the mathematical prediction. Then 3000 cards were dealt in rotation under five key cards, with an average score of 5.3, or .3 more than indicated by chance mathematics. Finally, 11,875 cards dealt in that manner tallied 5.12 hits when the average score, on the same number of total trials, stood at 6.22.

In Professor Murphy's laboratory at Columbia University, New York, Dr. J. G. Pratt tested 123 persons before he found one who consistently scored higher than chance. Even the one eventually dropped to chance average, but not before she had scored better than chance—by odds of 2,500,000 to one—in 7800 trials under conditions which Dr. Pratt was convinced ruled out every possibility of aid by the ordinary senses. A control series of 7500 ran in .075 of the chance five in 25.

Dr. Pratt and "Mrs. M." sat at a table with a cover that fell to the floor. Under the table he dealt a key card, without looking, into each of five boxes, covered each with a blank card, slid the row of boxes under the edge of a screen on the table, picked up and cut a pack of cards which had been shuffled five times. As Mrs. M. pointed to one of the boxes, he, unseen by her, laid the top card from the pack face down behind that box.

At Bard College of Columbia University, Dr. C. R. Carpenter, fellow in psychology, and Dr. Harold R. Phalen, professor of mathematics, took up Dr. Rhine's experimental procedures on publication in 1934 "in an attitude of skepticism."

"It was thought at that time," they report in the Journal of Parapsychology, "that errors might be found either in his experimental procedures, in his statistical methods or in the validity of his generalizations." They had "serious doubt" of finding anything positive by techniques "thoroughly objective and strictly controlled."

They started out with a control series of 10,000 consisting of matching one deck of E S P cards against another, each shuffled five times, by routine dealing. Hits averaged 5.03, with one instance of 11 hits and 11 instances of one hit, and graphic analysis showed approximately the theoretical curve of coincidence.

Then they subjected 63 students and two faculty wives to 100,000 trials in eight series, with Dr. Rhine's E S P cards and with color cards, with and without screens, with a variety of methods to exclude all conceivable cues from the senses or any conceivable "system," always with one observer and in particular instances with two. Four subjects were found with high scores, which, for one of them, persisted through the two series considered most strictly controlled.

The possibility that telepathy might throw all awry some psychological measurements, unless controls were provided against it, was investigated in private laboratories by Dr. Lucien Warner and Mrs. Mildred Raible. For their study of 17 persons, of both sexes and all ages from 6 to 60, they selected a test of weight discrimination.

The weights were rubber cylinders of identical size used in sets of two, a 100-gram standard and one heavier or lighter than standard, with two sets placed on opposite sides of a felt-covered, ball bearing turntable. The experimenter and the outfit were screened from the subject, who reached under the screen to lift the weights. The experimenter would spin the turntable like a roulette wheel to determine by chance which pair of weights would be presented for discrimination. By feeling a thumb tack beneath the turntable, the experimenter could determine for himself whether the response ought to be "lighter" or "heavier."

IN PRELIMINARY, the "threshhold" was determined for each subject with sufficient practice so that he was right fairly consistently half the time. Then the experimenters ran their test series with the "threshhold" weights. In the "unknown" trials they themselves did not know if the check weight was lighter or heavier. In the "known" trials they felt the tell-tale tack and concentrated on the correct response.

Nine persons ran about the same on "known" and "unknown" trials. Eight responded correctly more often when the experimenter knew the right answer in advance, and in two the difference, on 1680 trials, was sufficient for mathematical significance. Although "most psychologists have avoided even mention of the word telepathy," they concluded, controls against it should be employed in such experiments as a matter of laboratory routine, "regardless of whether the deviations herein reported are the result of telepathy or of the operation of one of the recognized senses in a way not now understood."

A Metropolitan Ballet Based on Poker

NEW YORK.

THE world premier of a new ballet, "The Card Party," to be presented this Tuesday and Wednesday at the Metropolitan, is designed to appeal as much to the janitor who alternates his nights with bowling and poker playing in shirt sleeves as it does to any member of the effete bourgeoisie who has solved all the private mysticisms and grasped all the messages of deep import since the earliest days of Pavlowa and Nijinski.

It was written by Igor Stravinsky, the eccentric Russian composer who was guest conductor of the St. Louis Symphony two seasons ago and who will return there next season. Himself an inveterate poker player, Stravinsky has written a ballet that he says will be danced according to the strictest rules of the game and not as though it were seven-card stud with all deuces and the one-eyed jacks wild.

Built purely and simply on a game of poker, it will present no mysterious gyrations or rehashed formalisms whose interpretations can only be found by consulting a small library of guide books. The concepts and experiences to be dealt with will not transcend the rational means of expression common to even the barber shop backroom players of what was America's national card game before bridge began to be taken seriously. No member of the audience will even have to know the difference between a pirouette and an entrechat.

This new Stravinsky ballet, with choreography by George Balanchine, will do more than follow the trend of "Union Pacific," "The Green Table," and "O Libertad." It will sweep away every vestige of resemblance to a game of charades. Although the characters will be playing cards, they will fashion their looks and gestures from those of poker players.

There will be the composed countenance of the veteran who sits tight behind four jacks, the confident air of the bluffer who pretends to have drawn successfully to a flush, the nervous fumbling of the man who can't make up his mind whether to draw to two pair or discard the weaker pair. The perfidious joker, running wild on the green cloth of this table, will complicate the situation in every deal. During the first deal, according to the libretto, one of the players drops out but the other two remain with straights that are even in value. Although one player holds the joker in his straight he is unable to upset the balance of power.

In the second deal, the hand that holds three aces against four queens is victorious when it is reinforced by the joker. This gives it four aces. The four-queen hand, naturally, was unable to improve.

The situation reaches a climax in the third deal with a struggle between three flushes. The joker, strutting at the head of a sequence of spades, vanquishes one rival hand only to run against a royal flush in hearts that puts an end to his nonsense and knavery.

The musical opening of each deal is a short processional (march, polonaise or valse) which introduces the shuffling of the deck. For the card play with its deals, passes and bets, there are group dances, solo variations and finales according to the familiar usage of classic ballet.

Poker game during rehearsal. Stravinsky, at center, and Balanchine, right, with members of the company. There's a joker in this game, too, apparently, for the hands are exposed.

Why Chief Tshekedi Khama Put Away His Wife

The African Ruler Who Was Punished for Flogging a White Man Does Everything in Proper Style This Time.

Chief Tshekedi Khama.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

SEROWE, British Bechuanaland.

AFTER Chief Tshekedi Khama of the Bamangwato tribe got into trouble with the British Navy in 1933 for having a white man flogged under native law, he decided that henceforth he would take no drastic steps without consulting the British Commissioner. He vowed that his imperial wrath, which when unchecked had caused all within sound of his stentorian voice to prostrate themselves and moan, would never strike again until it was assured that the Great White King would not be displeased. It had been most humiliating for Tshekedi to be stripped of his rank by an Admiral and then have a relenting King restore him to power two weeks later.

Using great restraint, Tshekedi kept his path clear for the next three years. Things went so well that in January of 1936 he married Bagakgametse Sekgoma, 27 years old, and said to be the most beautiful woman of the tribe. His pride grew every time he heard the Chanter of the Chief's Praises intone the Queen was "more beautiful than red dawn over the plains." No longer was it so hard for him to restrain his wrath when things went not well.

Then came the time for Tshekedi to go forth and make the annual count of the tribe's cattle for taxation. He hated to leave his bride in the palace but the dangers and rigors of the journey through the hills and over the plains were too much for a woman. It was many weary days before the task was completed.

When he returned he learned that his wife was to bear him a child. A great dance was given at the palace. All the people who could attend were present. Almost all their dancing songs were in praise of the beauty of the great Tshekedi's wife.

There was still more rejoicing months later when the heir was born. But some of the royal councilors were not pleased. There was talk that finally reached Tshekedi's ears. He became convinced that the baby's features bore no resemblance to his. Then a report was made to him that while he was counting cattle the Queen had purchased love philters from a medicine man in order to charm a man with whom she had fallen in love. The charm had been successful.

This was sufficient evidence for Tshekedi. His wrath knew no bounds. He recalled how when he was a child the men of the Bamangwato tribe used to put unfaithful wives to death or drive them into the wilderness where they would fall prey to the beasts. Such punishment was mete for this queen of his, he decided.

AS HE considered ordering a death sentence, he recalled his difficulties over the flogging of Phineas McIntosh, the white trader who had been accused of "living like a native with a native woman." Vice-Admiral E. R. G. R. Evans, acting as High Commissioner for Bechuanaland, learning of the case, had summarily tried Tshekedi and deposed him. The chief's mother, Dowager Queen Semane, sent an appeal to King George and two weeks later Tshekedi was back on his throne.

Tshekedi reasoned that although this case was purely one that concerned the tribe alone it would be best to run no risks. He appealed to District Commissioner Captain G. E. Nettleton. The Commissioner, always anxious to see that things went well among the 30,000 Bamangwatos, came at once to the palace.

Court was set up in the shade of the thorn tree grove near the palace where even those spectators who could not hear were at least able to watch the proceedings. The child was held aloft for all to see that it did not resemble Tshekedi. Then the testimony concerning the purchase of love philters from a witch doctor was introduced.

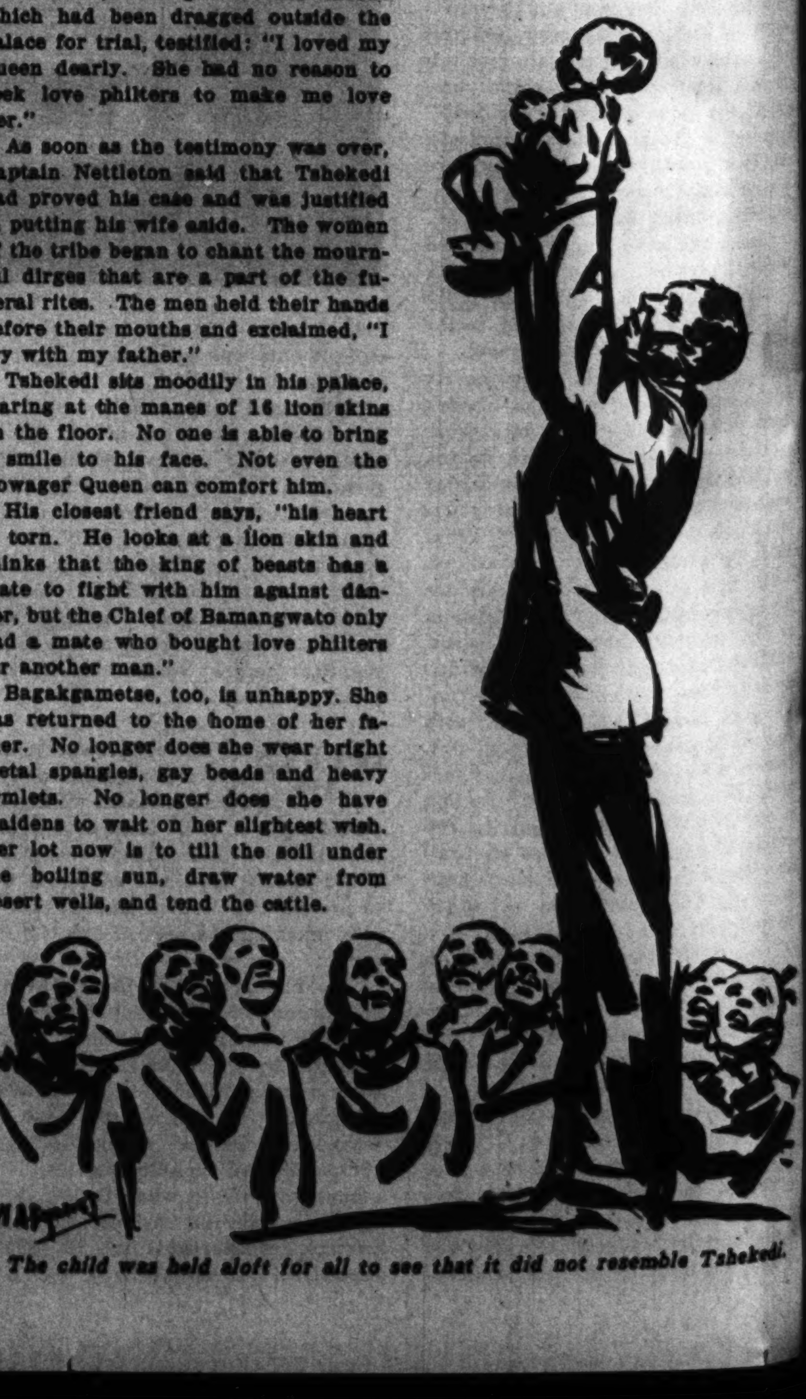
Tshekedi, arising from his throne which had been dragged outside the palace for trial, testified: "I loved my queen dearly. She had no reason to seek love philters to make me love her."

As soon as the testimony was over, Captain Nettleton said that Tshekedi had proved his case and was justified in putting his wife aside. The women of the tribe began to chant the mournful dirges that are a part of the funeral rites. The men held their hands before their mouths and exclaimed, "I cry with my father."

Tshekedi sits moodily in his palace, staring at the manes of 16 lion skins on the floor. No one is able to bring a smile to his face. Not even the Dowager Queen can comfort him.

His closest friend says, "his heart is torn. He looks at a lion skin and thinks that the king of beasts has a mate to fight with him against danger, but the Chief of Bamangwato only had a mate who bought love philters for another man."

Bagakgametse, too, is unhappy. She has returned to the home of her father. No longer does she wear bright metal spangles, gay beads and heavy armlets. No longer does she have maidens to wait on her slightest wish. Her lot now is to till the soil under the boiling sun, draw water from desert wells, and tend the cattle.



The child was held aloft for all to see that it did not resemble Tshekedi.

Where Was Henry Denhardt When Mrs. Taylor Died?

The Burning Question Around Which a Now Famous Kentucky Mystery Crime Revolves.

Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor.

Henry H. Denhardt.

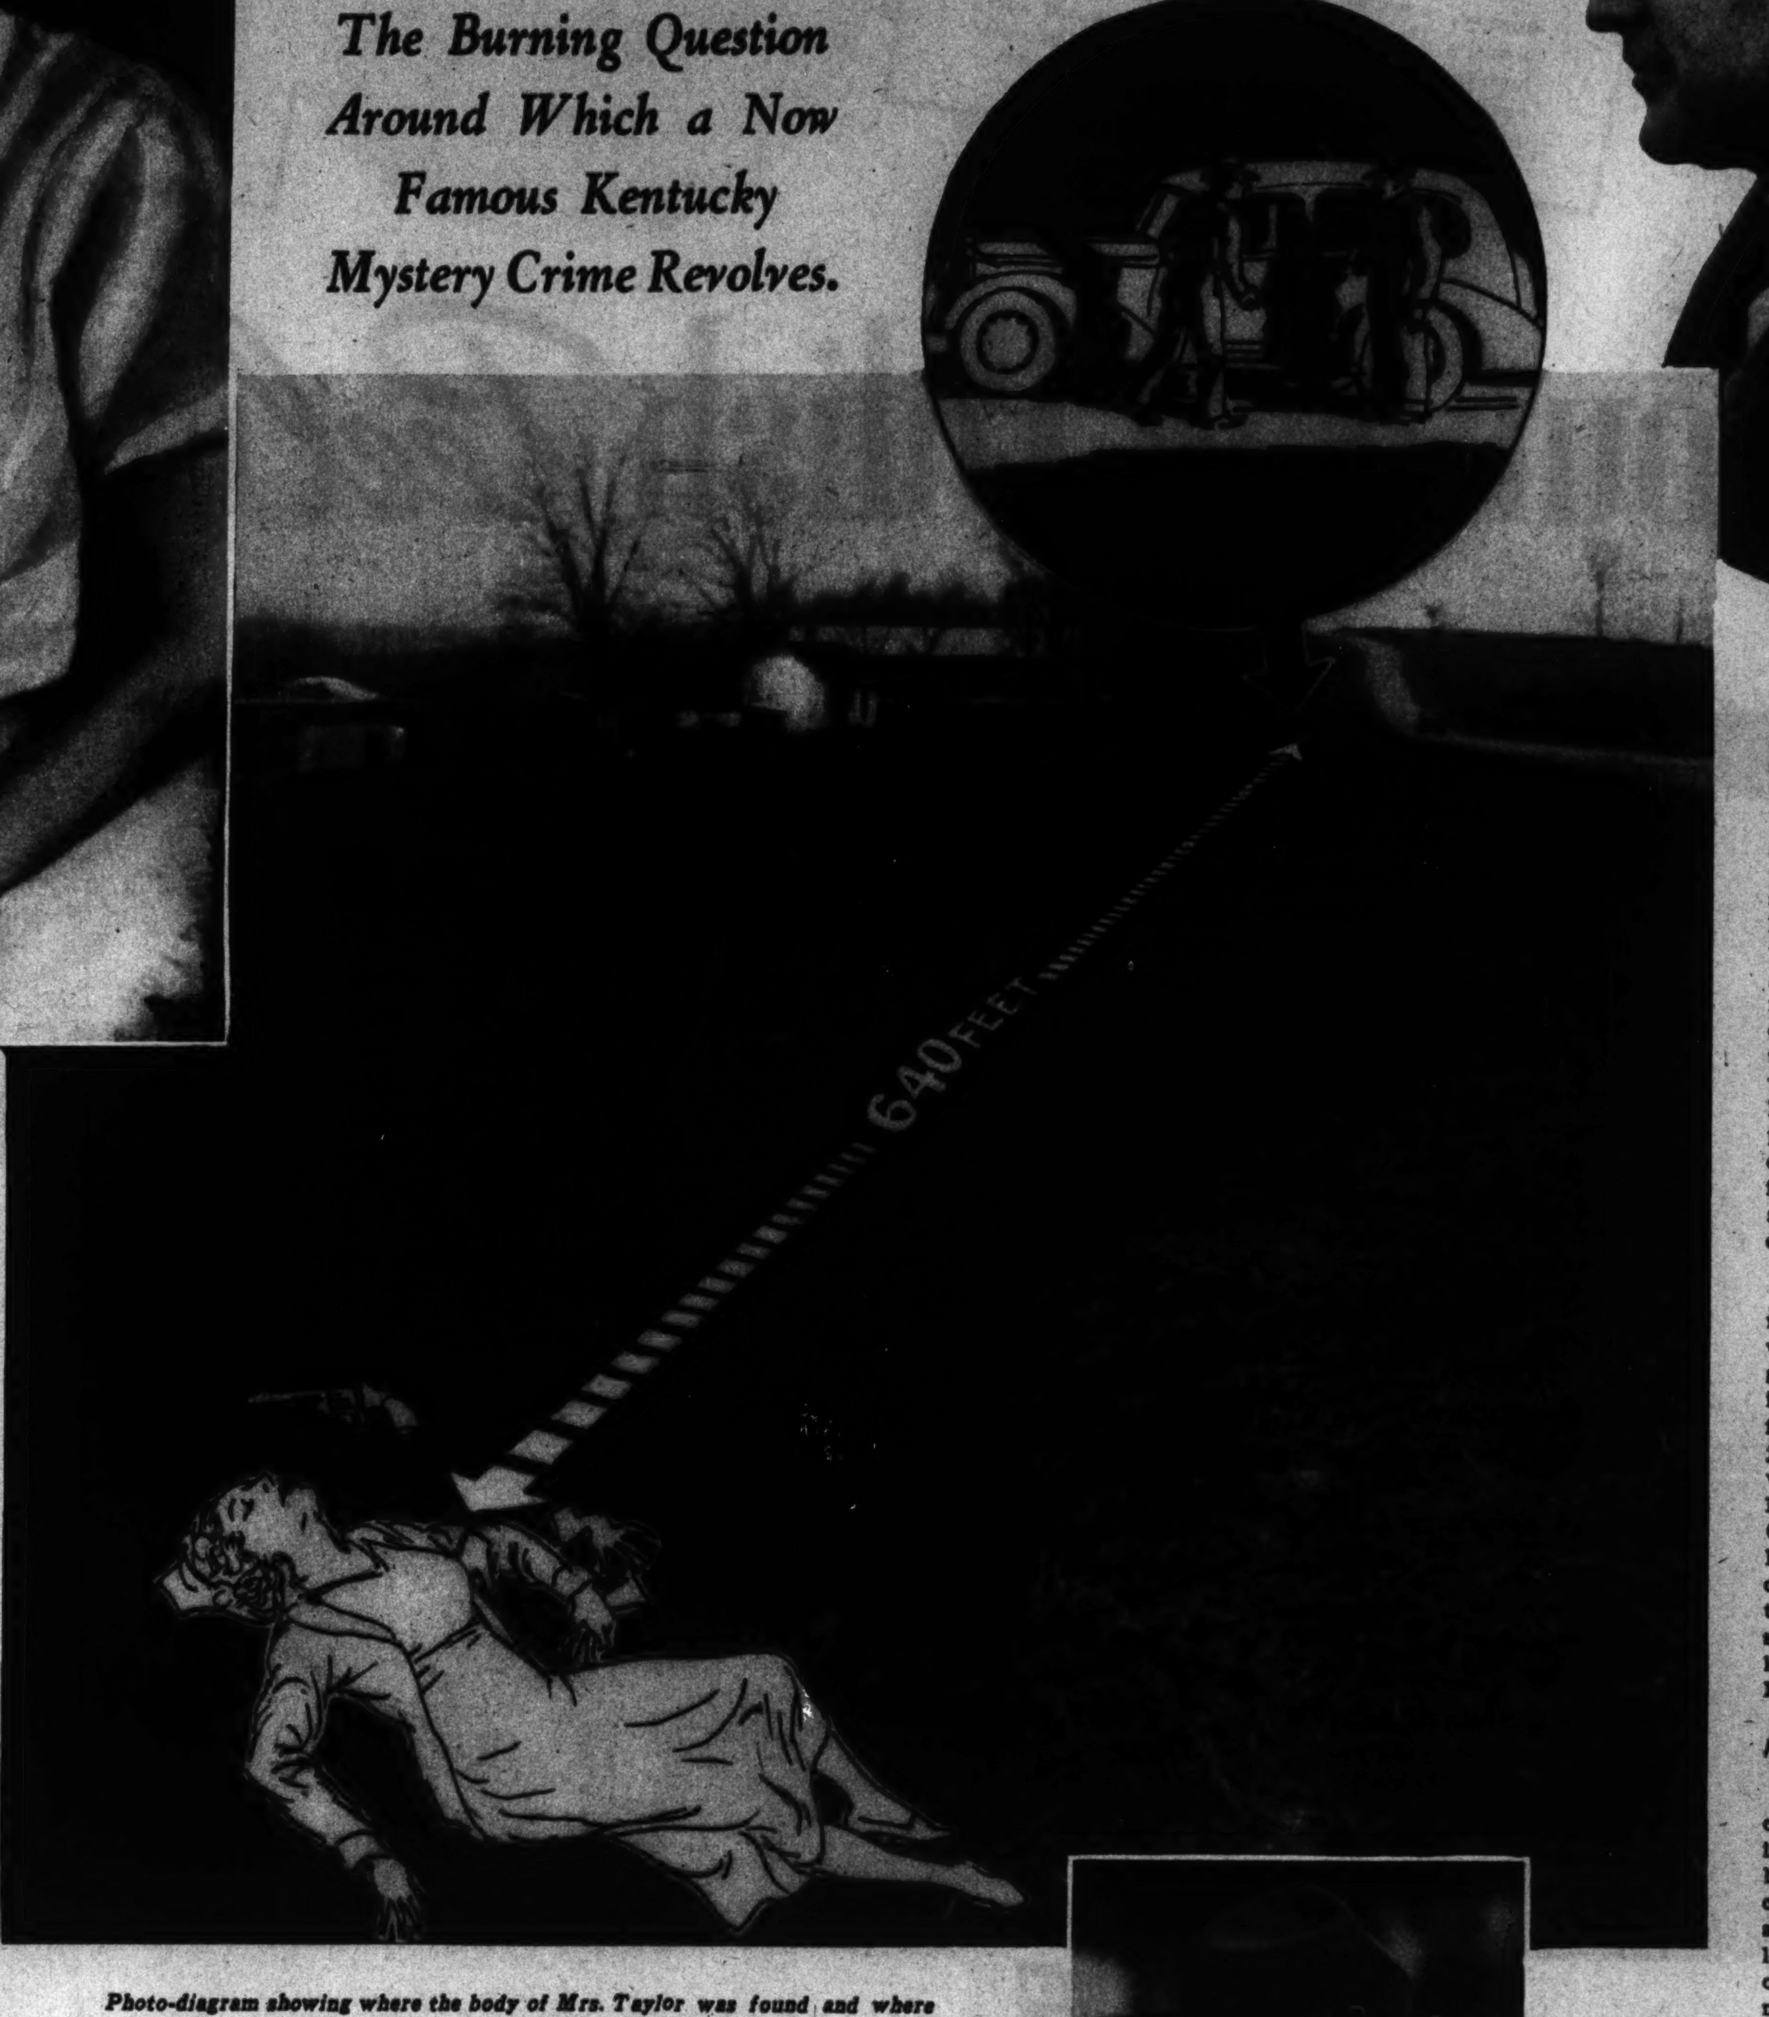

Photo-diagram showing where the body of Mrs. Taylor was found and where Denhardt was seen almost immediately after.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Staff

LA GRANGE, Kentucky.

MOTORISTS who skim back and forth along highway 22 between here and New Castle, 13 miles away, slow down when they come to George Baker's house, five miles out, and glance at a stake, driven firmly into the ground, a few feet from the boundary of the Baker land, and make eye-measures of the distance that stretches from the stake to Baker's dooryard, wondering whether a man could have been at the spot that the stake marks when a fatal shot was fired and back at the house when Baker, having heard the shot, came out of it.

There is tranquility now at the Baker homestead, broken by nothing more startling than the cackling of hens and a dog's bark as Baker goes about his spring chores and his wife works in her kitchen, just as there was tranquility on a November night, but it was broken then by a revolver shot and Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor was found dead in the ditch where the stake now stands sentinel, with the service revolver of H. H. Denhardt, former Lieutenant-Governor and Ex-Adjutant-General of the State, lying beside her. Denhardt, when George Baker came out of his house at the sound of the shot, was standing beside his disabled automobile in Baker's driveway.

It is 640 feet from where Mrs. Taylor died to where Denhardt stood when Baker came out. Those 640 feet are the man's defense against the charge of the Commonwealth of Kentucky that he killed the woman. In terms of time it is a minute and a half upon which the man's fate hangs, for that is the time in which a hurrying man could have covered the 640 feet. This writer, not hurrying, walked from the stake to the house in a minute and 45 seconds.

Baker, when his story was first told, was understood to have said that he was standing with Denhardt when the shot was heard, but he later said that he was in the house and that he did not come out immediately. The interval that elapsed before he saw Denhardt standing by his car is subject to the uncertainty that inheres in an estimate of time by a man unaccustomed to estimating time. It is an uncertainty upon which Denhardt's lawyers will rely when he has his day in court and the Commonwealth undertakes to show that a minute and a half is not enough to clothe the accused with the presumption of innocence.

There was a second shot that night, or something that sounded like a shot. Baker heard it as he was crossing his yard, half way to Denhardt's automobile. As Baker heard it, the sound was not as loud as he had heard indoors. He is definite about that. It was like the smack of a light-calibred rifle. Strangely, though, when Baker discerned Denhardt standing by the left rear wheel of the automobile, and asked if he had heard "that shot," Denhardt spoke of the second one—"wasn't the second one fearful?" It was the first one that had sounded "fearful" to Baker. Mrs. Baker did not hear a second shot.

There has not to this day been an explanation of the second shot, if there was one. In Denhardt's revolver, lying beside the dead woman, were two empty shells, but it is assumed that the hammer rested on an empty and that only one bullet was fired from that weapon. Ballistic experts are unable to say positively whether the two empty shells were fired at the same time or at different times. Difference in the degree of corrosion may indicate under chemical analysis a difference in the lapsed time since each was fired, but even such an indication is uncertain because of the possible presence of other influences.

Curiously, in the case of the shells found in Denhardt's revolver, the one upon which the hammer rested, from which had sped the bullet to Mrs. Taylor's heart, was more corroded than the other, which is presumed to have been carried as an empty, although the more recently fired shell would be expected to show the less corrosion. It is a point over which the learned lawyers and their experts are expected to grapple at the trial of the case. Denhardt's suggestion, implying that there was no empty, is what Mrs. Taylor fired one to attract his attention and then shot herself.

The greater question is whose hand held the General's service revolver when it was fired, as determinative of murder or suicide. Although, when Denhardt professed an eagerness to testify at the Coroner's inquest he declared he could quickly tell "who" killed the woman, a form of speech which suggested that she might have been killed by someone else, there has been nothing divulged since to suggest involvement of any third person, and it is considered certain that the only question at Denhardt's trial will be whether he killed Mrs. Taylor or she killed herself.

It is now said that if Denhardt had testified at the inquest, he would have said that Mrs. Taylor killed herself. He has not given his version of what occurred on that fatal night, but he has said that Mrs. Taylor was despondent because her daughters opposed her marriage and that when they were riding together a few hours before her death she threatened to kill herself and snatched his revolver from the dashboard compartment of his car and that he took it from her and locked it in the compartment.

AGAINST this, the attorneys for the Commonwealth have assembled information which they declare points conclusively to murder. Not all of this information will be competent as testimony, but all of it enters into the picture which they have reconstructed to confute the suggestion of suicide, they say.

Mrs. Taylor, as people describe her, was lovely and lovable. Daughter of a distinguished family she had, following the death of her husband, R. B. Taylor, five years before, taken over the management of his laundry business and had handled it successfully. She had two daughters, Mary, 21, and Frances, 17, to whom she was devoted. Partly on their account she had declared that she would not marry again and had not during her widowhood received attentions from any man.

Denhardt when he was a colonel in the army.

Denhardt following his retirement about a year ago, bought the 850-acre Spring Hill farm, near here, which was once part of the estate of Mrs. Taylor's father-in-law, the late William G. Taylor. Here in La Grange he saw Mrs. Taylor and became at once infatuated with her. He had been divorced at Bowling Green, where he formerly lived, after 32 years of married life. He might have had himself introduced to Mrs. Taylor, but he chose to resort to a ruse, calling on her under the pretext that he wanted to rent a house that she owned. That was last June.

Once acquainted, Denhardt courted the beautiful widow persistently, calling on her almost every day and taking her to places like the Louisville Country Club and the Pendennis Club. Mrs. Taylor informed her daughters and other relatives after a time that Denhardt wanted to marry her. The daughters had hoped that she would not remarry, but did not oppose it beyond expressing disapproval of Denhardt. Other relatives and friends took the same position advising her to consider carefully before accepting him. However, in August she yielded to his wooing and accepted and wore the diamond ring that he gave her.

Afterwards reports reached her which caused her to waver. It is now said that she had decided to break the engagement although it is believed that she told him during the day that they spent together in Louisville before the night of her death that she would not marry him. They had dinner at a place in the Louisville suburbs and Mrs. Taylor telephoned her daughter, Frances, who was expecting her mother to accompany her to a dance as chaperone.

"Listen honey," she said, "I'll not go with you to the dance because I have a terrible headache, but I'll be home in a little while. Don't go until I come."

Frances waited until late and then, at the suggestion of her grandmother, went on to the party.

Mrs. Taylor did not return home. Denhardt's car passed through La Grange, but did not stop. He says Mrs. Taylor suggested that they ride farther on account of her headache. Mrs. Taylor's relatives do not believe she passed by her home of her own volition.

Nobody has been found who saw them after they left the suburban place, until at a cross road between La Grange and New Castle the car was headed into the driveway at Barney Browning's filling station to make a turn and the engine stopped and would not start again.

Browning and George Baker, who was lounging at the station, came out and tried to get it started by pushing the car, but failed. They thought it strange that Denhardt did not get out and help push. Mrs. Taylor explained that he was not feeling well. She was agitated and showed that she was anxious to get back home. While Baker was away, getting his car from home to push Denhardt's and try to get it started, J. B. Hundley of La Grange came along and Mrs. Taylor asked him to tow the Denhardt car to La Grange. He was willing but there was no tow rope. He said he would go on into La Grange and send out a mechanic with a fresh battery. He departed and Baker came and pushed the disabled car as far as his house without getting the engine started. So he pushed it into the driveway and presently, because there was nothing else that he could do, he went into the house, leaving Denhardt and Mrs. Taylor sitting in the General's car.

Mrs. Taylor, because of her restiveness or because further conversation with her aged admirer was distasteful, got out of the machine and went walking toward the lights of Browning's filling station. The question for a jury to decide will be whether she went alone or was accompanied by Denhardt. She, or they, walked the 640 feet to the corner post of Baker's land and a few feet beyond. On the opposite side of the concrete road between the driveway and the post, a search disclosed the searchlight and keys which had been carried from the Denhardt car.

THE shot—and, after a brief interval, Denhardt standing beside his car back there at Baker's, connecting the shot with Mrs. Taylor in his comment to Baker, looking for his revolver and not finding it in the compartment, saying how awful it was and that Mrs. Taylor "was" the finest lady he had ever known . . . speaking of her in the past tense as of one who no longer lived, according to Baker.

It is contended on the part of the Commonwealth that the physical facts negative the suggestion that Mrs. Taylor might have killed herself. Although she could have unlocked the dashboard compartment and obtained the revolver when Denhardt's attention was distracted by battery trouble and she might have walked back up the road under pretext of looking for a lost glove as Denhardt says, it is questioned whether she could have discharged the heavy long-barreled service revolver with its heavy trigger pull in the position in which it must have been held to send a bullet ranging upward and to the right from beneath her left breast. That is, with her arm curved and her hand cramped in reversed position. It might have been done by clutching the butt of the weapon with both hands and using one or both thumbs to push the trigger, but it is disputed that she used her left hand because one of her gloves was wrapped loosely around that hand.

Whether the shot was fired by Mrs. Taylor or another, it was held close to her body, as shown by powder marks.

The paraffin test, relied upon by the Commonwealth to prove that Mrs. Taylor did not fire the shot, will be bitterly fought by the defense, with the help of its experts, who will say that it is highly inconclusive. The test is made by pouring paraffin on the subject's hands, peeling it off when cool and subjecting it to a hypersensitive nitric reagent. If nitrate in the form of purplish pinpoints appear on the paraffin, an investigator may attribute it to the rearward gaseous discharge from a revolver when fired and strongly infer that the hand under test has recently fired a weapon.

King of the Hoboes

this subject, especially when he considers the Montana laws. A friend of his was arrested for vagrancy in one Montana village, sentenced to 11 months and 29 days imprisonment, released, and promptly given the same sentence for setting foot in the next town. So far as the contitutionality of such laws is concerned, Jeff is almost unquestionably right. Many of them constitute forced labor and violate the Fourteenth Amendment.

HE RAMBLES on, telling how the hoboes sent a cable to the Royal Family on the occasion of Edward's abdication ("cost two bucks fifty and 10 cents tax, but it was woith it"), how he is troubled by pretenders, one of whom never claims the kingship, but makes a habit of "abdicationing"; how he dined at the Union League Club, joined the Minute Men, hates strike breakers, worked on the Mayor's Unemployment Committee in New York and got his fellow committeeman, Judge Gary, to pay him a call at the Hotel de Gink. . . . "I wish I had it in my power to give you an opportunity to better yourselves," said the late president of the United States Steel Corporation, as he followed his fur-coated footman out of the flop house. And nothing gives the hobo more pleasure than to pull out the dirty old letter President Taft wrote him, agreeing that good roads would provide employment and speed the growth of the nation. Jeff has been entertained by several Presidents and has many letters from their secretaries, but Taft is the only one who wrote him a personal letter.

"So yuh see, it's been a very—busy, uh sort of outfit don'tcha t'ink so?" Jeff says beaming. "We work, don'tcha see. An' we're gettin' some place." Vaguely, one does see, but a few hours' contact with Jeff's fervid patter and cluttered agglomeration of ideas is so exhausting that if one gets the general drift, that's about all that could be expected. He shifts so suddenly from a discourse on the first bread line for babies (which he originated) to the King of England (whose name he's mislaid) to the need for more hobo generosity and the courageous service of hoboes in the post-war influenza epidemic and his own priority rights as the first airplane stowaway and the technique of riding the rods and the gratitude he's won from the nob-by-nobs and the outrageous pretensions of his pretenders—the whole monologue frequently interrupted by excursions into his pockets for proofs or for dimes to give to shoddy wayfarers — that the mind that attempts to follow him becomes lost and breathless.

Afterwards he's ashamed to have included so much autobiography in his account—and strange though it may seem, every tiny inaccurate bit of personal history was wrung out of him with utmost difficulty. "I done dis not so much for Jeff," he explains, "I'm showin' ya dis not so much fer meself, but to show what we done fer da Government. Now, why can't they do somet'ing for us. See?" And a chorus of ragged young men squatting against the yellow wall of convention headquarters, echoes "Yeah."

addition to those with gener- war slogans, many posters in collection bear specific mes-es. Because most of the regular army joined the rebels, the Government has had the task of creating a fighting force out of municipal guards, untrained workers and peasants, who stood in need of the most elementary instruction. Food and munitions supplies have been limited, making rigid conservation essential. At the same time, it has been necessary to keep up the public morale in the face of the rebels' steady gains in the early stages of the war. Posters aimed at all these objectives have been issued.

To emphasize the instructions to soldiers, the Government prepared a series of posters for their particular benefit. One designed to prevent waste of ammunition reads: "Always make use of the classical fighting positions to make your shots certain. A well-disciplined soldier should not need more than 50 cartridges daily." Another says: "The quantity of shots bewilders the enemy; the quality kills." A third tells what to do when an enemy bombing plane appears: "Neither shoot nor run. The former is useless, the latter suicide. Drop to the ground. Whoever runs places his life in great peril and reveals to the enemy the position of our forces."

Other posters bear lessons in sanitation. "The best weapon is vaccination; do not refuse it," one says. A similar poster warns: "Do not drink unclean water. It is better to be thirsty than to have typhoid." Another, depicting an unkempt, long-haired militiaman beside a well-groomed young soldier, exhorts: "Cut your hair. You will be more comfortable, more hygienic."

ANOTHER warning of a different sort has for its central figure a colossal ear, to remind soldiers that spies are about, and that confidences to strangers or even to sweethearts may betray their cause.

The drab scenes of war have been brightened by the strikingly colored placards which decorate walls and buildings in the beleaguered Spanish cities. Some have been made on so large a scale as to cover whole building fronts. Before Christmas, the walls of Madrid were plastered with posters reading: "Christmas joy for our little ones," in connection with the campaign to buy gifts for soldiers' children and for orphans. In urging citizens to leave the capital in the darkest days of the siege, the Government issued a series adapting Goya's famous etchings on the horrors of war, with modern slogans to fit the situation.

The munitions factories of Spain are humming to provide sinews of combat in this grim war, and the printing presses are roaring as well. The rival factions depend on both to help them to victory. The brush and the crayon may not be mightier than the bayonet and bombing plane, but they are potent allies.

Meals That Fall Short Of Vitamins Served In Many Homes

You Don't Realize Whether Your Vitamin Supply is Short Until Poor Health Shows It. But, by Adding ONE FOOD to Your Diet EVERY DAY, You Can Make Sure of a Regular EXTRA Supply of These 4 Vitamins

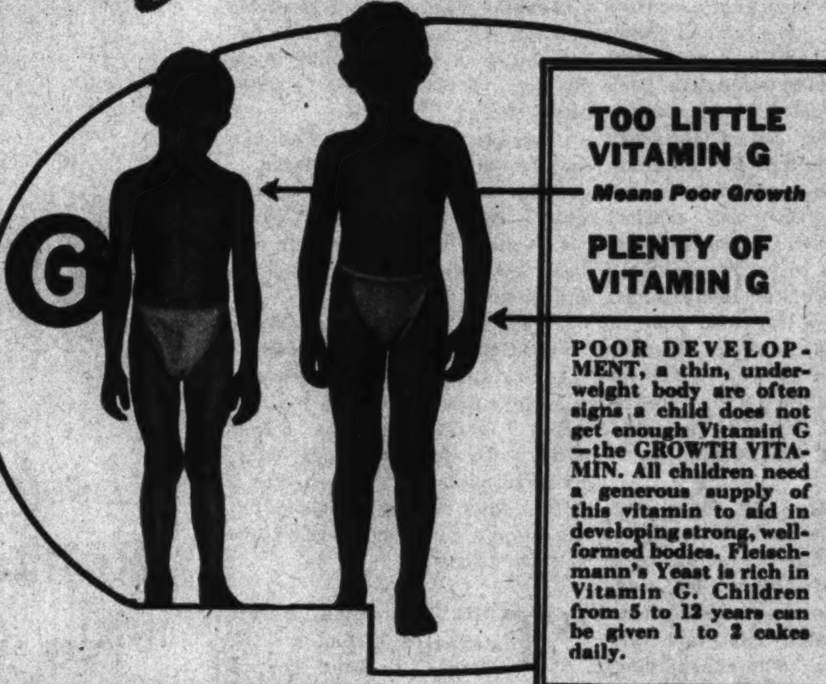
THESE 4 vitamins, A, B, D and G, are needed daily for the best health of vital parts of your body.

Yet—many people are victims of poor health because their meals do not furnish enough of these essential food elements.

The addition of just one food to your ordinary diet assures you a SPECIAL extra supply of these 4 vitamins daily.

That one food is FLEISCHMANN'S fresh YEAST. No other one natural food provides such a rich supply of all 4 of these vitamins combined.

Give yourself the benefit of these extra vitamins in addition to what your ordinary meals supply. Eat Fleischmann's fresh Yeast regularly —3 cakes a day, a cake about ½ hour before each meal. Eat it plain, or dissolved in a little water. Begin today! It's a good plan to order two or three days' supply at a time from your grocer. Fleischmann's fresh Yeast will keep perfectly in your icebox.



POOR DEVELOPMENT, a thin, underweight body are often signs a child does not get enough Vitamin G—the GROWTH VITAMIN. All children need a generous supply of this vitamin to aid in developing strong, well-formed bodies. Fleischmann's Yeast is rich in Vitamin G. Children from 5 to 12 years can be given 1 to 2 cakes daily.

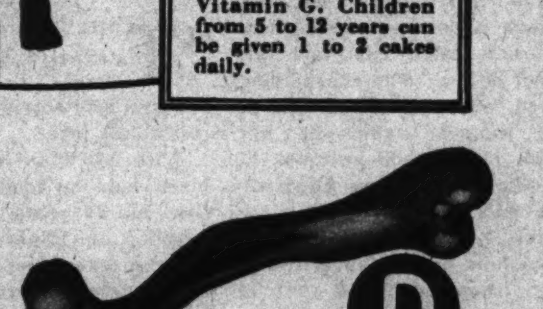
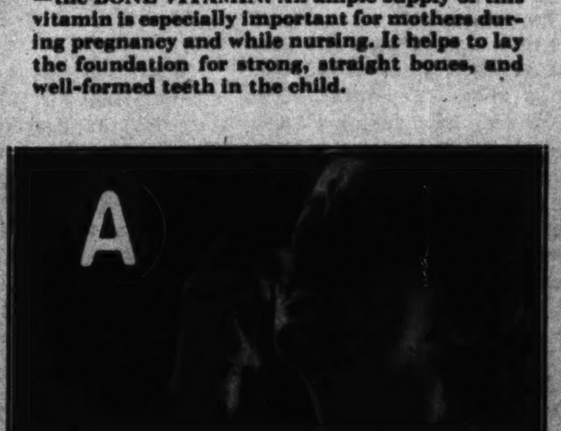
A STRONG stomach (see above), healthy bowels and intestines and steady nerves need an ample daily supply of Vitamin B. Fleischmann's Yeast added to your regular diet helps to increase your supply of Vitamin B. It is one of the richest natural foods in this essential NERVE VITAMIN.



DEPRIVED OF VITAMIN D

CROOKED BONES that result in bowlegs and knock-knees can come from too little Vitamin D—the BONE VITAMIN. An ample supply of this vitamin is especially important for mothers during pregnancy and while nursing. It helps to lay the foundation for strong, straight bones, and well-formed teeth in the child.



NOT ENOUGH VITAMIN A

INCREASED SUSCEPTIBILITY TO COLDS, a weakened condition of nose and throat membranes and lowered general resistance, can come from a shortage of Vitamin A. Let Fleischmann's Yeast help to keep you better supplied with this necessary vitamin.

LUCYLE ROBERTS—famous woman Rodeo Bronco Rider—has the glowing health, vitality and stamina that show she is well supplied with these 4 health-building vitamins.

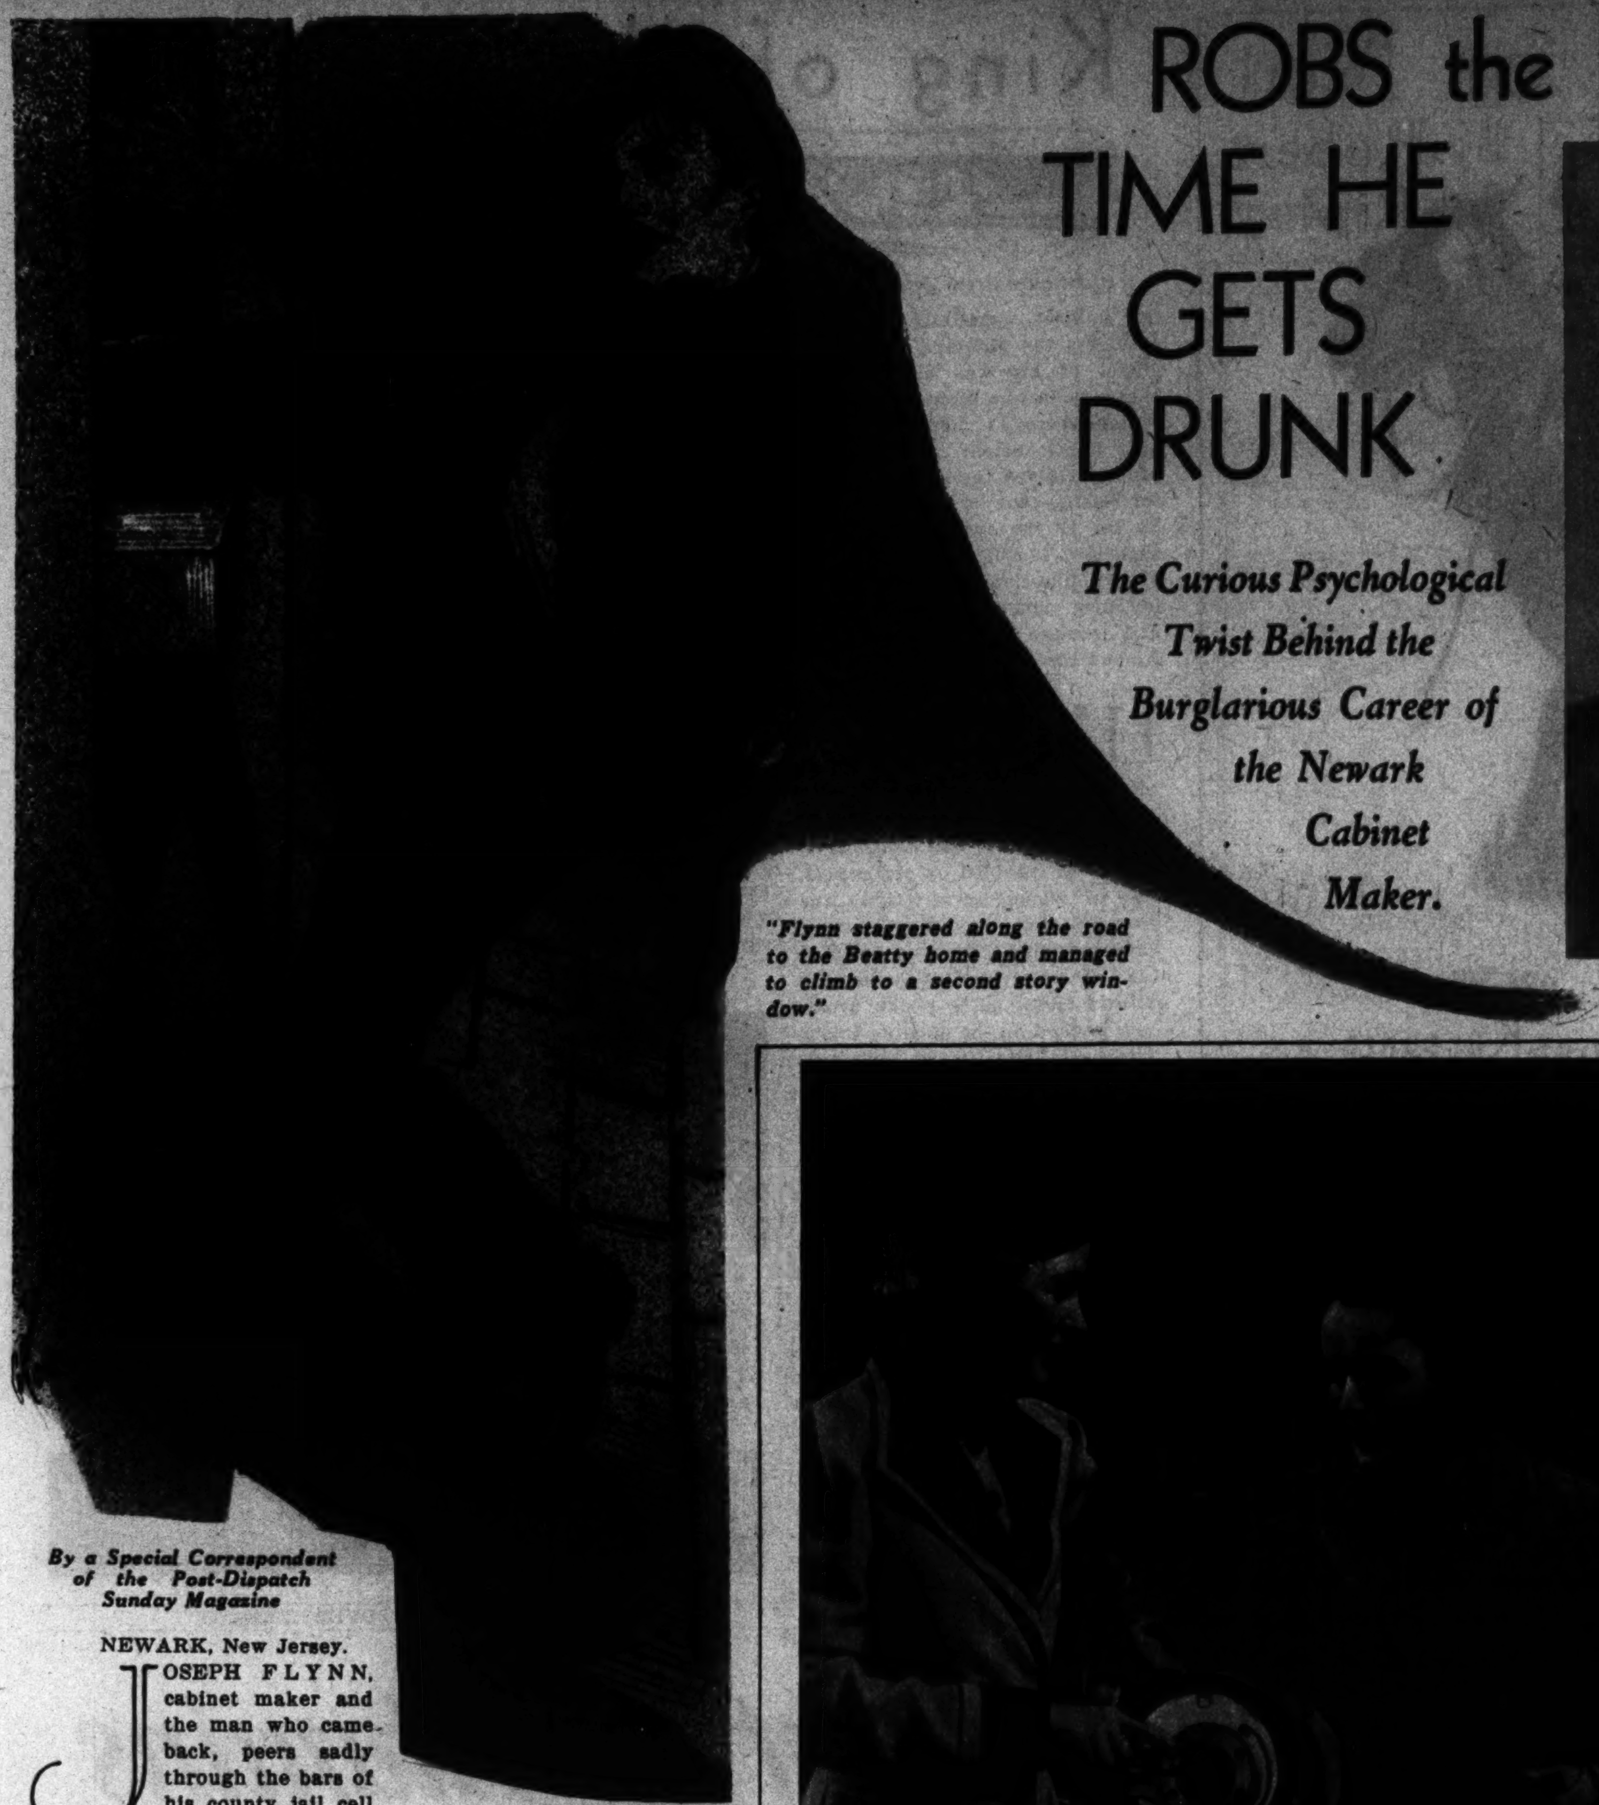
The Curious Psychological Twist Behind the Burglarious Career of the Newark Cabinet Maker.



"Flynn staggered along the road to the Beatty home and managed to climb to a second story window."

A13455
5 11 33

Joseph Flynn.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEWARK, New Jersey.

JOSEPH FLYNN, cabinet maker and the man who came back, peers sadly through the bars of his county jail cell these days, and wonders aloud what strange twist of his subconscious mind drives him unerringly to rob the gabled home of Robert A. Beatty whenever Flynn is intoxicated.

The Beatty home—Mr. Beatty is a well-to-do insurance executive—is a lovely, tree-fringed place, but no more handsome than dozens of others in suburban Glen Ridge. Its peculiar fascination for Flynn has that young man begging his jailers for examination by a "psychologist."

But from the way matters stand now it will be some years before he has to worry about the magnetic lure of the Beatty house again. This is the third time he has come out of an alcoholic stupor to find himself under arrest on breaking and entering charges. The first time he served three months, the second two to three years.

Back in May, 1933, Flynn staggered along the road to the Beatty home and managed to climb up to a second floor window, but made so much noise about it the insurance man heard him and telephoned police. The constabulary arrived, sirens howling, and the little cabinet maker—he only weighs 112 pounds—wormed his way into a cedar chest filled with moth balls.

There he hid chuckling to himself at how he had outwitted police. Then he found that his cramped position made it very difficult for him to breathe in the first place and in the second place all he could inhale was the fumes of the camphor insecticide. When police pulled him free he was unconscious and it was two hours before he was revived.

He took his sentence with good grace, emerged from jail and went back to work. He fought, so he says, to keep from taking a drink, but succumbed to the blandishments of friends one night and came to a few hours later in the act of stuffing some of the Beatty silverware into a sack. His astonishment caused him to fall back a few steps against a little table which capsized and brought Mr. Beatty hastening downstairs.

Little Flynn was no match for the husky business man and soon he was off to the jug again.

"Right then and there I decided not to touch the stuff again," he said. "So what. . . ."

So last month a Bloomfield bus driver ran out his patience trying to convince a stubborn passenger that Newark was the terminus of the line. Seven times over the circuit the bus flew with the passenger snoring plaintively except when he awoke briefly to argue that he would not get off until he had caught up on his sleep.

The bus driver summoned police. They found a sack of loot and some of Beatty's letters.

Leaning against the bars of his cell Mr. Flynn seemed a little aggrieved that police should think he only visited the Beatty place three times.

"Absurd," he said. "You can say 10 times and come closer to the figure. I can't personally be exact about it because I never went there with larceny in my heart except when I was under the influence of liquor.

"Yep, it's the liquor all right. Every time I get drunk it seems I must go to the Beatty house. It's a curious fixation I have for that home. Have you been there? Well, a fine residence it is. Maybe a psychologist can tell why I do it. All I can say myself is that whenever I get a jag on I find myself at Beatty's.

"THIS last time I was cockeyed almost a week before I went there."

Flynn said this with something resembling pride.

With his blue eyes and long black hair he looked much less than his 29 years. But he kept harping on liquor so long the reporter determined to purloin the technique of the criminologists of fiction and "cherchez la femme"—find the woman.

The prisoner jumped—it was a clean hit.

"Leave her name out of this," he said hotly although no name had been mentioned. "She is married now and has a little baby."

"Who?" we asked.

"Why the girl that used to work for the Beattys, of course. The one I used to visit. How do you think I learned the layout of the place. But look, fellow, you're barking up the wrong tree. It's the liquor that does it, just liquor."

The writer agreed that liquor was among the roots of all evil.

"Oh I don't know about that," snapped the prisoner. "That time I crawled into the camphor chest I believe the liquor fumes must have served as an antidote. If I hadn't been drinking on that occasion I would be dead today."

"And you wouldn't have been in the Beatty home," added this voice of conscience.

Flynn looked disgusted.

"You," he said, "would think of that."

Be VITAL if you want to be ALLURING!
Says LOVELY MARSHA HUNT
BRILLIANT YOUNG PARAMOUNT ACTRESS
GIRLS! LET THE WONDER BREAD "VITALITY PLAN" HELP YOU REGAIN YOUR RADIANT CHARM!
OH, DEAR—BOB WANTS ME TO GO TEA-DANCING WITH HIM...AND I JUST HAVEN'T THE PEP! I WISH I WERE LIKE YOU.
CHEER UP, ALICE—I USED TO TIRE QUICKLY TOO—UNTIL I LEARNED ABOUT THE WONDER BREAD VITALITY PLAN.
THAT SOUNDS FINE — BUT I'VE TRIED ALL KINDS OF THOSE SPECIAL FOODS—NO GOOD!
WHO SAID ANYTHING ABOUT SPECIAL FOODS? THIS PLAN IS DIFFERENT! YOU EAT THE FOODS YOU LIKE BUT CUT DOWN ON THE HEAVY, RICH FOODS THAT MAKE YOU DULL AND SLOW YOU DOWN... AND INSTEAD EAT 2 SLICES OF WONDER BREAD WITH EVERY MEAL....
SO THAT'S HOW YOU GOT BACK YOUR VITALITY!
YOU BET! YOU SEE, WONDER BREAD GIVES YOU ENERGY YOU NEED... AND IT'S SLO-BAKED TO HELP YOU GET THIS ENERGY MORE QUICKLY AND COMPLETELY...
THAT SOUNDS SWELL! I'M GOING TO START RIGHT AWAY. AND I'M GOING TO GET MY YOUNGER BROTHER ON IT, TOO.
GOOD! YOU'LL SEE WHAT A DIFFERENCE IT MAKES. AND BELIEVE ME, IT'S JUST WHAT MOTHER SAYS THE YOUNGSTERS NEED TO HELP THEM GROW STRONG AND STURDY TOO!
AND I'M ONE OF THAT 55,000! I COMPARED WONDER BREAD WITH OTHER KINDS — AND WONDER BREAD WON HANDS DOWN. THERE'S NO OTHER BREAD LIKE IT!
I COULD SEE AND FEEL THE DIFFERENCE
I COULD SMELL THE DIFFERENCE
I COULD TASTE THE DIFFERENCE

MARSHA HUNT
Vivid little Paramount actress. Heed the advice she gives: "Nobody likes dull, uninteresting people. You must be vital, radiantly charming. That's what makes you alluring, exciting, sought-after!"

55,000 out of 65,000 women, actually 84 out of every 100, who compared Wonder Bread with other breads in this famous 1-2-3 store test, agreed: WONDER BREAD IS BEST!

Mrs. [illegible]
NEW YORK CITY

Note the tender crust, the pure, white color, the smooth, even texture. Then—rub your fingers over a slice. Note how smooth, slightly moist it is ... close-knit for easy spreading. No holes, lumps or imperfections.

Hold a slice of Wonder Bread close to your nose. And note that appetizing "wheaty" fragrance ... so fresh and clean. Your nose, too, can tell you the remarkable difference between Wonder Bread and any other kind.

Then—taste a bite of Wonder Bread slowly. Let it linger in your mouth ... so that you get all its delicious full-flavored goodness. The Wonder Bakers have spent a fortune to bring you this incomparable slo-baked flavor.

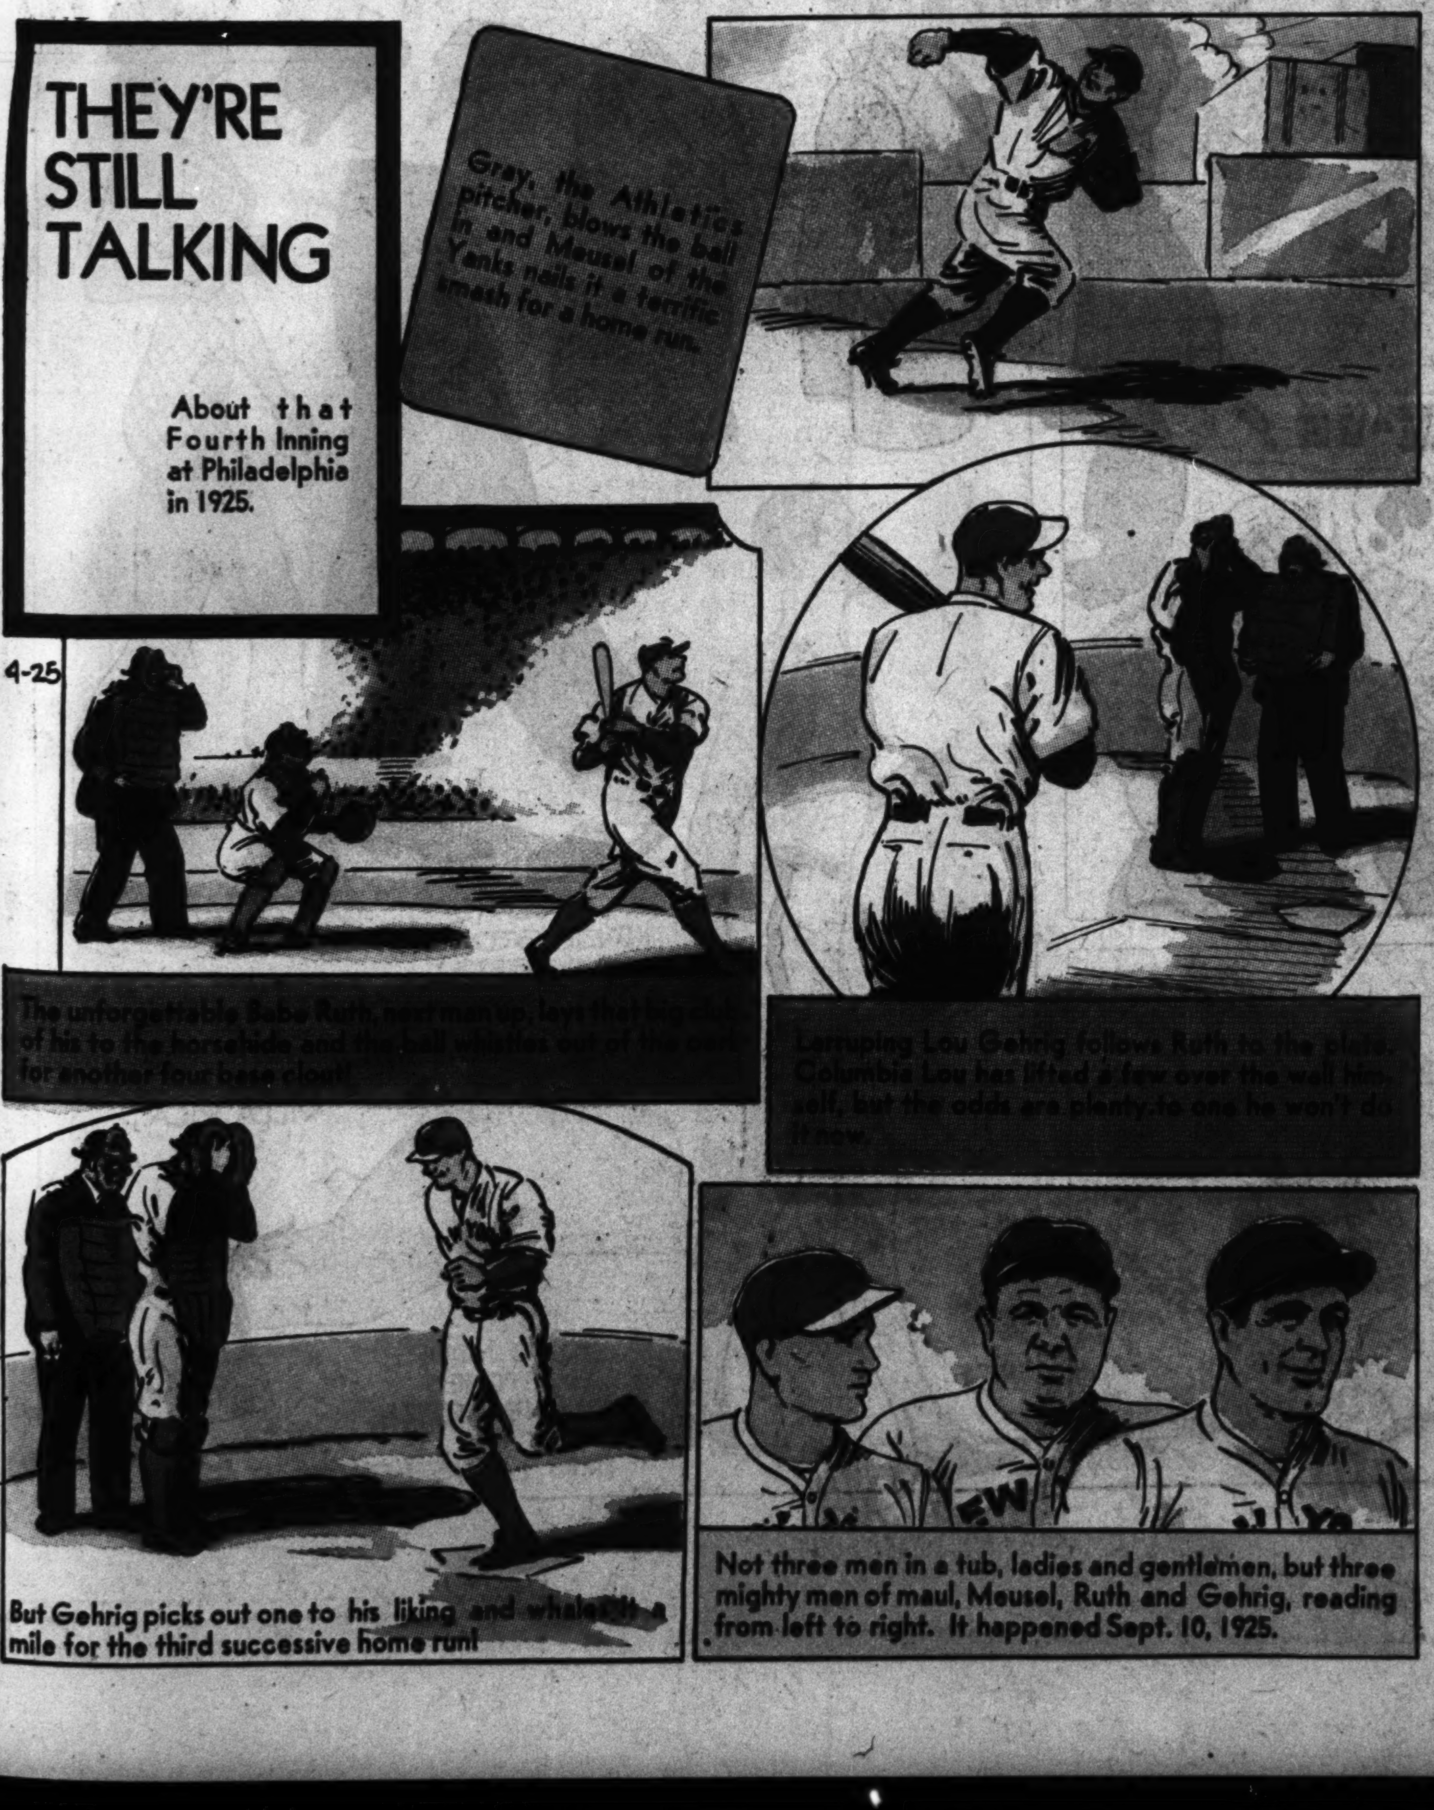
B. W. DEPEW
SAY, BRANT, WHAT DO I HAVE TO DO-VAULT OVER YOU? HE'LL CALL MY NAME IN A SECOND!
SHHH-HE'S STILL TALKING, BUD!
MAY I PRESENT TO YOU A BOY WHOM YOU ALL KNOW AND ADMIRE-NED BRANT!



THEY'RE STILL TALKING
About that Fourth Inning at Philadelphia in 1925.
Gray, the Athletics pitcher, blows the ball in and Meusel of the Yanks nails it a terrific smash for a home run.
4-25
The unforgettable Babe Ruth, next man up, lays that big club of his to the horsehide and the ball whistles out of the park for another four base clout!
Larruping Lou Gehrig follows Ruth to the plate. Columbia Lou has lifted a few over the wall himself, but the odds are plenty to one he won't do it now.
But Gehrig picks out one to his liking and whales it a mile for the third successive home run!
Not three men in a tub, ladies and gentlemen, but three mighty men of maul, Meusel, Ruth and Gehrig, reading from left to right. It happened Sept. 10, 1925.

This is the playing field for boys' soccer. The regulation field is larger, being from 50 to 60 feet wide and from 100 to 130 yards long. The rectangular area near the goal is called the goal area. The other rectangle is the penalty kick area.

The objective in soccer is to put the ball through the opponents' goal under the crossbar. It counts one point. Any part of the body except the arms and hands can be used. There are eleven on a side. The adult game lasts an hour and a half, with an intermission of 10 minutes between halves. The boys game should be considerably shorter. Change ends at half time. Gym clothes and tennis shoes make a good uniform.

WIN POPULARITY!

KATHRYN CONKLIN and EDWARD COLEMAN—Cup Winners in Intercollegiate Dance Contest
Specially posed pictures of these popular dancers (cup winners in dance contest held in New York City) show how to do "The Shag," "Truckin'," "The Susie Q," and "Collegiate Swing" in Arthur Murray's exciting new dance book.

ONE of the surest ways to be popular and get asked places is to be a good dancer.

But, even the best dancers become self-conscious and unhappy if they have to appear at a party with a face broken out with unattractive-looking pimples.

Fleischmann's fresh Yeast has helped thousands of young people to overcome this trouble. It helps to clear the blood of the waste poisons which usually aggravate pimples and ordinary skin blemishes.

If you have any tendency to a broken-out skin, start eating Fleischmann's Yeast at once. And—while you are eating it—be sure to save the labels for your copy of Arthur Murray's grand dance book!

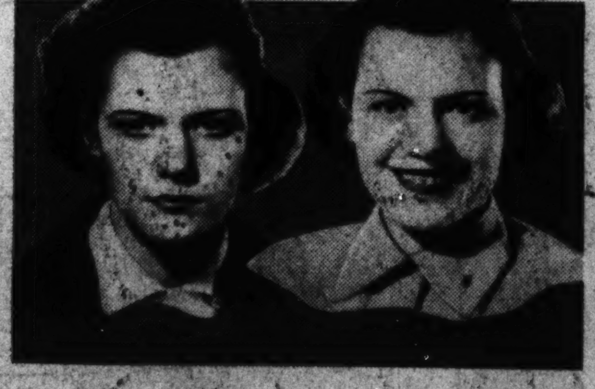
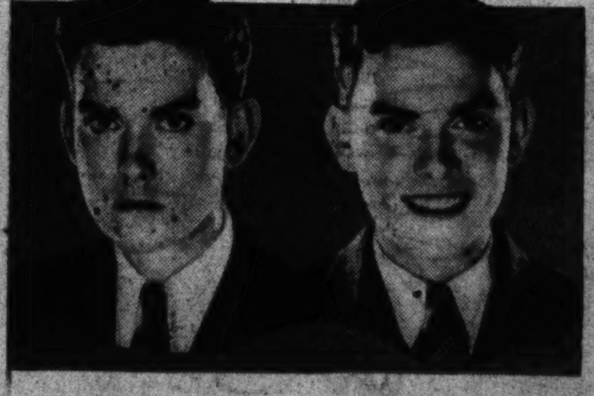
DON'T LET ADOLESCENT PIMPLES SPOIL YOUR GOOD TIMES

Read these TRUE EXPERIENCES of how Fleischmann's Yeast helps to Clear the Skin



BEFORE
Jean Dietrich, of East Orange, N. J., had pimples like these before she started to eat Fleischmann's Yeast. "My face was a perfect sight, it was so broken out," she says.

AFTER
See how yeast helped Jean's skin to clear. Pretty and happy, she says: "I ate 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast every day for 4 weeks and now my skin is nice and clear again."



BEFORE
Dick Rooney, of Brooklyn, N. Y., looked like this before he started eating 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast daily. "I was ashamed to have people see me," he says.

AFTER
Pimples no longer spoil Dick's good times. "Everybody that's got pimples sure ought to try Fleischmann's Yeast," he says. "It's swell how it chased mine away."

"STICK TO IT," says Dr. R. E. Lee, well-known physician, "and Fleischmann's Yeast will help to correct Adolescent Pimples . . ."

After the start of adolescence many young people have trouble with pimples.

At this time—from about 13 to 25, or even longer—important glands develop and final growth takes place. This causes disturbances in the entire system. The skin, especially, gets over-sensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin, and pimples break out.

Fleischmann's fresh Yeast helps to free your skin from pimples by clearing these skin irritants out of the blood.

Eat 3 cakes daily—a cake about ½ hour before each meal—plain, or in a little water. Keep this up regularly. Start now!
